PART II.

Notifications by High Court, Comptroller-General, etc.

GAZETTE OF INDIA.

NOTICE.

The 11th November 1918.

On and after 23rd November and until further notice, Parts I, IV, V and VI of the Gazette of India and the Weather and Crop Report will be published in Delhi. Parts II and III will continue to be published in Calcutta. All notifications and other matter intended for publication in those Parts should be addressed to the Publisher at Delhi and Calcutta, respectively.

Attention is invited to the following Circular Memorandum of the Government of India, Home Department, of August 1901:—

"It has been brought to the notice of this Department that matter for the Gazette of India is sometimes sent to the Press late on Friday evenings for publication in the next day's Gazette and that this involves considerable inconvenience to the Press and expense to Government. In the Circular Memorandum of this Department, No. 777-79, dated 9th February 1870, the Government of India directed that all notifications or other matter intended for insertion in the Gazette of India should be delivered at the Press not later than 2 p.m. on Friday, and that any papers sent thereafter must be certified to be extremely urgent in order to ensure their appearance in the next day's Gazette. The undersigned is directed to request that these orders may be more strictly observed in future, and that Departments will refrain from sending to the Press as extremely urgent any papers which can without harm or inconvenience be held over for the next Gazette."

J. P. HEWETT,

Secretary to the Government of India "

NOTICES.

THE PATENT OFFICE, 1, COUNCIL HOUSE STREET, CALCUTTA.

Public room, open 11 a.m. to 4 p.m.; Saturdays, 11 a.m. to 1 p.m.

1. All communications relating to applications for patents and for registration of designs under the Indian Patents and Designs Act (II of 1911), or in continuation of applications under the Inventions and Designs Act (V of 1888) must be made in English and addressed to the Controller of Patents and Designs, 1, Council House Street, Calcutta. Documents sent by post should be carefully packed and a full address given in all communications.

2. Directions for the guidance of inventors and others are given in the Patent Office Handbook (price one rupee) which contains the Indian Patents and Designs Act, 1911, the Indian Patents and Designs Rules, 1912, the Indian Patents and Designs (Temporary Rules) Act, 1915, the Indian Patents and Designs (Temporary) Rules, 1915, together with current regulations and instructions. These should be consulted before an application is made to the Controller.

3. Advice. The Patent Office cannot undertake (1) to give opinions on the interpretation of Patent Law, or on the advisability of protecting inventions and designs or on their infringement; (2) to make searches in respect of information available in the public room; (3) to recommend any particular agent; or (4) to assist in the disposal of inventions. Models are not required unless specially asked for. Drawings must be on tracing cloth and the Rules and Instructions for the preparation of drawings as given in the Handbook should be strictly followed. A provisional patent cannot be secured under the Indian Patents and Designs Act, 1911.

4. Applicants are warned that the Indian Patents and Designs Act, 1911, is in force in British India only, and patents granted under it do not extend to the United Kingdom or any of the British possessions. The International Convention for the Protection of Industrial Property does not include India. For information regarding patents in countries other than India application should be made to the patent offices in the countries concerned.

5. Fees are payable in cash and must be received in the Patent Office within the time allowed by the Acts. When cheques are offered in payment of fees, it must be clearly understood that the office cannot hold itself responsible for any delay that may occur in the collection of cash on the cheques; any cheque not payable in Calcutta is subject to commission for which due allowance should be made. In cases where it is not possible to have the fees handed in at the Patent Office, it is preferable to send them by money-order or postal order payable at Calcutta to the Controller of Patents and Designs, and to advise him that they have been so sent. Stamps will not be received in payment of fees.

6. Trade and property marks and names are not registered and medicines are not patented under the Indian Patents and Designs Act. There is no provision of Law in British India for their registration. Neither does this Act deal with pictures, photographs, etc., for which copyright is obtainable under the Indian Copyright Act, 1914.

7. Printed Specifications of applications, which have been accepted, are published within about three weeks after acceptance has been notified in the Gazette of India. These specifications can be purchased at the Patent Office at a uniform price of 8 annas per copy; and may be seen free of charge, together with other publications of the Patent Office, at the following places:—

THE GOVERNMENT OF BOMBAY

Revenue Department.

Bombay Castle, 3rd February 1919.

No. 1125(a).—The following Agreement executed on behalf of the Poona Electric Supply Company, Limited, of the one part and the Secretary of State for India in Council of the other part, under section 41 of the Land Acquisition Act, No. I of 1894, is hereby published for general information under section 42 of that Act :—

AN AGREEMENT made this 18th day of January one thousand nine hundred and nineteen BETWEEN THE POONA ELECTRIC SUPPLY COMPANY, LIMITED, a Company registered under the Indian Companies Act, 1913, and having its registered office in Bombay (hereinafter called "the Company" which expression shall unless excluded by or repugnant to the context be deemed to include the Poona Electric Supply Company, Limited and their successors and assigns) of the one part and THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA IN COUNCIL (hereinafter called "the Secretary of State" which expression shall unless excluded by or repugnant to the context be deemed to include the Secretary of State for India in Council and his successors and assigns) of the other part.

WHEREAS the Government of Bombay have under section 3 of the Indian Electricity Act, 1910, granted to Crompton's Bombay, Limited (a Company incorporated and registered under the Indian Companies Act, 1882, at Bombay) a license (hereinafter referred to as "the Poona and Kirkee Electric License, 1917") to supply electrical energy in the area at Poona and Kirkee, specified in the license, the grant of which license was notified and the terms whereof published in the notification of the Government of Bombay in the Public Works Department No. C. W.-3294, dated the 27th March 1917 at page 736 and the following pages of the Bombay Government Gazette of 29th March 1917, Part I.

AND WHEREAS in pursuance of clause 13 of the said license, Crompton's Bombay, Limited, have, by an agreement dated the 30th day of October 1916 agreed to sell the said license and all their right title interest and benefit therein to the Company.

AND WHEREAS in connection with the undertaking and business of the Company for the purpose of the construction of a power house and of residential quarters for certain of the servants of the Company (which power house and quarters are hereinafter referred to collectively as "the said works") the Company has requested the Government of Bombay to acquire under the Land Acquisition Act, 1894, (hereinafter referred to as "the said Act") for the Company certain land situated in the village of Mali within the limits of the City of Poona in the Haveli Taluka of the Poona District and more particularly described in the Schedule hereto (and hereinafter referred to as "the said land").

AND WHEREAS the Government of Bombay having caused an enquiry to be held in conformity with the provisions of section 40 of the said Act and being satisfied on the report of the result of such enquiry that the acquisition of the said land is needed for the construction of the said works of the Company and that the said works are likely to prove useful to the public have consented to the provisions of the said Act being put in force in order to acquire the said land for the purposes of the Company and have pursuant to section 41 of the said Act required the Company to enter into such agreement with the Secretary of State as is herein contained NOW THESE PRESENTS WITNESS and it is hereby agreed between and by the Company on the one hand and the Secretary of State on the other hand as follows :—

1. The Company shall pay to the Government of Bombay the entire cost as determined by the said Government of the acquisition under the provisions of the said Act of the said land including all compensation damages interest costs charges and expenses whatsoever which have been or may be incurred in respect of such acquisition and all law costs and other expenses which have been or may be incurred by the said Government in respect of or incidental to such acquisition or any litigation arising thereout and including the cost of any establishment and salary of any officer of Government whom the said Government may think it necessary to employ on special duty for the purpose of such acquisition. The monies which shall be payable by the Company aforesaid shall be paid by the Company by the initial deposit with the Collector of the sum of Rupees four thousand (Rs. 4,000) within three days after the publication in the Bombay Government Gazette of the notice under section 9 of the said Act with reference to the land to be acquired and by payment to the Collector within seven days after demand by the Collector in writing of such amount or amounts as the Collector shall from time to time estimate to be required or provided by the Company for the purpose of meeting any of the compensation damages interest costs charges or expenses hereinbefore referred to. In these presents the expression "Collector" shall mean and include the persons meant and included in such expression by the said Act.

2. On payment of the entire compensation damages interest costs charges and expenses referred to in clause 1 of these presents incidental to the acquisition of the said land, the said land shall as soon as conveniently may be after the award of the Collector is made in respect thereof and possession has been taken thereof by the Collector under the said Act be transferred at the cost in every respect of the Company by the Secretary of State so as to vest legally in the Company subject however to the provisions of clauses 4 to 9 inclusive of these presents.
3. Provided that if on the application of the Company the Government of Bombay shall direct the Collector to take possession of the said land under the provisions of section 17 of the said Act before the award of the Collector is made in respect thereof and if the Company shall pay by deposit with the Collector such sum as the Collector shall estimate to be required or provided by the Company for the purpose of meeting the entire compensation damages interest costs charges and expenses referred to in clause 1 of these presents, the Collector shall put the Company in possession of the said land as soon as may be after he has taken possession thereof under section 17 of the said Act, and thereafter when the award of the Collector has been made and as soon as may be after the amount of the entire compensation damages interest costs charges and expenses referred to in clause 1 of these presents and payable by the Company shall have been determined by the said Government, if such amount shall be in excess of the sum deposited by the Company as hereinbefore provided, the balance shall be paid by the Company to the Collector, but otherwise shall be paid by the Collector to the Company and the said land shall be transferred at the cost in every respect of the Company by the Secretary of State so as to vest legally in the Company subject however to the provisions of clauses 4 to 9 of these presents.
4. The said (acquired) land when transferred to and vested in the Company shall be held by the Company as their property to be used for the purposes of their undertaking and business subject nevertheless to the payment of the rents assessments and outgoings hereinafter set out, and the Company shall pay without any deduction to the said Government :—
 - (a) In respect of such of the said land as at the date of acquisition thereof was subject to survey assessment—an annual rent equivalent to the amount of the survey assessment thereon at the date of the said acquisition.
 - (b) In respect of such of the said land as at the date of acquisition thereof was inam land—an annual rent equivalent to the amount of jodi paid in respect thereof at the date of the said acquisition.

The Company shall also pay Local Fund Cess in respect of all of the said land for the time being held used or required for the purposes of the Company calculated as if such land were fully assessed land under the survey assessment for the time being prevailing in the Haveli Taluka.

During the period that the said land shall be held used or required by the Company for the purposes of their undertaking and business the said annual rents shall be subject to revision by the said Government from time to time in respect of any portion of the said land which may for the time being be occupied as a site for a bungalow not immediately tenanted by an employee or person on the staff of the Company and the said annual rents shall also be subject to revision by the said Government from time to time in respect of any portion of the said land whenever the survey assessment of the Haveli Taluka shall be revised and on such revision the said annual rents may be increased rateably in the same portion as such survey assessment shall be increased and after receipt of notice in writing signed by the Collector stating the amount of any such revised rents payable in respect of the said acquired land or any part thereof the Company shall pay thenceforth without any objection to the said Government until further and subsequent revision the full amount of such revised rents without any deduction therefrom.

5. If at any time any part of the said land not actually utilised or intended to be utilised as a site for any of the said works shall in the opinion of the said Government be necessary to be possessed by the said Government for purposes of revenue administration or for purposes connected with public health safety or necessity (of which matters the said Government shall be the sole judge) the Company on being thereunto required by the said Government shall transfer to the Secretary of State such part of the said land as the said Government shall specify to be necessary for any of the purposes aforesaid and in consideration of such transfer the Secretary of State shall pay to the Company a sum equal to the amount of the compensation awarded under the said Act and paid by the Company in respect of the land the subject of the transfer upon the acquisition thereof for the Company including the amount awarded in respect thereof under Section 23 (2) of the said Act.

6. The construction of the said works on the said land shall be completed by the Company before the first day of April 1919 or within such further time as the said Government shall allow. The said works shall be executed and maintained by the Company under and in accordance with the Poona and Kirkee Electric License, 1917, and in accordance with the provisions of the Indian Electricity Act, 1910, and the Rules thereunder or any amendments or modifications thereof respectively.
7. The Company shall at all times during the period of construction referred to in clause 6 of these presents permit the said Government or any Officer deputed by the said Government in that behalf to inspect the said works of the Company upon the said land whether in course of construction or otherwise.
8. The public shall be entitled to purchase electric energy from the Company subject to the conditions prescribed in the Poona and Kirkee Electric License, 1917, and the provisions of the Indian Electricity Act, 1910, and the Rules thereunder or any amendments or modifications thereof respectively.
9. All the costs and expenses of and incidental to the preparation and execution of this agreement (including stamp duty and the costs of registration if required by the said Government) shall be paid by the Company.

IN WITNESS whereof the Common seal of THE POONA ELECTRIC SUPPLY COMPANY, LIMITED, has been hereunto affixed in the presence of two Directors and the Agents of the Company and by direction of HIS EXCELLENCY THE HONOURABLE THE GOVERNOR OF BOMBAY IN COUNCIL one of the Secretaries to the said Government has for and on behalf of the Secretary of State for India in Council hereunto set his hand and seal the day and year first above written.

The price of rice advanced by 59 per cent, the rise in Bengal being 69 per cent, in Bihar and Orissa 75 per cent, in the Madras Presidency 50 per cent, and in Burma 42 per cent. Among the minor rice producing provinces, there was an increase of 95 per cent in Assam, 69 per cent in the Punjab, and 68 per cent in the North-West Frontier Province. Wheat prices rose 41 per cent in India; in the great wheat producing areas, the Punjab showed an increase of 33 per cent, the United Provinces 47 per cent, and the Central Provinces and Berar 41 per cent. The rise in Burma was 56 per cent, in the Bombay Presidency 52 per cent, and in Bihar and Orissa 48 per cent. Barley prices increased by 43 per cent (unweighted average), the weighted average showing a rise of 71 per cent. The price in the United Provinces rose 85 per cent and in Bihar and Orissa 73 per cent. The price of jawar advanced by 72 per cent, the noteworthy increases being 106 per cent in the North-West Frontier Province, 104 per cent in the Central Provinces and Berar, 100 per cent in Bihar and Orissa, 81 per cent in the Bombay Presidency, and 75 per cent in the United Provinces. The average price of bajra in India rose 91 per cent; the increase of 115 per cent both in the Bombay Presidency and the North-West Frontier Province and of 100 per cent in Delhi is noticeable. Maize prices increased by 54 per cent (unweighted average). The weighted average showed a rise of 87 per cent. In Bihar and Orissa maize advanced by 135 per cent, in the United Provinces by 102 per cent, and in Delhi by 70 per cent. The price of gram was 57 per cent dearer than in the preceding year; in Bihar and Orissa it rose 102 per cent, in the United Provinces 86 per cent, and in the Bombay Presidency 77 per cent. The average price of arhar dal increased by 72 per cent. The price in Delhi rose 145 per cent and in the United Provinces 113 per cent. In Bengal, Bihar and Orissa, and the Central Provinces and Berar, the price of arhar dal was double the rate for the previous year. The price of ghi and raw sugar (gur) in India advanced by 27 per cent each. There was a rise of 62 per cent both in the price of ghi in the Bombay Presidency and of gur in the Punjab. The average price of salt declined by 13 per cent in India; the noticeable decreases being 40 per cent in Delhi, 38 per cent in the United Provinces, and 27 per cent in Bihar and Orissa. On the other hand there was a rise of 30 per cent in the North-West Frontier Province and of 15 per cent in the Punjab.

2. Compared with the preceding fortnight, the prices of cereals and pulses in India at the end of January, 1919, showed a rise of 2 per cent. The price of wheat advanced by 1 per cent, but that of rice fell by 2 per cent. The price of jawar increased by 7 per cent, of gram and arhar dal by 6 per cent each, and of maize by 3 per cent. Barley prices recorded no fluctuation, but bajra declined by about 5 per cent. There was a slight rise (1 per cent) in the price of ghi and a fall (2 per cent) in raw sugar. Salt was unchanged.

FOREIGN SEA-BORNE TRADE DURING JANUARY, 1919.

REVIEW of the SEA-BORNE TRADE of BRITISH INDIA for the month of JANUARY, 1919, and for the ten months ended January, 1919.

FOREIGN COMMERCE.

FOREIGN SEA-BORNE TRADE DURING JANUARY, 1919.

The trade returns of British India for January, 1919, as compared with those of its immediate predecessor, showed increases in the import and export trade. The total imports of merchandise in January, 1919, were valued at R17,94 lakhs as against R13,20 lakhs in the preceding month, and the value of the exports was R23,32 lakhs as against R16,21 lakhs, and of the re-exports R1,47 lakhs as against R1,45 lakhs. Imports increased by 36 per cent, exports by 44 per cent, and re-exports by 1 per cent. As compared with January, 1918, imports showed an increase of 17 per cent, exports of 6 per cent, and re-exports of 42 per cent. A review of the trade of the ten months ended January, 1919, will be found on page 7.

The most interesting features of the month, as compared with the corresponding month of the previous year, were (1) the considerable decrease in the exports of wheat, barley, pulse, tea, raw cotton, raw wool and jute bags and cloth, and (2) an increase in the shipments of raw and tanned hides and skins and linseed.

The quantity of wheat shipped in January, 1919, was only 1,400 tons as against 25,300 tons in January, 1918. The shipments were made mainly to the Bahrein Islands, the Persian Gulf ports of Asiatic Turkey, Persia, Arabia, and Hongkong. The exports of raw jute and rice, not in the husk, also decreased as compared with the previous year. In the import trade, as compared with January, 1918, there were increases in the imports of cotton twist and yarn, sugar, 16 D. S. and above, salt, steel bars and channel, and iron or steel sheets and plates, while there were noticeable decreases in the imports of cotton piecegoods, kerosene oil, and matches. Under machinery and millwork, the value of cotton mill machinery almost doubled from nearly R16 lakhs in January, 1918, to R30 lakhs in January, 1919, while jute mill machinery increased from R7 lakhs to R11 lakhs.

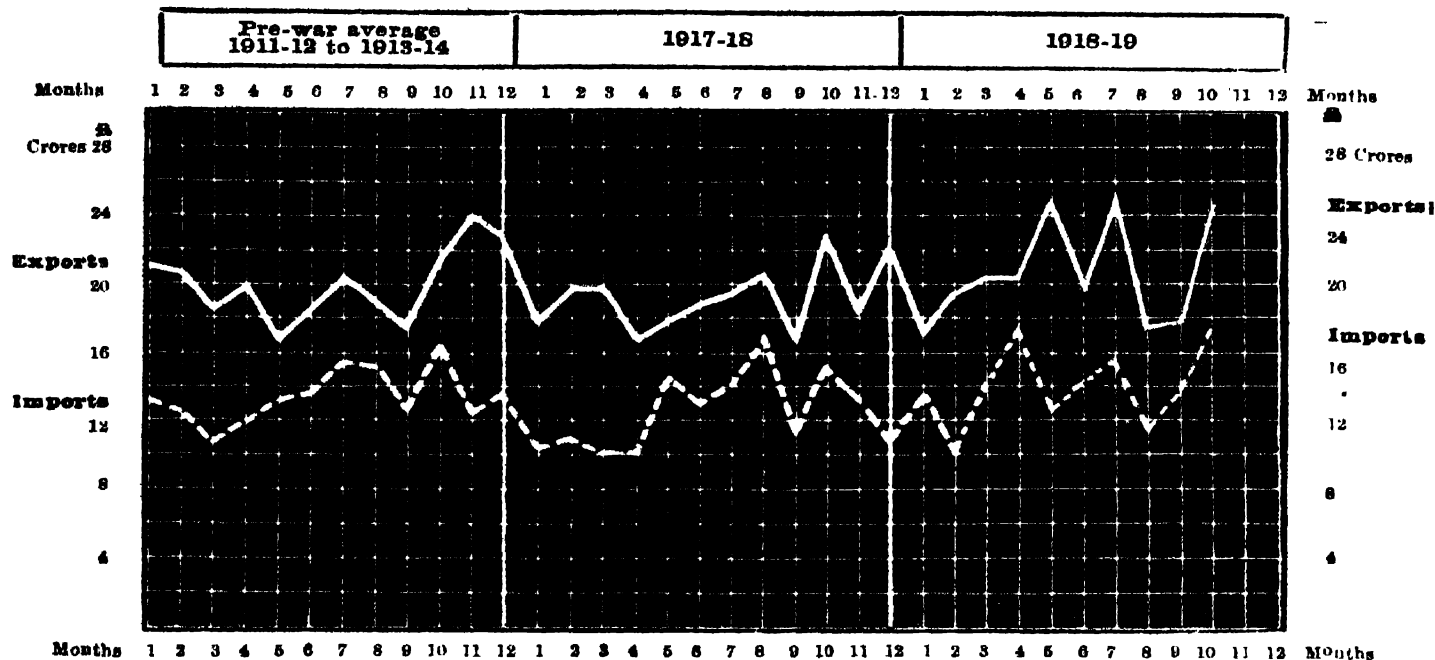

The following statement shows the monthly imports and exports of merchandise during October, 1918, to January, 1919, as compared with the corresponding months of the preceding year :—

TRADE BY PROVINCES.

The total imports and exports, including re-exports, of private merchandise into and from the several maritime provinces during the month of January, 1919, as compared with those of December, 1918, are stated below :—

	IMPORTS		EXPORTS, INCLUDING RE-EXPORTS
	December, 1918	January, 1919	December, 1918	January, 1919
	₹ (lakhs)	₹ (lakhs)	₹ (lakhs)	₹ (lakhs)
Bengal	4.85	7.83	7.39	8.28
Bombay	6.03	7.86	5.90	9.50
Sind	93	37	1.49	1.41

Burma	80	85	1.45	2.46
Total	13.20	17.94	17.66	24.79

Under imports, Bengal showed an increase of 50 per cent, Bombay of 30 per cent, Madras of 84 per cent, and Burma of 6 per cent, while Sind showed a decrease of 6 per cent. Under exports, Bengal showed an increase of 12 per cent, Burma of 70 per cent, Bombay of 61 per cent, Madras of 120 per cent, but Sind showed a decrease of 6 per cent. These comparisons are with the preceding month (December, 1918).

BALANCE OF TRADE.

The following table takes into account the imports and exports of merchandise on private account only :—

In the ten months ended January, 1919, the excess of exports over imports of private merchandise was ₹65.57 lakhs, as against ₹64.37 lakhs in the corresponding period of 1917-18 and ₹45.85 lakhs in the same period of 1913-14. As the publication of treasure figures has been temporarily discontinued, it is not possible to give here the net (private) exports from April to January, nor the net balance of trade in the same period. It may, however, be of interest to note that the net (private) exports were higher than those of 1917-18, but slightly below those of 1916-17. The balance of trade, so far as shown by the statistics of merchandise, treasure, Council Bills, and Enfaced Rupee paper in the ten months ended January, 1919, was in favour of India, while in the corresponding period of 1917-18 it was against India. In the same period of 1916-17 the balance was in favour of India.

The amount of Council Bills and Telegraphic Transfers paid in India in the ten months ended January, 1919, was ₹30.91 lakhs, of which ₹21.52 lakhs were paid through the Paper Currency Reserve and ₹9.39 lakhs through the Treasuries; but Reverse Council Bills were sold to the extent of ₹4.90 lakhs during the period, the net imports of funds by Council Bills thus amounting to Rs26.01 lakhs. In the ten months ended January, 1918, the amount was Rs44.00 lakhs, of which Rs2.14 lakhs were paid through the Gold Standard Reserve, Rs12.99 lakhs through the Paper Currency Reserve, and Rs28.87 lakhs through the Treasuries. In the ten months ended January, 1917, the amount of Council Bills paid was about Rs37.52 lakhs. As regards Enfaced Rupee paper, Rs30½ lakhs represented the amount of paper enfaced to London and Rs24 lakhs the amount re-transferred from London in the ten months, April to January, 1919, while in the corresponding period of 1917-18, about Rs12 lakhs represented the amount of paper enfaced to London and about Rs1 lakhs the amount re-transferred from London.

The customs duty figures are an index to the volume of the import trade only, since under exports jute, rice, and tea only are subject to duty. In the ten months ended January, 1919, the import duties increased to Rs. 10,54 lakhs from nearly Rs. 10,05 lakhs in the same period of 1917-18, and the export duties rose to Rs. 3,12 lakhs from Rs. 2,58 lakhs. The grand total of gross Indian sea and land customs revenue (excluding salt revenue) in the ten months, April to January, 1918-19, amounted to over Rs. 15,41 lakhs, as compared with over Rs. 13,59 lakhs in the same period of last year.

SHIPPING.

The following table shows the number and tonnage (net register tonnage) of vessels which entered and cleared with cargoes at ports in British India during January, 1919, as compared with December, 1918, and January, 1918 and 1914:—

Entered with cargoes.

January, 1914 (pre-war month)	237	652,836	143	18,052	380	665,918

The total tonnage entered and cleared with cargoes in January, 1919, as compared with that in the preceding month (December, 1918) and in the corresponding month of 1914 and 1918, is shown in the last column of the table above. In the month of January, 1919, there were 269 arrivals* and 468 sailings† with cargoes, in and from India. As regards tonnage, if a comparison be made with January, 1914, the corresponding pre-war month, it will be seen that there was a decrease in the tonnage of vessels cleared with cargoes of 213,519 tons or 37 per cent. The decrease in the entries (with cargoes) amounted to 272,471 tons or 44 per cent..

The shipping clearances with cargoes in the foreign trade from the ports of British India in the ten months, April to January, 1918-19, as compared with the corresponding period of 1913-14, i.e., before the war broke out, were as follows:—

	TONNAGE (NET REGISTER TONNAGE) CLEARANCES IN THE TEN MONTHS, APRIL TO JANUARY.
	1913-14 (Pre-war period)..	1918-19
British ships (including British Indian)	5,150,734	2,823,540
Foreign ships	1,559,247	1,333,510
TOTAL	6,709,981	4,157,050

In 1918-19, as against 1913-14, the total tonnage clearances with cargoes declined 38 per cent. In 1913-14 the British (including British Indian) tonnage was 77 per cent and foreign tonnage 23 per cent of the total, while in 1918-19 the British (including British Indian) tonnage was 68 per cent and foreign tonnage 32 per cent.

* The details were as follows:—Bengal 85, Bombay 74, Sind 54, Madras 68, and Burma 38.

RAILWAY STATISTICS.

Railway statistics, like the import and export statistics above, are a valuable index to the general movement of trade throughout the country, and show that the earnings from 1st April, 1918, to 1st February, 1919, were R 70,43 lakhs, as against R 63,14 lakhs in the corresponding period of 1917-18, or an increase of R 7,29 lakhs.

TRADE OF ADEN IN DECEMBER, 1918.

The grand total value of the imports and exports of merchandise, by sea, into and from the port of Aden amounted to R92 lakhs in the month of December, 1918, and R10,18 lakhs in the nine months, April to December, 1918. The value of the principal articles of import and export was as follows:—

SHIPPING AT THE PORT OF ADEN IN DECEMBER, 1918.

In December, 1918, 52 steamers with an aggregate tonnage of 102,894 entered at the port of Aden, while 50 steamers with 104,376 tons cleared from the port, and 64 sailing vessels (country craft) with 2,109 tons entered and 33 vessels with 1,025 tons cleared. These figures exclude vessels in ballast and Government vessels.

DEPARTMENT OF STATISTICS, INDIA

February 21, 1919

G. FINDLAY SHIRRAS,

Director of Statistics.

DEPARTMENT OF STATISTICS, INDIA

CALCUTTA, FEBRUARY 18, 1919

Final General Memorandum on the SUGARCANE Crop of 1918-19.

THIS memorandum is based on reports received from provinces, which contain 99·1 per cent of the total area under sugarcane in British India.

The total area sown is estimated at 2,820,000 acres as against 2,809,000 acres, the final figure of last year, or an increase of 0·4 per cent. The total yield of raw sugar (gur) is estimated at 2,337,000 tons as against 3,311,000 tons last year, or a decrease of 29 per cent.

The season was anything but favourable to the crop, owing to deficient rainfall, especially in Northern India, and the yield is generally below normal. In parts of the United Provinces, the Punjab, and Bombay a considerable portion of the crop has, owing to the scarcity of fodder, been fed to cattle. The condition of the crop is reported to be fair to good in Bihar and Orissa, and the North-West Frontier Province.

Detailed figures for each province are noted below :—

Provinces	Yield (1,000 tons)		Area (1,000 acres)		Yield per acre (lbs)
	1918-19	1917-18	1918-19	1917-18	1918-19	1917-18
United Provinces	967	1,004	1,547	1,489	1,429	2,413
Punjab	236	437	467	503	1,451	1,946

Bombay and Sind (b)	323	360	112	130	4,460	6,203
Assam	26	30	32	34	1,820	1,978
North-West Frontier Province	42	32	30	31	3,613	2,312
Central Provinces and Berar	27	31	28	25	2,160	2,778
Total	2,337	3,311	2,820	2,809	1,856	2,640

In addition to the areas for which particulars are given above, the crop is grown on a very small scale in certain other tracts in British India, the average area of which for the last five years has been some 22,000 acres with an estimated production of 18,000 tons.

The provincial reports are summarised below :—

United Provinces (53 per cent of the total area under sugarcane in British India).—The total area sown amounts to 1,547,000 acres as against 1,489,000 acres last year, or an increase of 4 per cent. The total yield of gur is estimated at 987,000 tons, which is 38 per cent below the estimate of last year. There was a small increase in area in most districts in the Agra province, but some decrease in Oudh. The crop was adversely affected by deficient rainfall throughout the provinces, and in many places, where the cane was not worth crushing, it has been fed to cattle. For the province, as a whole, the average outturn is estimated at 55 per cent of the normal, as against 95 per cent last year.

Punjab (15·6 per cent of the total area under sugarcane in British India).—The total area is finally returned at 457,000 acres, which is 9 per cent below last year's area. The decrease is due to the unfavourable season at sowing time owing to the late arrival of winter rains. The total outturn of gur is estimated at 296,000 tons, as against 437,000 tons last year, or a decrease of 32 per cent.

The season was not favourable owing to deficient rainfall, and consequently the yield is generally below normal. Further, owing to the scarcity of fodder, a considerable portion of the crop has been fed to cattle.

Bihar and Orissa (11 per cent of the total area under sugarcane in British India).—The total area planted is estimated at 274,000 acres, as against 263,000 acres last year, or an increase of 4 per cent. The total yield is estimated at 271,000 tons, which is 6 per cent less than the estimate of last year. The weather conditions were favourable in the early part of the season, but the absence of rain since the middle of September has affected the crop in several districts. The condition of the crop is reported to be generally fair to good. According to the estimates of District Officers, the average outturn for the province works out to 86 per cent of the normal, but the provincial Director is of opinion that the effect of the early cessation of rain has been too heavily discounted in parts of north Bihar, and that the outturn will probably approximate to 90 per cent of the normal, and on this basis the yield stated above has been estimated.

Bengal (9·2 per cent of the total area under sugarcane in British India).—The total area is estimated at 219,000 acres, which is 6 per cent above that of last year. The total yield is estimated at 223,000 tons, which is 7 per cent less than last year's yield. The crop was planted under favourable conditions. In Eastern Bengal a good deal of damage was done to the standing crop by floods in August and September, while the crop in western districts suffered severely from the drought, which has prevailed since August. The season has thus, on the whole, not been a favourable one for sugarcane.

The total quantity of raw sugar (gur) likely to be obtained from the juice of date and palmyra palm is estimated at 98,000 tons, as against 101,000 tons last year. The total quantity of gur in the province from all sources (cane, date, and palmyra palm) is estimated at 321,000 tons this year, as against 342,000 tons last year, or a decrease of 6 per cent.

Madras (3·8 per cent of the total area under sugarcane in British India).—The total area planted up to the end of December is estimated at 115,000 acres, which is 9 per cent below last year's area. The total yield is estimated at 242,000 tons, as against 287,000 tons last year, or a decrease of 16 per cent. The decrease in area is general and is due to the comparatively low prices of jaggery at the sowing time, while in the centre and south cotton has also to some extent replaced sugarcane. The yields are poor in the Deccan, and below the average elsewhere on account of the long break in the south-west monsoon, and the consequent failure of irrigation. The average yield is estimated at 93 per cent of the normal.

Bombay and Sind (2·8 per cent of the total area under sugarcane in British India).—The total area is estimated at 112,000 acres (37,000 acres being in the Indian States), which is 14 per cent below the estimate of last year. The total yield is estimated at 223,000 tons, as against 360,000 tons last year, or a decrease of 38 per cent. The season has been very unfavourable. The crop has suffered almost everywhere from drought, and owing to insufficiency of water in wells and canals irrigation has been restricted in many places. The crop is being cut before it is properly matured, on account of the insufficiency of water, and is being extensively fed to cattle owing to scarcity of fodder in many parts of the Deccan, and eastern taluks of the Karnatak, although financially this does not entail any loss to the cultivators owing to higher prices realised for the crop sold as fodder. The Provincial Director believes that the yield stated above is only nominal for a considerable portion of the crop is being fed to cattle and some cane is also being largely cut for raw eating in Gujarat and the Karnatak, and that the actual outturn is not likely to be more than half, and probably one-third of it will be nearer the mark.

Assam (1.5 per cent of the total area under sugarcane in British India).—The total area is estimated at 32,000 acres as against 34,000 acres last year. The total yield is estimated at 26,000 tons, which is 13 per cent below the estimate of last year. The weather was not generally favourable owing to drought at the early and latter part of the season. The period between June and September was very rainy, and floods damaged the crop in some districts. The average outturn for the province is estimated at 91 per cent of the normal, as against 97 per cent last year.

North-West Frontier Province (1.3 per cent of the total area under sugarcane in British India).—The total area is estimated at 36,000 acres, which is 16 per cent above last year's area. The total yield is estimated at 42,000 tons, which is 31 per cent more than the estimate of last year. The increase in area is practically confined to the Peshawar district, and is attributed to the high prices obtained for sugar. The yield is reported to be good in Peshawar, and average elsewhere.

Central Provinces and Berar (0.9 per cent of the total area under sugarcane in British India).—The total area sown amounts to 28,000 acres (2,000 acres being in Berar), which is 12 per cent higher than last year's area. The total yield is estimated at 27,000 tons (2,000 tons being in Berar), which is 13 per cent below the estimate of last year. The increase in area is attributed partly to favourable seasonal conditions at sowing time, and partly to the high prices fetched by coarse sugar (gur). From the second week of September till the third week of November there was practically a drought, which combined with a shortage of water supply from wells and tanks affected the crop somewhat adversely, and reduced the outturn in a few districts.

The average outturn is estimated at 88 per cent of the normal, as against 113 per cent last year.

Imports.—The following figures show the amount of sugar imported by sea from the different foreign countries in the last three official years (April to March):—

Sugarcane crop in foreign countries.—From the latest information published by the International Institute of Agriculture, Rome, it appears that the area under cane in the United States of America in 1918 is estimated at 545,000 acres. The yield of the Louisiana crop in 1918 is estimated at 238,000 tons (raw sugar), which is about 15 per cent above that of 1917.

From unofficial sources it appears that the weather conditions in Louisiana are excellent, although there is a shortage of labour. More rain is wanted for the Hawaiian crop. The world supply is almost the same as in the previous year. The following are the unofficial estimates of the more important foreign producing countries in 1918-19, the figures in brackets are the production figures for 1917-18 :—Cuba 3,600,000 tons (3,446,000); Java 1,700,000 tons (1,791,000); Hawaiian islands 550,000 tons (501,000); Porto Rico 410,000 tons (405,000); Mauritius 255,000 tons (226,000); Formosa and Japan 440,000 tons (400,000); Australia 256,000 tons (341,000); Argentine 100,000 tons (88,000); Brazil 302,000 tons (149,000); Louisiana 244,000 tons (217,000); Mexico 40,000 tons (40,000); Natal 130,000 tons (115,000); Egypt 100,000 tons (100,000); and Peru 250,000 tons (265,000).

DEPARTMENT OF STATISTICS, INDIA.

CALCUTTA, FEBRUARY 20, 1919.

Supplementary Memorandum on the WHEAT Crop of 1918-19 (for the period ending 15th February, 1919).

Since the publication of the first wheat forecast on January 31, 1919, revised estimates of area have been received from the Central Provinces and Berar, Bihar and Orissa, the North-West Frontier Province, Bengal, and Ajmer-Merwara. An estimate of area has also been received from the Mewar State in Rajputana for which a provisional estimate was made in the first forecast. The total revised area for All-India now stands at 23,403,000 acres, as against 23,472,000 acres reported in the first forecast.

The rains that fell at the end of January, and especially those falling recently have greatly improved the prospects of the crop, the present condition of which is generally fair to good except in Bombay and Sind, where the outlook is far from satisfactory. Hail to some extent has damaged the crop in several districts of the Central Provinces and Berar. More rain is now wanted in parts of the Punjab and the North-West Frontier Province.

The details for the provinces are given below :—

The provincial reports are summarised below :—

Punjab.—There has been a slight increase in area as compared with that reported in the first forecast. Moderate to heavy rain received at the end of January proved most useful to standing crop. The condition and prospects of the irrigated crop are average to good, while those of the unirrigated are average or below it. The crop is free from rust. More rain is urgently wanted in parts of the south-east and west.

United Provinces.—No change has been reported in the estimate of area sown. Rain towards the end of January has greatly improved the situation. The crop is promising on both irrigated and unirrigated areas. Part of the crop was sown late owing to influenza, and much depends on the absence of early hot winds.

Central Provinces and Berar.—The area sown in the British districts is now estimated at 2,951,000 acres as against 3,016,000 acres reported in the first forecast—a decrease of 65,000 acres. The area in the States of Khairagarh and Nandgaon has been raised by 2,000 acres to 92,000 acres. The combined area comes to 3,043,000 acres, as against 3,106,000 acres reported in the first forecast. Since the issue of the January forecast, the weather has been generally cool and cloudy. Moderate to heavy rain was received all over the provinces, and was accompanied by hail in several districts, which damaged the crop in places. The rainfall greatly benefited the late-sown variety. An opportune break seems to have now set in, and the present condition and prospects of the crop are generally good. In the Feudatory States the present prospects are good, although hail damaged the crop in places.

Bombay and Sind.—There is likely to be a slight increase in area under wheat in parts of Belgaum and Dharwar, and none elsewhere in the Presidency, or in Sind. In the Presidency a fairly good crop is expected in parts of the Karnatak. Elsewhere the unirrigated crop is suffering from want of moisture and the irrigated from insufficient water supply. The outlook is not generally satisfactory. In Sind the condition of the crop in the canal area is not good owing to want of irrigation water, and elsewhere on account of insufficient moisture. The outturn will probably be much below normal.

Bihar and Orissa.—The area under wheat is now estimated to be 908,000 acres as against 924,000 acres reported in the first forecast, a decrease of 16,000 acres. Prospects have much improved by recent rains.

North-West Frontier Province.—The total area sown is now estimated at 839,000 acres, as against 842,000 acres reported in the first forecast, a decrease of 3,000 acres. The condition of standing crop is generally average at present throughout the province, except in Dera Ismail Khan, where it is below average. The crop has been greatly benefited by the rains in January, but more rain is still wanted. Farther improvement is anticipated from the rain which fell on the 15th.

Bengal.—The area now reported is 111,000 acres, as against 110,000 acres, estimated in the first forecast. The increase is confined to the Murshidabad district. Recent rain has improved prospects. The present condition of the crop is generally fair.

Delhi.—No change has been reported in the estimate of area sown. The condition of the irrigated crop is fair, and that of unirrigated poor. The recent rains, which were accompanied by hailstorms, did no damage.

Ajmer-Merwara.—The area so far sown amounts to 9,000 acres, as against 4,000 acres reported in the first forecast. The present condition of the crop is satisfactory. Rainfall in January benefited the crop to a certain extent.

Wheat in Foreign Countries.—From the latest information published by the International Institute of Agriculture, Rome, it appears that the area sown with the 1918-19 crop in the Argentine is estimated at 16,961,000 acres, which is 5 per cent below the final figure of 1917-18. In Australia the estimates for 1918-19 are 8,645,000 acres and 2,161,000 tons, which are 11 per cent and 30 per cent, respectively, below the final estimates for 1917-18. The estimates of the 1918 crop in the principal countries in the Northern Hemisphere, as compared with the final figures for 1917, are shown in the tabular statement below:

CALCUTTA, FEBRUARY 21, 1919

Final General Memorandum on the RICE crop of 1918-19

This memorandum is based upon reports received from provinces, which contain 99 per cent of the total area under rice in British India. The statistics of acreage, outturn, etc., refer to all rice crops, both early and late, in all the reporting provinces.

The total area reported is 75,864,000 acres as compared with 80,141,000 acres, the revised final area of last year. The present figure, therefore, shows a decrease of 5 per cent as compared with the area of 1917-18. The total yield is estimated at 23,822,000 tons of cleaned rice, as against 36,249,000 tons, the finally revised estimate of last year, or a decrease of 34 per cent. The season has been unfavourable owing mainly to scanty rains, especially in Bihar and Orissa, Madras, and the United Provinces.

The average yield per acre, it may be noted, works out to 703 lbs, as against 1,013 lbs in 1917-18, 973 lbs in 1916-17, 941 lbs in 1915-16, 796 lbs in 1914-15, 855 lbs in 1913-14, 891 lbs in 1912-13, 1,041 lbs in 1911-12, and 1,077 lbs in 1910-11.

In addition to the areas for which particulars are given above, rice is grown in certain other tracts* in British India, and the average area so grown for the five years ending 1916-17 has been some 870,000 acres with an estimated yield of 273,000 tons. This outturn is excluded from the grand total 23,822,000 tons since recent estimates have not been received for these areas.

The provincial reports are summarised below:—

Bengal (26.3 per cent of the total area under rice in British India).—The total area under winter rice is reported to be 15,896,000 acres, which is 2 per cent above last year's area. The total yield is estimated at 5,255,000 tons, as against 6,839,000 tons reported last year, or a decrease of 23 per cent. The season opened well, but, owing to the failure of the rains after September, ended badly. During the period of harvesting covered by this forecast, the weather conditions have been favourable for field operations. The average outturn for the province is estimated at 72 per cent of the normal, as against a normal crop last year.

If the figures for the summer and autumn crops given in the second forecast, issued in December last, and reproduced in the appended table be added, the total area and yield of all kinds of rice in Bengal amount to 21,333,000 acres and 6,901,000 tons, as against 20,966,000 acres and 8,648,000 tons last year.

Bihar and Orissa (20.5 per cent of the total area under rice in British India).—The total area under winter rice is estimated at 11,388,000 acres, which is 5 per cent less than the area of last year. The total yield is estimated at 3,765,000 tons, which is 50 per cent below last year's yield. The abrupt close of the monsoon in mid-September following on earlier deficiencies and irregularities in July gravely prejudiced the winter rice crop, which was planted late and depended this year entirely on good and late rain. The outturn was therefore severely reduced on high lands and unirrigated areas throughout the province, especially in the Patna and Chota Nagpur divisions and in that portion of the Bhagalpur division, lying south of the river. The light rainfall received at the end of October did very little good to the crops except in Puri and north of the river in a belt near the frontier. According to the estimates of the District Officers the average outturn for the province works out to 53 per cent of the normal, but the provincial Director considers this an underestimate, and is of opinion that the outturn will not exceed 60 per cent of the normal, and on this basis the yield stated above has been based.

Adding to the above figures those for the summer and autumn crops, given in the second forecast issued in December last and reproduced in the appended table, the total area and yield of all kinds of rice in the province amount to 15,160,000 acres and 4,807,000 tons, as against 15,800,000 acres and 8,991,000 tons last year.

Madras (14·1 per cent of the total area under rice in British India).—The total area is estimated at 9,711,000 acres, which is 17 per cent below the area of previous year. The total yield is estimated at 3,876,000 tons, as against 6,002,000 tons, the final estimate of last year, or a decrease of 35 per cent. Both the area and yield are the smallest on record since complete statistics were first tabulated in 1907-08. The season has in fact been entirely abnormal, and it is only in the tracts protected by major irrigation works, and in the tracts along the east coast which received the full benefit of the north-east monsoon, that anything like a normal area has been sown. The falling off in area is greatest in the Deccan and Central districts. Conditions are better in the south, and Rannad and Tinnevely actually show some increase. The vagaries of the season have seriously affected yield. The break in the south-west monsoon seriously damaged the crop in most parts of Vizagapatam and in the upland parts of Godavari and Kistna, and so delayed transplantations in Tanjore and many other tracts that the raiyats were compelled to plant out very old seedlings or to raise further seed beds and plant out the crop from one to two months later than usual. For want of sufficient seed of short duration varieties, the usual long duration varieties had to be sown so late in the year that these cannot mature properly before the hot weather. The season, on the other hand, favoured the broadcast crops in the Carnatic and Central districts and the large second crop in the west coast which is giving a good yield. Conditions in the extreme south are also favourable to good yields.

Burma (13·3 per cent of the total area under rice in British India).—The total area is estimated at 10,572,000 acres, which is 1 per cent below last year's area. The total yield is estimated at 4,200,000 tons as against 4,750,000 tons, estimated last year, or a decrease of about 12 per cent. In Lower Burma the harvesting of the crop has been practically completed and threshing and winnowing are well advanced. Owing to the deficiency of ripening showers, the crop is reported to be threshing out light in almost all districts. Only two districts (Akyab and Tharrawady) report a normal yield, while others estimate yields varying from 69 to 98 per cent. The average outturn for the whole province is now estimated at 88 per cent of the normal, as against 95 per cent last year. The surplus available for export is now estimated at 2,250,000 tons of cargo rice, equivalent to 1,900,000 tons of cleaned rice.

United Provinces (8·3 per cent of the total area under rice in British India).—The total area under both early (autumn) and late (winter) crops is now reported to be 6,644,000 acres, which is 11 per cent below last year's area. The total yield is estimated at 1,419,000 tons, which is 47 per cent below the yield of last year. The crop was adversely affected by deficient rainfall. The early rice was fair in the Gorakhpur and Benares divisions, but withered in parts of Rohilkhand and Oudh, and its outturn is estimated at 60 per cent of the normal. The late rice suffered severely from the drought in September, and was a partial failure where irrigation was not available. Its outturn is estimated at 40 per cent of the normal. Taking both crops together the average outturn for the province is estimated at 55 per cent of the normal.

Adding to the above figures, those for the hot weather crop, given in the second forecast issued in December last, the total area and yield of all kinds of rice in the province amount to 6,669,000 acres and 1,431,000 tons, as against 7,485,000 acres and 2,671,000 tons last year.

Central Provinces and Berar (6·4 per cent of the total area under rice in British India).—As reported in December last, the total area is estimated at 5,231,000 acres, as against 5,226,000 acres last year. The total yield is estimated at 658,000 tons, which is 60 per cent below last year's yield. The drought prevailing from the second week of September to the third week of November seriously damaged the crop in several districts.

Assam (6 per cent of the total area under rice in British India).—The total area under winter rice is estimated at 3,342,000 acres, which is the same as the area of last year. The total yield is estimated at 1,023,000 tons, which is 37 per cent less than the yield of last year. The season, on the whole, opened favourably. It was, however, followed by abnormal rains and high floods from June to September, and also by drought from October to December, both of which adversely affected the transplanting and growth of the winter rice. Insects damaged the crop in several districts. The average outturn for the province is estimated at 72 per cent of the normal, as against 114 per cent last year.

If the figures for the summer and autumn crops given in the second forecast and reproduced in the appended table, are added to the above estimates, the total area and yield of all kinds of rice in Assam amount to 4,239,000 acres and 1,256,000 tons, as against 4,428,000 acres and 1,956,000 tons last year.

Bombay (2·3 per cent of the total area under rice in British India).—The area and yield of late (spring or rabi) rice are estimated at 10,000 acres and 3,000 tons, as against 25,000 acres and 14,000 tons last year. The crop is assisted by irrigation, but owing to deficiency of water supply both the area and yield were greatly affected.

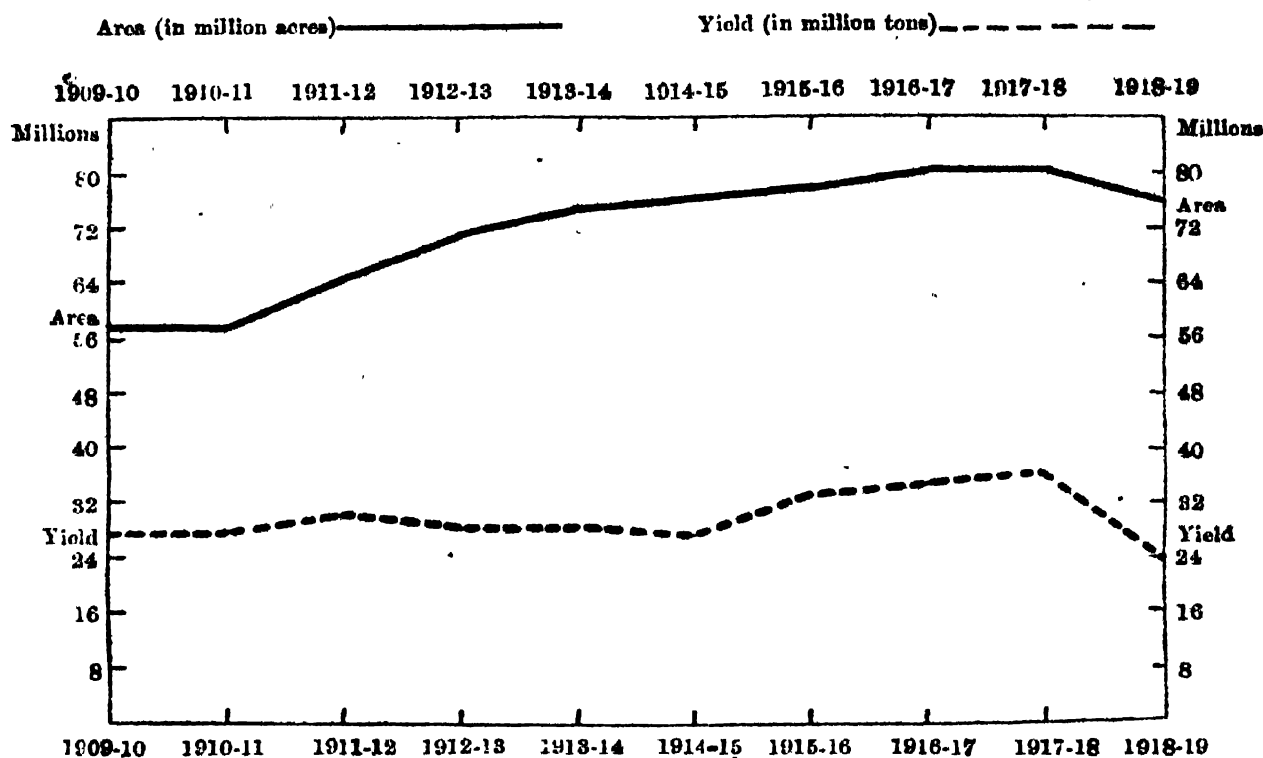

With the figures for the autumn rice given in the December forecast and reproduced in the appended table, the total area and yield of both kinds of rice in Bombay amount to 1,993,000 acres and 416,000 tons, as against 2,622,000 acres and 1,226,000 tons last year.

Sind (1·5 per cent of the total area under rice in British India).—As stated in the December forecast, the total area sown is 876,000 acres (8,000 acres being in the Khairpur State), which is 25 per cent below the estimate of last year. The total yield is estimated at 238,000 tons (3,000 tons being in the Khairpur State), which is also 25 per cent less than that of last year.

Coorg (0·1 per cent of the total area under rice in British India).—The total area and yield are estimated at 80,000 acres and 39,000 tons, as against 84,000 acres and 41,000 tons last year—a decrease of 5 per cent both in area and yield.

Chart.—The chart below illustrates the present estimates of area and yield as compared with those of the preceding nine years.

AREA AND YIELD OF RICE

Exports.—The figures below state the total quantity of rice (both in the husk and not in the husk) exported from British India to foreign countries by sea in the last five calendar years. India is not only the largest producer but also the largest exporter of rice.

Rice crop in foreign countries.—The latest information published by the International Institute of Agriculture, Rome, may be summarised as follows:—In Japan the total area and yield are estimated at 7,556,000 acres and 10,476,000 tons, as against 7,553,000 acres and 9,690,000 tons last year. In the United States of America the total area and yield are estimated at 1,120,000 acres and 840,000 tons, as compared with 964,000 acres and 728,000 tons last year. In Italy the estimates are 321,000 acres and 491,000 tons, as against 339,000 acres and 514,000 tons last year.

Information, specially obtained for this forecast through the Consulate at Saigon, shows the estimates of area and yield under rice in Cochin-China in 1918-19 to be 3,855,000 acres and 1,279,000 tons as compared with 4,448,000 acres and 1,869,000 tons last year. The exports during 1918 (calendar) year amounted to 1,377,000 tons.

The Cotton Crop in Foreign Countries.—The latest information published by the International Institute of Agriculture, Rome, regarding the cotton crop of 1918 in foreign countries may be summarised as follows :—In the United States of America the area sown is 35,875,000 acres and the approximate estimate of yield about 14,594,000 bales of 400 lbs. (or 11,675,000 bales of 500 lbs each) compared with 33,827,000 acres and 14,095,000 bales of 400 lbs. (or 11,276,000 bales of 500 lbs.) in 1917. In Egypt the area sown is 1,365,000 acres, as against 1,740,000 acres last year.

ESTABLISHMENTS.

The 27th February 1919.

No. 1515-C.—THE following regulations respecting the examination of candidates for the Indian Civil Service to be held in August, 1919, are published for general information.

Copies of this paper may be obtained on application to the Secretary to the Government of India, Home Department.

NOTICE.

An Open Competitive Examination for the Indian Civil Service will be held in London, commencing on the 1st August, 1919, under the Regulations, a copy of which is sent herewith.

The number of vacancies to be filled will be announced hereafter.

No concurrent examination will be held either for Clerkships (Class I) in the Home Civil Service or for Eastern Cadetships in the Colonial Service.

No person will be admitted to examination from whom the Secretary, Civil Service Commission, has not received on or before the 2nd June, an application in the handwriting of the Candidate on the prescribed form, a copy of which is sent herewith. No allegation that an application Form or a letter respecting such Form has been lost or delayed in the post will be considered by the Commissioners unless the person making such allegation produces a Post Office certificate of posting. Candidates who delay their applications until the last days will do so at their own risk.

Acknowledgments of such application Forms are sent, and any Candidate who has filled up and returned the printed application Form but has not received an acknowledgment of it within four complete days should at once write to the Secretary, Civil Service Commission, Burlington Gardens, London, W. 1. Failure to comply with this provision will deprive the Candidate of any claim to consideration.

The order for Admission to the Examination will be posted early in July to the address given on the Form of Application. It will contain instruction as to the time and place at which the Candidate will be required to attend, and as to the manner in which the prescribed fee (£6) is to be paid.

Civil Service Commission,
September, 1918.

Copies of this paper may be obtained on application to the Secretary to the Government of India, Home Department.

EXAMINATIONS FOR THE INDIAN CIVIL SERVICE.

REGULATIONS.

* * The following Regulations, made by the Secretary of State, for India in Council, are liable to alteration from year to year.

1. An examination for admission to the Indian Civil Service, open to all qualified persons, will be held in London in August of each year for such number of appointments to that Service as the Secretary of State may on each occasion determine. The date of the Examination and the number of appointments to be made for each Province will be announced beforehand by the Civil Service Commissioners.

2. No person will be deemed qualified who shall not satisfy the Civil Service Commissioners :—

(i) (A) That save as hereinafter provided he is a British subject.

(B) That if he (being a British subject) or his father or his mother was not born within His Majesty's Dominions and allegiance then at the time of his birth his father was a British subject or the subject of a State in India and that such father still is or continued to be until his death a British subject or the subject of such State in India.

Provided that a ruler or subject of any State in India in respect of whom the Governor General in Council has made a declaration under section 96-A of the Government of India Act, 1915, as amended by section 3 of the Government of India (Amendment) Act, 1916, may be considered eligible.*

(ii) That he had attained the age of twenty-two, and had not attained the age of twenty-four on the first day of August of the year in which the Examination is held, or that he is in a position to claim such a concession under the provisions of the Appendix to these Regulations as will render him eligible.*

[N.B.—In the case of Natives of India it will be necessary for a Candidate to obtain a certificate of age and qualification under Regulation 2 (i) issued under Notification of the Government of India, No. 1114, dated 12th September, 1918, and signed, should he be a resident in British India, by the Secretary to Government of the Province, or the Commissioner of the Division within which his family resides, or, should he reside in a Native State, by the highest Political Officer accredited to the State in which his family resides.]

(iii) That he has no disease, constitutional affection, or bodily infirmity, unfitting him, or likely to unfit him, for the Indian Civil Service.†

(iv) That he is of good moral character.

2. (A) No person will be eligible for admission to the Indian Civil Service who has made before any Tribunal established under the Military Service Acts, 1916, an application for the issue to him of a certificate of exemption from the provisions of those Acts on the ground of a conscientious objection to the undertaking of combatant service.

3. No person who, in a previous year, accepted the offer of a nomination as a Selected Candidate for the Indian Civil Service and subsequently resigned his position as a Selected Candidate, will be admitted to the examination.

4. Should the evidence upon the above points be prima facie satisfactory to the Civil Service Commissioners, the Candidate, on payment of the prescribed fee, will be admitted to the Examination. The Commissioners may, however, in their discretion, at any time prior to the grant of the Certificate of Qualification hereinafter referred to, institute such further inquiries as they may deem necessary; and if the result of such inquiries in the case of any Candidate should be unsatisfactory to them in any of the above respects he will be ineligible for admission to the Indian Civil Service, and, if already selected, will be removed from the position of a Probationer.

* The Appendix referred to is printed on 483 page.

† The Civil Service Commissioners will regard no person as constitutionally fitted for appointment to the Indian Civil Service who has not been satisfactorily vaccinated within the last seven years.

5. The Open Competitive Examination will take place only in the following 38 subjects (a) :—

From the marks assigned to candidates in each subject such deduction will be made as the Civil Service Commissioners may deem necessary in order to secure that no credit be allowed for merely superficial knowledge.

Consistently with the limitations specified above Candidates are at liberty to name any of the foregoing subjects, provided that the maximum number of marks that can be obtained from the subjects chosen is limited to 6,000. If this maximum is exceeded by a Candidate's selection he will be required to indicate one of his subjects, the marks for which should, in his case, be reduced so as to bring his maximum marks within the prescribed limit. The marks so reduced will be subject to a correspondingly reduced deduction.

Moreover, if a candidate's handwriting is not easily legible a further deduction will, on that account, be made from the total marks otherwise accruing to him.*

6. A list of the competitors shall be made out in order of their proficiency as disclosed by the aggregate marks finally awarded to each competitor, and in that order so many competitors, up to the determined number of appointments as are found by the Civil Service Commissioners to be qualified by examination, shall be

* It is notified for general information that the number of marks deducted for bad handwriting may be considerable.

designated to be Selected Candidates for the Indian Civil Service, provided that they appear to be duly qualified in other respects. Should any Selected Candidate become disqualified, the Secretary of State for India will determine whether the vacancy thus created shall be filled or not. In the former case the Candidate next in order of merit, and in other respects duly qualified, shall be deemed to be a Selected Candidate.

7. Selected Candidates, before proceeding to India, will be on probation for one year, at the end of which time they will undergo an examination, called the Final Examination, in the following compulsory subjects (b) :—

	Marks.
1. Indian Penal Code	400
2. Code of Criminal Procedure	200
3. The Indian Evidence Act	200
4. Indian History	400
5. The principal Vernacular Language of the Province to which the Candidate is assigned	400

The principal Vernacular Language prescribed for each Province to which Candidates are assigned is as follows :—

For the United Provinces of Agra and Oudh, the Punjab or the Central Provinces	Hindustani.
For Bengal and Assam	Bengali.
(unless it is the Candidate's mother tongue.)
For Bihar and Orissa	Hindustani.
For Burma	Burmese.
For Bombay	Marathi.
(unless it is the Candidate's mother tongue.)
For Madras	Tamil or Telegu.
(at the option of the Candidate.)

In Hindustani the Candidate will be required to be acquainted with both the Persian and the Nagri character.

A Candidate assigned to Bengal or Assam, whose mother tongue is Bengali, must offer for examination Hindustani; a Candidate assigned to Bombay, whose mother tongue is Marathi must offer for examination Hindustani; and a Candidate assigned to Madras, whose mother tongue is either of the languages shown against his Province, must offer the other for examination.

8. Selected Candidates may in addition offer in the Final Examination one of the following optional subjects :—

	Marks.
1. Hindu and Muhammadan Law	450
2. Sanskrit	400
3. Arabic	400
4. Persian	400
5. Hindustani	400

No Candidate who offered Sanskrit or Arabic at the Open Competition may offer the same language at the Final Examination; and only Candidates assigned to the Province of Burma may offer Hindustani as an optional subject.

9. In the Final Examination, as in the Open Competition, the merit of the Candidates examined will be estimated by marks (which will be subject to deductions in the same way as the marks assigned at the Open Competition), and the number set opposite to each subject denotes the greatest number of marks that can be obtained in respect of it. The examination will be conducted on paper and civâ voce, as may be deemed necessary.

If any Candidate is prevented by sickness or any other adequate cause from attending such examination, the Commissioners may, with the concurrence of the Secretary of State for India in Council, allow him to appear at the Final Examination to be held in the following year, or at a special examination.

10. The selected Candidates will also be tested during their probation as to their proficiency in Riding.

The examinations in riding will be held as follows :—

(1) Shortly after the result of the Open Competitive Examination has been declared, or at such time or times as the Commissioners may appoint during the course of the probationary year.

(2) Again, at the time of the Final Examination. Candidates who may then satisfy the Commissioners that they are sufficiently at home in the saddle for the efficient performance of all the duties of the Indian Civil Service will be awarded marks ranging between 101 and 200 according to the degree of proficiency displayed, to be added to their marks in the Final Examination. Candidates who fall short of this adequate proficiency but show such minimum proficiency as is evidenced that with a moderate amount of practice they can attain full proficiency, will receive marks ranging between 1 and 100; they will be allowed to proceed to India and will on their arrival there be subjected to such further tests in riding as may be prescribed by their Government, and shall receive no increase to their initial salary until they have passed such tests to the satisfaction of that Government.

A Candidate who fails at the end of the year of probation to satisfy the Civil Service Commissioners that he has reached the minimum standard of proficiency in riding, will be liable to have his name removed from the list of Selected Candidates.

11. The Selected Candidates who, on examination, shall be found to have a competent knowledge of the subjects specified in Regulation 7, and who shall have satisfied the Civil Service Commissioners of their eligibility in respect of nationality, age, health, character, conduct during the period of probation, and ability to ride, shall be certified by the said Commissioners to be entitled to be appointed to the Indian Civil Service provided they shall comply with the regulations in force, at the time, for that Service.

12. Persons desirous to be admitted as Candidates must apply on Forms, which may be obtained from "The Secretary to the Civil Service Commissioners, London", at any time after the 1st December, in the year previous to that in which the Examination is to be held. No person will be admitted to the Examination from whom the Secretary to the Civil Service Commissioners has not received an application on or before the 1st June (or, if that date should fall on a Sunday or public holiday, then, on or before the first day thereafter on which their office is open), in the year in which the Examination is to be held, an application, in the handwriting of the Candidate, on the prescribed form.

APPENDIX.

1. Any person who has joined since the 14th August, 1914, or may join during the present war, the Army or Navy or Marines or the Royal Air Force, or has rendered or may render during the same period actual military service in the Special Reserve or Territorial Force, Royal Naval Reserve or Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve, may, if eligible in point of age under the Regulations as they now stand for admission to the open competitive examination held in 1918, but over age in 1919, deduct from his actual age at the time of the open competitive examination held in 1919 :—

(a) The actual period of such service, if it has not exceeded three months.

(b) One year, if the actual period of service has exceeded three months. No candidate will be allowed to deduct more than one year from his actual age.

2. The same concession may also be granted to those who have been employed during the same period in connection with the armed forces of the Crown at home or abroad giving their whole time and under obligation to serve for the duration of the war or until their discharge, or for any period not terminable at their own option, provided that their employment be not on ordinary commercial terms, such as that of Assistant Paymasters, clerks, artisans, and the like.

3. The grant of the concession described in paragraph (2) will be at the discretion of the Civil Service Commissioners, whose decision in each case will be final. Candidates who contemplate applying for an age deduction under (2) will do well to apply to the Civil Service Commission for a ruling on their case.

4. Candidates to be eligible for the concessions in (1) or (2) must furnish an official certificate of the period and satisfactory character of their service and if any doubt arise whether the service of any candidate is of the kind contemplated, the Secretary of State for India in Council reserves to the Civil Service Commissioners the right to decide the case upon its merits.

The Civil Service Commissioners are authorised by the Secretary of State for India in Council to make the following announcements :—

(i) Selected Candidates will be allotted to the various provinces upon a consideration of all the circumstances, including their own wishes ; but the requirements of the Public Service will rank before every other consideration.

(ii) Except in the case of persons continuing to receive Scholarship allowances of equal or greater amounts from the Government of India an allowance amounting to £150 will be given to any Candidate who passes his probation at one of the Universities or Colleges which have been approved by the Secretary of State, viz., the Universities of Oxford, Cambridge, Dublin, Glasgow, Edinburgh, St. Andrews, and Aberdeen ; the School of Oriental Studies, London Institution, Finsbury Circus ; Victoria University, Manchester.

This allowance will be paid to the selected Candidate in four instalments on the following dates respectively :—December 24th, after his selection, March 25th, June 24th, and the date of his signing his covenant on being finally appointed to the Service.

An allowance on account of passage to India will be paid to each newly appointed civilian to the amount of £40, for passage to Calcutta, Madras or Bombay, and £50 for passage to Rangoon. These allowances will only be paid after production of evidence that the Officer has engaged a First Class passage. An Officer who prefers it can have a First Class passage taken for him by the India Office in lieu of receiving a passage allowance. Applications giving proposed dates of sailing should be made to the Secretary, Judicial and Public Department, India Office, London, S. W. 1.

The payment of each of the first three instalments will be conditional on the receipt by the Secretary of State, through the Civil Service Commissioners, of a Certificate that the Candidate has fulfilled up to date the requirements of the Authorities, and shown satisfactory conduct at the Authorized University or College ; the fourth and final instalment will be paid as soon as the selected Candidate has signed his covenant, and for its payment no Certificate from College Authorities will be required.

The whole probation must ordinarily be passed at the same Institution. Migration will not be permitted except for special reasons approved by the Secretary of State.

(iii) Each Candidate will be required before receiving the first instalment of his allowance to execute an agreement binding himself and one surety, jointly and severally, to refund all monies he may have received from the Secretary of State for India in the event of—

(1) his failure to pass the Final Examination within the time prescribed by the Regulations and to satisfy the Civil Service Commissioners of his fitness for admission to the Indian Civil Service, or

(2) his subsequent failure to execute the usual covenant, and to proceed to India, as and when he shall be directed by the Secretary of State for India.

(iv) All Candidates obtaining Certificates will be also required to enter into covenants, by which amongst other things they will bind themselves to make such payments as under the rules and regulations for the time being in force, they may be required to make towards their own pensions or for the pensions of their families. The stamps payable on these covenants amount to £1.

(v) The seniority in the Indian Civil Service of the Candidates obtaining Certificates will be determined according to the order in which they stand on the list resulting from the combined marks of the Open Competitive and Final Examinations but may ultimately be effected by appointments made by the Secretary of State under the Temporary Provisions Act, 1915.

(vi) Candidates obtaining Certificates will be required to report their arrival in India within such period after the grant of their Certificates of Qualification as the Secretary of State may in each case direct.

(vii) Candidates who fail to satisfy the Civil Service Commissioners at the Final Examination held in any year will be definitely rejected, and will not be allowed to present themselves for re-examination, unless it shall appear to the Secretary of State in Council after reference to the Civil Service Commissioners, that such failure is due to circumstances wholly exceptional and beyond the control of the Candidate.

The Commissioners have been requested by the Secretary of State for India to draw the attention of Selected Candidates to the prefatory note attached to this manual, as it is considered important that it should be clearly understood that this compilation is not to be regarded in any other light than that of a collection, made for facility of reference, of certain information and rules, that it is by no means exhaustive, and that it is liable to such modifications as may from time to time be sanctioned by competent authority.

Copies of this paper may be obtained on application to the Secretary to the Government of India, Home Department.

INDIAN CIVIL SERVICE.

Syllabus of an Open Competitive Examination for the Indian Civil Service to be held in the year 1919, and of any other competition that may be held in combination therewith.

In view of the importance of legible handwriting in the public service, Candidates are warned that the provision as to deductions for bad handwriting in these competitions will be strictly enforced.

Candidates are warned that full marks cannot be obtained on any paper unless the whole of it is answered, or, in cases where the number of questions to be answered is specified, unless the full number specified is answered.

English Composition.—An Essay to be written on one of several specified subjects.

Sanskrit Language and Literature.—Translation from Sanskrit ; composition in Sanskrit ; Sanskrit Literature, including the life, thought, and antiquities of Ancient India, together with such knowledge of history as bears upon the subject ; questions on the Sanskrit Language (including questions on Philology).

Composition will be required in Classical Sanskrit alone ; elsewhere Vedic Sanskrit is also included.

Candidates are expected to make a special study of the Seventh Mandala of the Rig-veda, but other Vedic hymns may also be set in the examination.

Arabic Language and Literature.—Translation from Arabic ; set composition and free composition in Arabic ; Arabic Literature, including the life and thought of the Arabs as shown in the literature, together with such knowledge of history as bears upon the subject ; questions on the Arabic Language (including questions on Philology).

Greek Literature.—Questions on the Greek Language (including questions on Philology), Literature and Antiquities.

Latin Literature.—Questions on the Latin Language (including questions on Philology) and on Roman Literature and Antiquities.

English Language and Literature.—The Examination will be in two parts. In the one Candidates will be expected to show a general acquaintance with the course of English Literature, as represented in the chief writers in verse and prose, between the reign of Edward III and the death of Queen Victoria.

A minute and detailed knowledge will not be looked for in this part of the Examination ; but its aim will be to test how far the Candidates have studied at first hand the chief productions of the greatest English writers, and are acquainted with the leading characteristics of their thought and style, and with the place which each of them occupies in the history of English Literature.

The other part of the Examination will relate to one of the following periods, which will follow each other year by year in rotation.

Period I : 1360 to 1600, Chaucer to Spenser.

Period II : 1600 to 1660, The later Elizabethans.

Period III : 1660 to 1744, The age of Dryden and Pope.

Period IV : 1744 to 1800, From the death of Pope to the death of Cowper.

Period V : 1800 to 1832, Nineteenth Century writers to the death of Scott.

Period VI : 1832 to 1892, From the death of Scott to the death of Tennyson.

The Examination in this part will require from the Candidates a more minute acquaintance with the history of the English Language and Literature, as illustrated in the chief works produced in each period, and will be based to a considerable extent, but by no means exclusively, on certain books specified

- each year by the Commissioners. The names and other indications placed beside the dates are intended to suggest the general character of the literary development of the period, and, consequently, the natural limits of the Examination. All the works of Shakespeare and Milton, for example, will be regarded as falling within the period 1600 to 1660; all the works of Wordsworth and Coleridge within the period 1800 to 1832; all the works of Carlyle, Landor, and Macaulay within the period 1832 to 1892.

For the year 1919, Period II (1600—1660) is prescribed, and the following are the specified books:—

Bacon—History of Henry VII; Essays.

Shakespeare—Much Ado About Nothing; Richard II; Henry IV (both parts); Romeo and Juliet; Macbeth; Antony and Cleopatra; The Tempest; Sonnets.

Jonson—The Alchemist; Volpone; Discoveries.

Campion—Book of Airs.

Donne—Songs and Sonnets.

Fletcher—Rule a Wife and Have a Wife; The Faithful Shepherdess.

Hobbes—Leviathan, Part II.

Earle—Microcosmographie.

Browne—Hydriotaphia.

Milton—Paradise Lost, Books I to VI; Samson Agonistes; Areopagitica. Oxford Book of English Verse, Nos. 207—366.

Italian Translation Composition and Conversation.—In the conversation test importance is attached to pronunciation. The study of phonetics is an important aid to correctness of pronunciation.

Italian, History of the Language and Literature.—Italian Literature, including the life and thought as shown in the literature, together with such knowledge of history as bears upon the subject. Questions will be asked which demand a knowledge of the language in its early stages (i.e., before the time of Dante), but such questions will not be obligatory. Candidates will not be required to write their answers in Italian.

French Translation Composition and Conversation.—In the conversation test importance is attached to pronunciation. The study of phonetics is an important aid to correctness of pronunciation.

French, History of the Language and Literature.—French Literature, including the life and thought as shown in the literature, together with such knowledge of history as bears upon the subject. Questions will be asked which demand a knowledge of the language in its early stages (i.e., before 1500), but such questions will not be obligatory. Candidates will not be required to write their answers in French.

German Translation Composition and Conversation.—In the conversation test importance is attached to pronunciation. The study of phonetics is an important aid to correctness of pronunciation.

German, History of the Language and Literature.—German Literature, including the life and thought as shown in the literature, together with such knowledge of history as bears upon the subject. Questions will be asked which demand a knowledge of the language in its early stages (i.e., before 1500), but such questions will not be obligatory. Candidates will not be required to write their answers in German.

Lower Mathematics.—Plane Geometry including conic sections; Solid Geometry including the method of orthogonal projection; Algebra and Plane Trigonometry; Elementary Plane Co-ordinate Geometry; Elementary Mechanics of solids and fluids; Geometrical Optics; Elements of Differential and Integral Calculus with simple illustrations from other branches of the subject. The questions may involve the use of drawing instruments. The use of the slide rule is allowed.

Higher Mathematics.—Higher Algebra (including Theory of Equations), Plane and Spherical Trigonometry, Differential Calculus, Integral Calculus, Differential Equations, Analytical Geometry (Plane and Solid), Statics including Attractions, Dynamics of a Particle, Rigid Dynamics, Hydrodynamics, the Mathematical Theory of Electricity and Magnetism. The questions may involve the use of drawing instruments. The use of the slide rule is allowed.

Chemistry, Physics, Geology, Botany, Zoology, Animal Physiology.—Candidates are warned that the practical Examinations carry a large proportion of the marks.

Geography.—Geography as understood in the universities, not excluding topics which concern geography jointly with other subjects such as economics, history, physics, botany, and geology. There will be a practical test which will necessitate a knowledge of cartographical methods and notations, and for this test drawing instruments may be required.

Greek History.—Questions (a) on the General and (b) on the Constitutional History of Greece to the death of Alexander. Candidates will be expected to show a knowledge of the original authorities. They must also be prepared to answer questions on historical geography, and to draw sketch maps.

Roman History.—Questions (a) on the General and (b) on the Constitutional History of Rome to the death of Trajan. Candidates will be expected to show a knowledge of the original authorities. They must also be prepared to answer questions on historical geography, and to draw sketch maps.

English History.—The subject will include (a) the Political History of the British Isles and the Colonies, (b) the Constitutional History of England. Candidates should be acquainted with the following authorities:—

Period I, to 1485 : Stubbs, Select Charters, ninth edition [Clarendon Press].

Period II, 1485 to 1848 ; Prothero, Statutes and Constitutional Documents [Clarendon Press] ; Gardiner, Documents of the Puritan Revolution [Clarendon Press].

In each period the number of marks assigned to the question or questions dealing with the text of the prescribed books will be about one-sixth of that assigned to the whole period. Candidates must be prepared to answer questions on historical geography, and to draw sketch maps.

General Modern History.—Candidates may, at their choice, be examined in any one of the following periods. Periods III, IV, and V will include Indian History. Candidates are warned that high marks will not be awarded in this subject, unless the text of the prescribed books has been carefully studied by them. Candidates must be prepared to answer questions on historical geography, and to draw sketch maps.

I. From the accession of Charlemagne to the Third Crusade. [A.D. 800 to A.D. 1193.]

No. 733-I. B.—In exercise of the powers conferred by the Indian (Foreign Jurisdiction) Order in Council, 1902, and of all other powers enabling him in that behalf, the Governor General in Council is pleased to make the following Law for the administration of the Abu Municipal Area.

A LAW FOR THE ADMINISTRATION OF THE ABU MUNICIPAL AREA.

CHAPTER I.—PRELIMINARY.

Short title, extent and commencement.

1. (1) This Law may be called the Abu Municipal Law, 1919.

(2) It extends to the whole of the Abu Municipal area as defined from time to time by notification.

(3) It shall come into force at once.

(4) All orders, declarations, rules and regulations made, directions, licenses and permits given, taxes imposed and notifications published, before the commencement of this Law, under the authority of, or with the approval of, the Agent to the Governor General in this behalf shall, so far as they are consistent with this Law, be deemed to have been respectively made, given, imposed and published thereunder.

Definitions.

2. In this Law, unless there is anything repugnant in the subject or context,—

(1) "Agent to the Governor General" means Agent to the Governor General in Rajputana.

(2) "inhabitant" includes any person ordinarily residing or carrying on business or owning or occupying immoveable property in the area to which this Law extends:

(3) "street" includes any way, road, lane, square, court, alley, passage or open space, whether a thoroughfare or not, over which the public have a right of way, and also the roadway and footway over any public bridge or causeway:

(4) "owner" includes the person for the time being receiving the rent of any land or building, whether on his own account or as agent or trustee for any person or society or for any religious or charitable purpose, or who would so receive the same if the land or building were let to a tenant:

(5) "notification" means a notification published by authority of the Agent to the Governor General in the Official Gazette.

(6) "notified" means published as aforesaid:

(7) "Committee" means the Municipal Committee constituted under this Law:

(8) "District Magistrate" means the District Magistrate of Abu:

(9) "Common gaming-house" means any house, room, tent, or walled enclosure, or space, or vehicle, or vessel, or any place whatsoever, in which any instruments of gaming are kept or used for the profit or gain of the person owning, occupying, using or keeping such house, room, tent, enclosure, space, vehicle, vessel or place, whether by way of charge for the use of such house, room, tent, enclosure, space, vehicle, vessel, place or instruments or otherwise howsoever.

CHAPTER II.—ORGANISATION AND CONSTITUTION OF THE COMMITTEE.

3. (1) There shall be established a Municipal Committee consisting of such persons, not less than six, as the Agent to the Governor General shall appoint in that behalf.

Constitution of Committee.

(2) The Committee so established shall be a body corporate by the name of the Committee of the Abu Municipality, shall have perpetual succession and a common seal, with power to acquire and hold property, both moveable and immoveable, and subject to the rules made under this Law, to transfer any property held by it, and to contract and to do all other things necessary for the purposes of its constitution, and may sue and be sued in its corporate name.

4. (1) The term of office of a member of the Committee shall be fixed by the Agent to the Governor General, by rule made under this Law, and may be so fixed as to provide for the retirement of members by rotation, but shall not exceed three years.

Term of office of an appointed member.

(2) An outgoing member shall, if otherwise qualified, be again eligible for appointment.

5. Any member may resign by notifying in writing his desire to do so to the District Magistrate and, on his resignation being accepted by the Agent to the Governor General, he shall be deemed to have vacated his office.

Resignation of an appointed member.

6. The Committee shall come into existence at such time as the Agent to the Governor General may, by notification, appoint in that behalf.

Time of Committee coming into existence.

7. When the Committee comes into existence under section 6, the following consequences shall ensue, namely :—

Consequences of establishment of the Committee.

- (a) The Municipal and Sanitary Committee of Mount Abu shall cease to exist;
- (b) and all property vested in it shall, for the purposes of this Law and subject to all rights existing over, and all debts, liabilities and obligations (if any) affecting that property, form part of the Municipal fund hereinafter described;
- (c) an officer employed by the Committee mentioned in clause (a) at the time when the Committee established under this Law comes into existence, shall be deemed to be similarly employed by the latter Committee; and
- (d) the Committee established under this Law shall be substituted for the abolished Committee in all legal proceedings by or against the latter pending at the time when it ceased to exist.

8. The Agent to the Governor General shall from time to time appoint from amongst the members of the Committee by name or by office, such persons as he thinks fit, to be Chairman, Vice-Chairman and Secretary, respectively, of the Municipal Committee for such term as he may think fit.

Appointment of Chairman, Vice-Chairman and Secretary.

9. The Chairman, Vice-Chairman or Secretary may resign by notifying in writing his intention to do so to the Committee, which will submit his resignation to the Agent to the Governor General and, on its being accepted by the Agent to the Governor General, he shall be deemed to have vacated his office.

Resignation of Chairman, Vice-Chairman, or Secretary.

10. The Agent to the Governor General may remove any Chairman, Vice-Chairman, Secretary or Member of the Committee, whose continuance in office is, in his opinion, unnecessary or undesirable.

Powers of Agent to the Governor General to remove appointed members.

11. The Agent to the Governor General shall appoint a person to fill every vacancy occurring on the Committee by reason of the death, resignation or removal of a member; provided that if the term of office of that member would, in the ordinary course of events, have determined within six months of the occurrence of the vacancy the Agent to the Governor General may direct that the vacancy be left unfilled until the date on which the said term of office would have determined.

Special provision in respect of casual vacancies.

12. If a Chairman, Vice-Chairman or Secretary dies or resigns his office or is removed, a new Chairman, Vice-Chairman or Secretary shall be appointed by the Agent to the Governor General.

Death, resignation, or removal of Chairman, Vice-Chairman or Secretary.

Conduct of Business.

13. (1) The Committee shall meet for the transaction of business at least once in every two months on such day as may, from time to time, be fixed by the rules under section 112.

Time for holding meetings.

(2) The Chairman, or, in his absence from Abu, the Vice-Chairman may, whenever he thinks fit, convene a meeting at any other time.

14. It shall be necessary for the transaction of any business that not less than one-third of the total number of members of the Committee for the time being shall be present:

Quorum.

Provided that when it is necessary to postpone any business at a meeting for want of the prescribed quorum, the Chairman of the meeting shall adjourn the meeting to another date, and the business postponed for want of the prescribed quorum shall be transacted on such date, or, in the event of a further adjournment of the meeting to a subsequent date, on such subsequent date, notwithstanding any deficiency in the number of members present.

Chairman of meeting.

15. (1) At every meeting of the Committee the Chairman, if present, shall preside.

(2) In the absence of the Chairman, the Vice-Chairman shall preside.

(3) If both Chairman and Vice-Chairman are absent, the members present shall elect one of their number to preside.

16. (1) Except as otherwise provided by this Law, or by any rule made by the Agent to the Governor General under this Law, all questions which may come before any meeting of the Committee shall be decided by the majority of the votes of the members present and voting.

Vote of majority decisive.

(2) In the case of an equality of votes, the Chairman of the meeting shall have a second or casting vote.

Resolutions to be recorded and published.

17. (1) Every resolution passed by the Committee at a meeting shall be recorded in a book kept for the purpose and shall be signed by the Chairman.

(2) A copy of every resolution passed by the Committee at a meeting shall, within 10 days from the date of the meeting, be forwarded to the First Assistant to the Agent to the Governor General, for the information of the Agent to the Governor General.

CHAPTER III.—OFFICERS AND SERVANTS.

18. Subject to the other provisions of this Law and to the general control of the Agent to the Governor General, the appointment of such officers and servants as may be necessary or proper for the efficient execution of the provisions of this Law shall rest with the Committee.

Pensions of others.

19. In the case of an officer or servant appointed under the preceding section, the Committee may—

(i) grant him—

(a) leave allowances ;

(b) if he is not entitled to pension, or if his monthly pay does not exceed ten rupees, a gratuity on resignation or retirement ; and

(ii) if empowered in this behalf by the Agent to the Governor General—

(a) subscribe on his behalf for pension or gratuity under the rules contained in any general or special orders of the Governor General in Council for the time being in force ; or

(b) purchase for him from Government or otherwise an annuity on his retirement:

Provided that no pension, gratuity, leave allowance or annuity shall exceed the sum to which, under any general or special orders of the Governor General in Council for the time being in force, the officer or servant would be entitled if the service had been service under the Government.

Provident fund.

20. The Committee may establish and maintain a provident fund and may itself contribute thereto

21. Should any sweeper employed by the Committee, in the absence of a written contract authorising him so to do and without reasonable cause, resign his employment, or absent himself from his duties without leave or without giving one month's notice to the Committee, or neglect or refuse to perform his duties or any of them, he shall be liable to imprisonment which may extend to two months, or to fine which may extend to fifty rupees.

22. (1) The Committee may enter into any contract whereof the value or amount does not exceed one thousand rupees.

Authority to contract.

(2) A contract whereof the value or amount exceeds one thousand rupees shall not be executed until it has been sanctioned by the Agent to the Governor General.

Mode of executing contracts.

23. (1) Every contract made by or on behalf of the Committee whereof the value or amount exceeds fifty rupees shall be in writing.

(2) Every such contract shall be signed by the Chairman of the Committee.

(3) If a contract to which this section applies is executed otherwise than in conformity therewith it shall not be binding on the Committee.

CHAPTER IV.—TAXATION.

24. (1) Subject to any general rules or special orders of the Governor General in Council, the Committee, with the previous sanction of the Agent to the Governor General, may impose in the area to which this Law extends any of the following taxes, namely :—

Taxes which may be imposed.

(a) a tax on buildings and lands not exceeding twelve and a half per centum on the annual value ;

(b) a tax on persons practising any profession or art or carrying on any trade or calling in the Municipal area not exceeding two and a half per centum on the annual income derived from such practice ;

(c) a tax not exceeding four rupees a quarter on every vehicle or dog kept within the Municipal area or on every animal kept therein for riding, driving, draught or burden ;

(d) a toll not exceeding one anna on every vehicle and animal used as aforesaid entering the Municipal area ;

(e) an octroi on animals for slaughter, or goods, or both, brought within the Municipal area for consumption or use therein ;

(f) a tax not exceeding four rupees per annum on persons using the Municipal dhobi-ghat; and with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, any other tax :

Provided that any person may compound for exemption from all tolls leviable in respect of any animal or vehicle under clause (d) by paying the tax which would have been leviable in respect thereof under clause (c, if it had been kept within the area to which this Law extends.

(2) In this section "annual value" means the gross annual rent for which buildings or lands liable to taxation may reasonably be expected to let.

25. Where the Committee has in exercise of the powers conferred by this Law undertaken the house-scavenging of any house or building, it may, with the previous sanction of the Scavenging tax.

Agent to the Governor General and in the manner by this Law directed, charge the occupiers of such house or building, in addition to any other tax imposed upon them under this Law, a tax to be called the scavenging tax, at such rate or of such amount as it thinks fit :

Provided that, in fixing the rate or amount of such tax, regard shall be had to the principle that the total net proceeds of the tax should not exceed the total charges of the house-scavenging undertaken by the Committee.

26. Besides the taxes mentioned in the foregoing sections, the Committee, with the previous sanction of the Agent to the Governor abolish or reduce in amount any tax imposed under the foregoing sections.

28. (1) The Committee may, with the previous sanction of the Agent to the Governor General, exempt in whole or in part from the payment of any such tax any person who by reason of poverty may, in its opinion, be unable to pay the same.

Power to exempt from taxation.

(2) The Agent to the Governor General may, by order, exempt in whole or in part from the payment of any such tax any person or class of persons, or any property or description of property.

29. No tax imposed under this Law shall be invalid merely for defect of form ; and it shall suffice in the case of any such tax on property or any assessment of value for the purpose of

32. (1) An appeal against the assessment or levy of any tax under this Law shall lie to the First Assistant to the Agent to the Governor General.

Appeals against taxation.

(2) The order of the appellate authority shall be final.

33. (1) No appeal shall lie in respect of a tax on any building or land unless it is preferred within one month after the publication of the prescribed notice of assessment, and no appeal shall lie in respect of any other tax unless it is preferred within one month from the time when the demand for the tax is made :

Provided that an appeal may be admitted after the expiration of the period prescribed therefor by this section, if the appellant satisfies the appellate authority that he had sufficient cause for not presenting it sooner.

(2) No appeal shall be entertained unless the amount of the tax to which it relates is deposited with the Committee before the appeal is preferred.

34. No objection shall be taken to any valuation or assessment, nor shall the liability of any person to be assessed or taxed be questioned, in any other manner or by any other authority than is provided in this Law.

35. Every person bringing or receiving within the Municipal area any article on which octroi is payable shall, when required by an officer authorized by the Committee in this behalf, and so far as may be necessary for ascertaining the amount of tax chargeable—

(a) permit that officer to inspect, examine, weigh or otherwise deal with the article, and

(b) communicate to that officer any information and exhibit to him any bill, invoice or document of a like nature that he may possess relating to the article.

36. If after the imposition of an octroi tax, any person bringing or receiving a conveyance or package within the Municipal area refuses, on the demand of an officer authorised by the Committee in this behalf, to permit such officer to inspect the contents of the conveyance or package for the purpose of ascertaining whether it contains any articles in respect of which octroi is payable, such officer may cause the conveyance or package to be taken without unnecessary delay before a Magistrate, who shall cause the inspection to be made in his presence.

37. Every officer demanding octroi by authority of the Committee shall tender to every person introducing or receiving any article on which the tax is claimed, a bill specifying the article taxable, the amount claimed, and the rate at which the tax is calculated.

38. (1) In the case of non-payment of octroi on demand, the officer empowered to collect the octroi may seize any article on which it is chargeable, or any part thereof of sufficient value to satisfy the demand and on making such seizure shall at once report his action to the Chairman.

(2) When the property seized is subject to speedy and natural decay, or when the expense of keeping it in custody is likely to exceed its value after deduction of the amount to be recovered, the Chairman shall without delay cause notice to be served upon the person in whose possession the property was seized that it will be sold at once, and shall sell it accordingly unless the amount due including all costs incidental to the notice and the detention of the property be forthwith paid.

(3) Any surplus remaining after deduction from the sale proceeds of all such costs and of any costs of the sale shall be forthwith credited to the Municipal fund, notice of such credit being given at the same time to the person from whose possession the property was taken, but, if the surplus be claimed by written application to the Committee within one year from the date of the notice, a refund thereof shall be made to such person. Any sum not claimed within one year from the date of such notice shall be the property of the Committee.

39. A person introducing or attempting to introduce within octroi limits, or abetting the introduction within octroi limits of, any goods or animals liable to the payment of octroi for which the octroi due on introduction has neither been paid nor tendered, shall be punished with a fine which may extend either to ten times the value of such octroi or to fifty rupees, whichever is greater, and which shall not be less than twice the value of such octroi.

40. Subject to the provisions of any rule, the Committee may by a special resolution confirmed by the Agent to the Governor General provide that all or any persons may be allowed to compound for a tax.

CHAPTER V.—MUNICIPAL FUND AND PROPERTY.

Constitution of Municipal Funds.

41. (1) There shall be formed a Municipal Fund, and there shall be placed to the credit thereof :—

- (a) all sums received by or on behalf of the Committee under this Law or otherwise ;
- (b) all fines realised in cases in which prosecutions are instituted under this Law or the rules made hereunder, or under section 34 of the Police Act, 1861, as locally applied, for offences committed within the Municipal area ;
- (c) the property described in section 7 (b) of this Law ; and this fund, together with all property purchased at its expense, and all property of the nature hereinafter in this section specified and situated within the Municipal area, shall be vested in the Committee ; and, subject to the provisions of this Law and of the rules framed thereunder and to the control of the Agent to the Governor General, the management thereof shall be entrusted to the Committee.

(2) The property hereinbefore referred to includes :—

all public streets and bridges and the pavements, stones and other materials thereof ;

- (b) all land or property acquired by Government or by the Agent to the Governor General or the Committee for local public purposes, and all open spaces, not being private property, adjacent to any street or appertaining to any public place or building which are managed by or under the control of the Committee ;
- (c) all public sewers, drains, culverts and water-courses alongside or under any public street and all works, materials and things appertaining thereto ; and
- (d) all dust, dirt, sewage, refuse, filth and rubbish of any kind, collected by the Committee from the streets, houses, privies, sewers, cesspools or elsewhere, or deposited in any place set apart by it for that purpose.

42. (1) The Committee shall, subject to the provisions of this Law, set apart and apply annually out of the Municipal fund—

- (a) firstly, such sum as may be required for the payment of any amounts falling due on any loan legally contracted for or on behalf of the Committee ;
- (b) secondly, such sum as may be required to meet the charges of the Municipal establishment, including such subscriptions, contributions, and payments as are referred to in section 19.

(2) Subject to the charges specified in sub-section (1) and to such rules as the Agent to the Governor General may make with respect to the priority to be given to the several duties of the Committee, the Municipal fund shall be applicable to the payment, in whole or in part, of the charges and expenses incidental to the following matters within the Municipal area, namely :—

- (a) the construction, maintenance, improvement, cleansing and repair of public streets, bridges, drains, latrines, and water-courses ;
- (b) the watering and lighting of such streets ;
- (c) the construction, establishment and maintenance of rest-houses, markets, pounds and other works of public utility ;
- (d) grants-in-aid to schools, hospitals, dispensaries, poor-houses, leper asylums and other educational or charitable institutions ;
- (e) the supply, storage and preservation from pollution of water for the use of men or animals ;
- (f) the planting and preservation of trees ;
- (g) the taking of a census, the registration of births, marriages and deaths, public vaccination, and any other sanitary measure ;
- (h) the destruction of stray and ownerless dogs ;
- (i) all acts and things which are likely to promote the safety, health, welfare or convenience of the inhabitants, or expenditure whereon may be declared by the Committee, with the sanction of the Agent to the Governor General, to be an appropriate charge on the Municipal fund.

43. The Municipal Fund may be deposited with any banker, or person acting as a banker who has given such security for the safe custody and repayment on demand of the fund so deposited Custody of Municipal Fund. as the Agent to the Governor General may in each case think sufficient.

44. (1) The Committee may, from time to time, with the previous sanction of the Agent to the Governor General, invest any portion of the Municipal Fund in securities of the Government of India or such other securities as the Governor General in Council may, from time to time, approve in this behalf, and vary such investments for others of a like nature.

(2) The income resulting from the securities and the proceeds of the sale thereof shall be credited to the Municipal fund.

- shall be punished with imprisonment for a term which may extend to eight days, or with fine which may extend to fifty rupees.

(2) Whoever omits to take reasonable means to prevent any child under the age of twelve years in his charge from easing himself in any street or public place within the Municipal area, shall be punished with fine which may extend to twenty-five rupees.

Streets and Buildings.

46. The Committee may attach to the outside of any building brackets for lamps in such manner as not to cause injury thereto or inconvenience.

47. (1) The Committee may, with the previous sanction of the Agent to the Governor General, name any street and cause that name and likewise any number to be affixed on any building, and may from time to time, cause such name or number to be altered.

(2) Whoever destroys, pulls down, alters or defaces any such name or number shall, on conviction by a Magistrate, be punished with a fine that may extend to twenty rupees.

48. The Committee may, by public notice, direct that, within certain limits to be fixed Roofs and external walls not to be made of inflammable materials.

by the notice, the roofs and external walls of huts or other buildings shall not, without its permission in writing, be made, or renewed with grass, mats, leaves or other highly inflammable materials, and may, by notice in writing, require any person who has disobeyed any such direction as aforesaid to remove or alter the roofs or walls so made or renewed, as it may think fit.

49. When any land is required for a new street, or for the improvement of an existing street, the Committee may cause to be acquired, in addition to the land to be occupied by the street, the land necessary for the sites of the buildings to be erected on the sides of the street.
- Power to acquire land for building sites adjoining new streets.
50. The Committee may close temporarily any streets, or parts thereof, for any public purpose, and, with the permission of the Agent to the Governor General may divert, discontinue or permanently close any street.
- Power to close streets.
51. The Committee may grant permission in writing for the temporary occupation of any street for the deposit of materials, or for any temporary excavation or erection, subject to such conditions and the payment of such fees as the Agent to the Governor General may prescribe, and may at its discretion withdraw such permission.
- Power to permit temporary occupation of streets, etc.
52. Every person intending to erect, re-erect, alter or repair any building shall give notice of his intention to the Committee and shall, if required to do so, submit a plan showing the levels at which the foundations and lowest floor are to be laid and specifications of the works to be constructed and the materials to be used, and shall obey any written directions consistent with this Law given by the Committee thereupon; and the Committee may prohibit such erection, re-erection, alteration or repair, or sanction it either absolutely or subject to such directions as it may think fit to issue in writing in respect of all or any of the following matters, namely free passage or roadway, free circulation of air, facilities of scavenging, ventilation, drainage level, stability, line of frontage or any other matter which the Agent to the Governor General may, from time to time, prescribe :
- Notice of new building.
- Provided that no compensation shall be claimable on account of any direction or prohibition under this section.
- If the erection, re-erection, alteration or repair of any building is begun without the permission of the Committee or in disobedience to any direction issued by the Committee under this section, or continued contrary to those directions, the Committee may, by notice, require such building to be altered or demolished, and the person so erecting, re-erecting, altering or repairing shall, on conviction by a Magistrate, be liable to a fine not exceeding five hundred rupees.
- Explanation.*—In this section the expression “erect or re-erect any building” includes—
- (a) any material alteration or enlargement of any building ;
 - (b) the conversion into a place for human habitation of any building not originally constructed for human habitation ;
 - (c) the conversion into more than one place for human habitation of a building originally constructed as one such place ;
 - (d) the conversion of two or more places of human habitation into a greater number of such places ;
 - (e) such alterations of the internal arrangement of a building as affect an alteration of its drainage or sanitary arrangements, or affect its security ; and
 - (f) the addition of any rooms, buildings, out-houses or other structures to any building.
53. The Committee may, by notice in writing, require the owner or occupier of any building to remove or alter any projection, encroachment or obstruction built or placed against or in front thereof, if the same overhangs or projects into or encroaches on any street, public drain, aqueduct or sewer.
- Removal of obstructing projections and encroachments.
54. The Committee may, by notice in writing, require the owner of any building in any street to put up and keep in good condition proper troughs and pipes for rain-water, the water from the roof and other parts thereof and for discharging the water so as not to inconvenience persons passing along the street.
- Troughs and pipes for rain-water.
55. The Committee may, by notice in writing, require any person who, without its permission in writing, erects or re-erects any building over any public sewer, drain, culvert, water-course or water-pipe, to pull down or otherwise deal with the said building as it thinks fit.
- Unauthorised buildings over drains, etc.
56. The Committee may, by notice in writing, require the owner, or person claiming to be the owner, of any building or land which, by reason of abandonment or disputed ownership or for any other cause, remains untenanted and there-by becomes a resort of idle and disorderly persons or otherwise a nuisance, to secure or enclose the same within a reasonable time to be fixed in the notice.
- Power to require untenanted buildings becoming a nuisance to be secured or enclosed.

57. The Committee may, by notice in writing, require the owner, lessee or occupier of any land to abstain from the improper use thereof whether by quarrying, or by removing the earth, sand, stone or gravel, or by digging a tank, well or pit.

Dangerous Buildings and Places.

58. If any building, or any well, tank or other excavation is, for want of sufficient repair, protection or enclosure, dangerous to persons passing by, or dwelling or working in the neighbourhood, the Committee may, by notice in writing require the owner or occupier thereof to repair, protect or enclose it; and, if the Committee considers immediate action to be necessary in order to prevent imminent danger, it shall forthwith take such steps as are necessary to avert the danger.

59. If any building, wall or structure, or anything affixed thereto, is deemed by the Committee to be in a ruinous state or in any way dangerous, it may, by notice in writing, require the owner or occupier thereof forthwith either to remove the same or to cause such repairs to be made to it as appear necessary for the public safety; and, if the Committee considers immediate action to be necessary, in order to prevent imminent danger, it may forthwith take such steps as are necessary to avert the danger.

Boundaries, Trees, etc.

60. (1) The Committee may, by public notice, prohibit the construction of boundary-walls, hedges and other fences of any material or description which is, in its opinion, unsuitable, unsightly or otherwise objectionable.

(2) The Committee may, by notice in writing, require the lessee or occupier of any land—

- (a) to remove from the land any boundary-wall, hedge or other fence which is, in its opinion, unsuitable, unsightly or otherwise objectionable;
- (b) to construct on the land sufficient boundary-walls, hedges or other fences of such material, descriptions and dimensions as may be specified in the notice;
- (c) to maintain the boundary-walls, hedges or other fences on the land in good order.

Explanation—In this section, the expression “boundary-walls, hedges or other fences” includes all necessary gates and the posts or pillars thereof.

Felling of trees of mature growth.

61. (1) No tree of mature growth standing in any private enclosure shall be felled without the previous sanction of the Committee.

(2) Where in the opinion of the Committee, the felling of any tree of mature growth standing in a private enclosure is necessary for sanitary reasons, the Committee may, by notice in writing, require the lessee or occupier of the land to fell the tree within a time to be specified in the notice.

Markets and Slaughter-houses.

Sale in markets of articles unfit for human consumption

62. No person shall in any market sell, or expose for sale, any article of food or drink intended for human consumption which is unfit therefor.

63. (1) The Committee may fix and abolish places either within, or, with the sanction of the Agent to the Governor General, beyond the limits of the Municipal area for the slaughter for sale of animals or of animals of any specified description and may with the like approval grant and withdraw licenses for the use of such places, or, if they belong to the Committee, charge rent or fees for the use thereof.

(2) When any such place has been fixed no person shall slaughter for sale any such animal at any other place within the Municipal area.

(3) Whoever slaughters for sale any such animal at any other place within the Municipal area shall, on conviction by a Magistrate, be punished with fine which may extend to twenty rupees.

64. (1) The Committee may charge for the occupation or use of any stall, shop, standing, shed or pen in a public market and for the right to expose goods for sale in a public market and for weighing and measuring goods sold therein, such stallages, rents and fees as shall, from time to time, be fixed by it in this behalf.

(2) A copy of the table of stallages, rents and fees leviable in any public market under sub-section (1), printed in the English language and in such other language or languages as the Committee may direct, shall be affixed in some conspicuous place in the market.

Burial and Burning Places.

65. (1) The Committee may, by public notice, order a burial or burning ground which is certified by the Civil Surgeon or health officer to be dangerous, or likely to be dangerous, to the health of persons living in the neighbourhood to be closed from a date to be specified in the notice, and shall, in such case, if no suitable place for burial or burning exists within a reasonable distance, provide a fitting place for the purpose.

(2) Private burial places in such burial grounds may be excepted from the notice, subject to such conditions as the Committee may impose in this behalf :

Provided that the limits of such burial places are sufficiently defined, and that they shall only be used for the burial of members of the family of the owners thereof.

(3) No burial or burning ground, whether public or private, shall be made or formed without the permission in writing of the Committee.

(4) No person shall, except with the permission of the Committee in writing, bury or burn, or cause to be buried or burnt, a corpse in a place other than a recognized burial or burning ground.

(5) Should a person bury or burn, or cause or permit to be buried or burnt, a corpse, contrary to the provisions of this section, he shall, be liable upon conviction to a fine which may extend to fifty rupees.

Inflammable Materials.

66. The Committee may, should such action appear to be necessary for the prevention of danger to life or property, by public notice, prohibit all persons from stacking or collecting dry grass, straw or other inflammable materials, or placing mats, or erecting booths or thatched huts or lighting fires in any place or within any limits specified in the notice.

Water-pipes, Privies and Drains.

Cesspool, receptacles for filth, etc.

67. The Committee may, by notice in writing,—

- (a) require any person having the control, whether as owner, lessee or occupier, of any land or building—
 - (i) to close any offensive cesspool belonging to the land or building ; or
 - (ii) to provide a receptacle (of pattern, if any, approved by the Committee) for filth accumulating on or in the land or building ; or
 - (iii) to keep in a cleanly condition (in such manner, if any, as may be prescribed by the notice) any receptacle provided for such filth ; or
 - (iv) to prevent the water of any private latrine, urinal, sink or bathroom, or any other offensive matter, from soaking, draining, flowing, or being put from the land or building upon any street or public place or into any water-course or into any drain not intended for the purpose ; or
- (b) require the owner or other person having the control of any private latrine or urinal not to put the same to public use ; or
- (c) where any plan for the construction of private latrines or urinals has been approved by the Committee and copies thereof may be obtained free of charge on application,—
 - (i) require any person repairing or constructing a private latrine or urinal not to allow it to be used until it has been inspected, by or under the direction of, the Committee and approved by it as conforming with that plan, or
 - (ii) require any person having the control of a private latrine or urinal to rebuild or alter it in accordance with that plan ;
- (d) require the owner or other person having the control of any private latrine or urinal which, in the opinion of the Committee, creates a nuisance, to remove the latrine or urinal and to substitute fresh earth, to such a depth not exceeding two feet as may be specified in the notice, for the earth on which the latrine or urinal stood ; or
- (e) require any person having the control, whether as owner, lessee or occupier, of any land or building,—
 - (i) to have any latrine provided therefor shut out by a sufficient roof and wall or fence from the view of persons passing by, or dwelling or working in the neighbourhood, or
 - (ii) to cleanse with deodorants any latrine or urinal belonging to the land or building ; or
- (f) require any person who has the control, whether as owner, lessee or occupier, of any land or building, and has allowed any offensive matter or rubbish to accumulate or remain thereon or therein, to collect the same and deposit it for removal by the public conservancy establishment at such times and in such receptacles or places, situate at not more than one hundred feet from the nearest boundary of the premises, as may be specified in the notice ; or

- (g) where any land or building is situate within one hundred feet of a public drain or other place set apart for the discharge of drainage and the drains belonging to the land or building are, in the opinion of the Committee, insufficient, require any person having control of the land or building, whether as owner or lessee or, in the case of neighbouring lands or buildings, the several lessees or owners having control of the lands or buildings conjointly, to provide sufficient drainage within fifteen days from the service of the notice ; or
- (h) require any person to desist from making or altering any drain leading into a public drain ; or
- (i) require any person who is creating, or likely to create, a nuisance by—
 - (i) altering, obstructing or encroaching upon a public drain, or
 - (ii) impeding the flow of water owing to the absence of a culvert or the existence of an insufficient culvert under a path leading to his premises, to desist therefrom ; or
- (j) require any person who is constructing or laying a drain to obey any directions which the Committee may think fit to give in order to ensure the completion of the work to its satisfaction ; or
- (k) require any person, being the owner and having the control of any drain, to provide and apply to the same within ten days from the service of the notice, such covering as may be specified in the notice ; or
- (l) require any person having the control of a drain to remove, within a period to be specified in the notice, any obstruction therefrom or to clean, purify, repair or alter it or otherwise put it in good order ; or
- (m) require any person, being the owner or having the control of any well to disinfect or otherwise purify it or protect it against contamination in such manner and within such period as may be specified in the notice.

68. (1) The Committee may, by notice in writing, require the owner or lessee of any building or land, in such manner as may be specified in the notice, to remove any latrine,

Provision of latrines, etc.
urinal, cesspool, or other receptacle for filth, or to provide any latrines, urinals, cesspools or other receptacles which should, in its opinion, be provided for the building or land.

(2) The Committee may, by notice in writing, require any person employing more than twenty workmen or labourers to provide such latrines and urinals as it may think fit, and to cause the same to be kept in proper order and to be daily cleaned.

69. The Committee may, by notice in writing, require any owner or occupier on whose land any drain, latrine, urinal, cesspool or other receptacle for filth or refuse for the time being exists within fifty feet of any spring, well, reservoir or other water source, to remove or close the same within one week from the service of such notice.

70. The Committee may, by notice in writing, require the owner or occupier of any land or building to cleanse, repair, cover, fill up or drain off any private land, well, reservoir, pool or excavation therein which appears to it to be injurious to health or offensive to the neighbourhood.

Buildings and ground in unsanitary condition.

71. (1) Where it appears to the Committee that any buildings are unduly crowded together, it may cause them to be inspected by a Special Committee consisting of—

Removal of over-crowded buildings.

- (a) the Civil Surgeon of Alu, or, if his services are not available, some other medical officer of the Government, and
- (b) the Executive Engineer, or some person deputed by the Executive Engineer in this behalf.

(2) The Special Committee shall make a report in writing to the Committee on the sanitary condition of the buildings ; and, if the Special Committee considers that the over-crowding is likely to cause risk of disease to the inhabitants of the buildings or of the neighbourhood, or to endanger the public health, it shall clearly indicate, on a plan verified by the Executive Engineer or by the person deputed by him to serve on his behalf, the buildings which should, wholly or in part, be removed.

(3) If, upon receipt of such report, the Committee is of opinion that all or any of the buildings indicated should be removed, it may, by notice in writing, require the owners thereof to remove them :

Provided, firstly, that the Committee shall make compensation to such owners for any buildings which may have been erected under proper authority ; and

Provided, secondly, that the Committee may, if it appears to be equitable under the circumstances to do so, pay to such owners such sum as it may think fit as compensation for any buildings which may not have been erected under proper authority.

(4) The sum payable as compensation under the first proviso to sub-section (3) may be settled by mutual agreement between the Committee and such owners as aforesaid, or, in default of agreement, by a committee of arbitration appointed by the Agent to the Governor General.

Explanation.—In this section, the word “buildings” includes enclosure walls or fences connected with buildings.

72. Where it appears to the Committee that any building used as a dwelling is so over-crowded as to endanger the health of the inmates thereof, it may, after such inquiry as it thinks fit, by notice in writing, require the owner or occupier, within a time to be specified in the notice, to abate the over-crowding of the building by reducing the number of lodgers, tenants or other inmates.

73. (1) Where any building is so ill-constructed or dilapidated as to be, in the opinion of the Committee, in an insanitary state, the Committee may, by notice in writing, require the owner, within a time to be specified in the notice, to execute such repairs, or to make such alterations, as it may think necessary in order to remove such defects.

(2) A copy of every notice issued under sub-section (1) shall be conspicuously posted on the building to which the notice relates.

Explanation.—A notice issued under sub-section (1) shall be deemed to have been complied with if the owner of the building to which it relates has, instead of executing the repairs or making the alterations directed by the notice, removed the building.

74. The Committee may, by notice in writing, require the owner or occupier of any land to clear away and remove any vegetation, or under-growth which may be injurious to health or offensive to the neighbourhood.

75. The Committee may, by notice in writing, require the owner or occupier of any land to cut or trim the hedges thereof bordering on any street, or any branches of trees growing thereon which overhang any street and obstruct the same or cause danger, or which so overhang any well, tank or other water source as to be likely to pollute the water thereof.

76. If the owner or occupier of any building or land suffers it to be in a filthy or unwholesome state, the Committee may, by notice in writing, require him within twenty-four hours to cleanse the same or otherwise put it in a proper state.

77. (1) Should a building, or a room in a building be, in the opinion of the Committee, unfit for human habitation in consequence of the want of proper means of drainage or ventilation or otherwise, the Committee may, by notice, prohibit the owner or occupier thereof from using the building or room for human habitation or suffering it to be so used either absolutely or unless, within a time to be specified in the notice, he effects such alteration therein as is prescribed in the notice.

(2) Upon failure of a person to whom notice is issued under sub-section (1) to comply therewith, it shall be lawful for the Committee to require by further notice the demolition of the building or room.

78. If the owner of a bungalow, which, before the commencement of this Law, has by custom, agreement, or order of the Agent to the Governor General, been set apart for the residence of Government officials, allows it to fall into an insanitary, dilapidated or uninhabitable condition, and fails, within a reasonable time, to carry out such repairs as the Committee may by written notice direct, the Agent to the Governor General may, after giving the owner fifteen days' notice in writing, proceed either to dispose of the building by public auction, on such conditions as he may think fit to impose, or resume or acquire the site after payment to the owner of such compensation as may appear to the Agent to the Governor General to be equitable in the circumstances.

79. (1) If it appears to the Committee, on the report of the Civil Surgeon of Abu, that the cultivation of any description of crop or the use of any kind of manure or the irrigation of land in any specified manner in any place within the limits of the Municipal area is injurious to the health of persons dwelling in the neighbourhood, it may, by notification, prohibit the cultivation of the crop, the use of the manure, or the irrigation so reported to be injurious, or regulate such cultivation, use or irrigation by imposing such conditions thereon as may prevent injury :

Provided that when on any land to which such notification applies the act prohibited has been practised in the ordinary course of husbandry during the five years next preceding the notification, compensation shall be paid from the Municipal fund to all persons interested therein for any damage caused to them by the effect of such notification.

(2) If any person cultivates, uses manure or irrigates in disregard of the prohibitions or conditions notified under sub-section (1), he shall, on conviction by a Magistrate, be punished with fine which may extend to fifty rupees, and with a further fine which may extend to five rupees for every day after the date of such conviction during which the offender is proved before a Magistrate to have persisted in the offence.

House Accommodation.

80. If before the commencement of this Law, any bungalow has, by custom, agreement, or order of the Agent to the Governor General, Power to cause bungalows set apart for the residence of Government officials to be let to a specified officer.

been set apart as a residence for Government officials, the Committee may, with the previous sanction of the Agent to the Governor General, by notice in writing,—

- (a) require the owner to let the house to the officer named in the notice ;
- (b) require the existing tenant to vacate it ;
- (c) fix the rent payable by the officer named in the notice.

Registration of Trades.

Regulation of offensive and dangerous trades

81. (1) The owner or occupier of every place within the Municipal area used for any of the following purposes, namely :

- (a) melting tallow, or boiling bones, offal or blood ; or
- (b) as a soap house, oil-boiling house, dyeing house, tannery, brick-kiln, pottery or lime-kiln ; or
- (c) as a manufactory or place of business from which offensive or unwholesome smells arise ; or
- (d) as a yard or depôt for trade in hay, straw, thatching grass, wood, coal or other highly inflammable material ; or
- (e) as a store-house for kerosene, petroleum, naphtha or any inflammable oil, spirit or explosive substance ; shall register the same in a book to be kept by the Committee for the purpose.

(2) No place shall be newly used for any of the said purposes except under a license from the Committee which shall be renewable annually.

(3) The license shall not be withheld unless the Committee considers that the business which it is intended to establish or maintain would be offensive or dangerous to persons residing in or frequenting the immediate neighbourhood.

(4) The Committee may charge such fees for such licenses, and may impose such conditions in respect thereof, as the Agent to the Governor General may approve.

(5) Whoever, without such registration or without a license, uses any place for any such purpose shall, on conviction by a Magistrate, be punished with fine which may extend to fifty rupees, and with further fine which may extend to ten rupees for every day during which the offender is proved before a Magistrate to have persisted in the offence after he has been convicted thereof ; and the Committee may, after conviction, by a notice in writing, direct that the use of such place for such purpose shall be discontinued.

(6) The Committee, or any person specially authorised by it in writing in this behalf, may at any time enter and inspect any place or building which there is reason to believe is used without license for any of the purposes enumerated in this section.

82. (1) If it is shown to the satisfaction of the Committee that any place licensed Power to prohibit such trades.

under section 81 is a nuisance to the neighbourhood, or likely to be dangerous to life, health or property, it may, by notice in writing, require the occupier thereof to discontinue the use of the place, or to use it in such manner as will, in the opinion of the Committee, render it no longer a nuisance or dangerous.

(2) Whoever, after such notice has been given, uses any such place, or permits it to be used in disregard of such requisition shall, on conviction, be punished with fine which may extend to two hundred rupees and with further fine which may extend to forty rupees for every subsequent day during which the offence is proved before a Magistrate to have been persisted in.

83. Every book or paper printed within the Municipal area shall have printed legibly on it the name of the printer and the place of printing and (if the book or paper be published) of the publisher and the place of publication.

84. No person shall, within the Municipal area, keep in his possession any press for the printing of books or papers unless he has made and subscribed the following declaration before the Committee:—

"I, A. B., declare that I have a press for printing at " and this last blank shall be filled up with a true and precise description of the place where such press may be situate.

Execution of acts required to be done by any notice.

85. When any notice under this chapter requires any act to be done for which no time is fixed by this Law, it shall fix a reasonable time for doing such act.

86. The Committee may make compensation out of the Municipal fund to any person sustaining any damage by reason of the exercise of any of the powers vested in the Committee, its officers and servants under this Law, and shall make such compensation where the person sustaining the damage was not himself in default in the matter in respect of which the power was exercised: where the compensation is claimable on account of injury to buildings, it shall be settled by mutual agreement between the Committee and the owners of the said buildings, or, in default of agreement, by a committee of arbitration appointed by the Agent to the Governor General.

Appointment of Agents by Absentee Owners.

87. (1) Whoever, being the owner of any building in the Municipal area, is absent therefrom, shall appoint some person residing in or near the Municipal area to act as his agent for all the purposes of this Law and shall notify such appointment to the Committee.

(2) Whoever fails to appoint an agent, as required by sub-section (1), shall be punishable with fine which may extend to twenty rupees, and, in the case of a continuing failure, with an additional fine, not exceeding five rupees for every day during which the offender is proved before a Magistrate to have persisted in the offence after he has been convicted thereof.

CHAPTER VII.—POWERS OF ENTRY AND INSPECTION.

88. The Committee, by itself or by any person generally or specially authorised by it in this behalf, may enter into or on, and inspect any building or land in, on, or in respect of which the Committee has reason to believe:—

- (a) that a breach of any of the provisions of this Law or of the rules made under it has been committed; or
- (b) that any notice issued under this Law has not been duly complied with; or
- (c) that any conditions imposed under this Law have not been duly observed; or
- (d) that any notice should be issued under this Law.

89. (1) The Committee, or any person authorised by it in this behalf, may, after giving six hours' notice in writing to the occupier of any land or building in which any drain, privy or cesspool, is situated, inspect any such drain, privy or cesspool, and may, if necessary, cause the ground to be opened wherever it may think fit for the purpose of preventing or removing any nuisance arising therefrom.

(2) If on such inspection it appears that the opening of the ground was necessary for the prevention or removal of a nuisance, the expenses thereby incurred shall be paid by the owner of the land or building or by the occupier, as the Committee may direct; but if it is found that no nuisance exists, or but for such opening would have existed, the ground shall be closed and made good as soon as may be, and the expense of opening, closing and making it good shall be paid from the Municipal fund.

90. The Committee, or any person authorised by it in this behalf, may, after giving twenty-four hours' notice in writing to the occupier or, if there is no occupier, to the owner of any building, enter and inspect the building and may by notice direct that all or any part thereof be forthwith internally or externally lime-washed, disinfected or otherwise cleansed.

91. The Committee, or any person authorised by it in this behalf, may, after giving twenty-four hours' notice in writing to the occupier or, if there is no occupier, to the owner, of any building or land,—

- (a) enter on and survey and take levels of any land; or
- (b) enter, inspect and measure any building for the purpose of valuation; or

(c) enter into any building or any land for the purpose of examining works under construction, of ascertaining the course of sewers or drains, or of executing or repairing any work authorised by this Law.

92. The Committee, or any person authorised by it in this behalf, may enter and inspect any stable, coach-house or other place wherein there is reason to believe that there is any vehicle or animal liable to taxation.

93. The Committee, or any person authorised by it in writing in this behalf, may, at all reasonable times, enter into and inspect any market, building, shop, stall or place used for sale of food or drink for human consumption or as a slaughter-house, or for sale of drugs, and inspect and examine any food or drink, drug or animal which may be therein, and if any article of food or drink, or any animal therein appears to be intended for human consumption and to be unfit therefor, may seize and remove the same, or may cause it to be destroyed, or to be so disposed of, as to prevent its being exposed for sale or used for such consumption.

And if it is reasonably suspected that any article of food or drink or any drug has been adulterated in such manner as to render it noxious or to lessen its efficacy, or to change its operation, may remove the same giving a receipt therefor, and may cause it to be brought before a Magistrate for inquiry whether any offence has been committed in respect thereof and for his orders as to its disposal.

Time of entry. 94. Every entry made under any of the foregoing sections 88 to 93, shall be made between sunrise and sunset :

Provided that, if in any such case the authority empowered by any of the said sections to make or authorise an entry thinks it necessary in the interest of the public health or safety that entry should be made at any other time it may, for reasons to be recorded in writing make such entry or authorise it to be made, at any reasonable time between sunset and sunrise.

95. (1) The Committee may provide for the performance by its agents of the duties usually performed by sweepers in respect of any buildings or lands, or of any drains, privies, cess-pools or other receptacles for offensive matter pertaining to buildings or lands.

(2) Such provision may be made in respect of individual buildings or lands, or of buildings or lands generally.

(3) Nothing in this section or section 25 shall be deemed to preclude the Committee from making provision of a different nature for different buildings or lands, and charging scavenging tax at different rates therefor, or from exempting wholly or in part from such tax at its discretion any individual who has made arrangements to its satisfaction for the performance of the duties aforesaid.

(4) The servants of the Committee employed in house-scavenging may enter on any property at all reasonable times so far as may be necessary for the proper discharge of their duties; and the Committee, or any person authorised by it in this behalf, may enter on any property at all reasonable times for the purpose of ascertaining that such duties have been duly performed.

CHAPTER VIII.—OFFENCES AFFECTING THE PUBLIC HEALTH, SAFETY OR CONVENIENCE.

96. Whoever, without the permission of the Committee, causes or allows the water of any sink, sewer or cesspool or any other offensive matter, to pass or be put upon any street or public place, or into any sewer or drain not set apart for the purpose shall, on conviction by a Magistrate, be punished with fine which may extend to fifty rupees.

97. Whoever, being the owner or occupier of any building or land, keeps or allows to be kept for more than twenty-four hours, or otherwise than in some proper receptacle, any dirt, dung, bones, ashes, night-soil or filth, or any noxious or offensive matter, in or upon such building or land, or suffers any such receptacle to be in a filthy or noxious state, or neglects to employ proper means to cleanse and purify it, shall, on conviction by a Magistrate, be punished with fine which may extend to fifty rupees.

98. Whoever, without the permission of the Committee, makes or causes to be made, or alters or causes to be altered, any drain leading to any public sewer or drain under the management of the Committee, shall, on conviction by a Magistrate, be punished with fine which may extend to fifty rupees.

99. Whoever makes, without the permission of the Committee, or keeps for a longer time

Penalty for making or keeping latrines, etc., near any source of water-supply.

than one week after notice to remove, issued under section 69, any drain, latrine, urinal, cess-pool or other receptacle for filth or refuse within fifty feet of any spring, well, tank, reservoir or other water source, shall, on conviction by a Magistrate, be punished with fine which may extend to twenty rupees, and, when a notice has been issued, with a further fine which may extend to five rupees for each day during which the offender is proved before a Magistrate to have persisted in the offence after the lapse of the period allowed for removal.

100. Whoever keeps any swine in disregard of any orders which the Committee may give to prevent them from becoming a nuisance, or keeps any other animals so as to be injurious to health or to become a nuisance, shall, on conviction by a Magistrate, be punished with fine which may extend to twenty rupees, and with a further fine which may extend to five rupees for every day during which the offender is proved before a Magistrate to have persisted in the offence after he has been convicted thereof.

Keeping animals so as to be injurious to health.

Acts done by persons suffering from certain disorders.

101. Whoever, while suffering from an infectious, contagious or loathsome disorder,—

(a) makes or offers for sale any article of food or drink for human consumption, or any medicine or drug, or

(b) takes any part in the business of washing, or of carrying, soiled clothes, shall be punished with fine which may extend to twenty rupees.

102. Whoever drives any vehicle after dark in a street unless the vehicle is properly supplied with lights, or there is sufficient moon-light to render lights unnecessary, shall, on conviction by a Magistrate, be punished with fine which may extend to twenty rupees.

Driving vehicles without proper lights.

103. Whoever discharges fire-arms or air-guns or lets off fire-works or fire-balloons or engages in any game in such a manner as to cause danger to persons passing by or dwelling or working in the neighbourhood or risk of injury to property, shall, on conviction by a Magistrate, be punished with fine which may extend to twenty rupees.

Discharging fire-arms, fire-works, etc.

104. Whoever being the owner or person in charge of any dog which is likely to annoy or intimidate passengers, allows it to be at large without a muzzle in any street or public place, shall, on conviction by a Magistrate, be punished with fine which may extend to twenty rupees.

Suffering dogs to be at large.

105. Whoever, without the permission of the Committee, alters, obstructs, or encroaches upon any street or public drain, aqueduct or sewer or displaces, takes up, or alters the pavement or other materials or the fences or posts of any street or public place, or deposits building materials or makes any hole or excavation on or in any street, shall, on conviction by a Magistrate, be punished with fine which may extend to one hundred rupees.

Altering, obstructing or encroaching upon streets, etc.

106. Whoever, in any street or public place, loiters for the purpose of prostitution or Loitering or importuning for sexual immorality.

importunes any person to the commission of sexual immorality, shall be punished with imprisonment for a term which may extend to eight days, or with fine which may extend to fifty rupees :

Provided that no Court shall take cognizance of an offence under this section except on the complaint of the person importuned, or on the complaint of a Municipal officer or a police officer not below the rank of Sub-Inspector respectively authorized in this behalf in writing by the Committee or the District Magistrate.

107. Whoever, without being authorised by the Committee, defaces or disturbs any direction-post, or lamp-post or extinguishes any light in any street or public place, shall, on conviction by a Magistrate, be punished with fine which may extend to twenty rupees.

Destroying direction-posts, lamp-posts, etc.

108. Whoever prints or publishes any book or paper otherwise than in conformity with Penalty for printing, publishing or keeping a press contrary to rules in sections 83 and 84.

the provisions of section 83 of this Law, or keeps in his possession any such press as aforesaid without making the declaration required by section 84 of this Law, shall, on conviction by a Magistrate, be punished with fine not exceeding five rupees or with expulsion from the area or with both.

109. Whoever disobeys any lawful directions given by public notice or disobeys any written notice lawfully issued under the powers conferred by Chapter VI or by sections 114 and 115 or by rules under section 112 of this Law, or fails to comply with the conditions subject to which any permission was given to him under those powers, shall, if the disobedience or failure is not an offence punishable under any other section, on conviction before a Magistrate, be punished with fine which may extend to fifty rupees, and in the case of a continuing breach, with a further fine which may extend to five rupees for every day after the date of the conviction during which he is proved before a Magistrate to have persisted in the disobedience or failure :

Provided that when the notice fixes a time within which a certain act is to be done and no time is specified in this Law, it shall rest with the Magistrate to determine whether the time so fixed was a reasonable time within the meaning of the Law.

110. Whoever sells to the prejudice of the purchaser any article of food or any drug which is not of the nature, substance or quality of the article or drug demanded by such purchaser, or sells or offers or exposes for sale or manufactures for sale any article of food or any drug which is not of the nature, substance or quality which it purports to be, shall, on conviction before a Magistrate be punished for the first offence with fine which may extend to one hundred rupees and for a second or any subsequent offence with fine which may extend to five hundred rupees :

Provided that no offence shall be deemed to have been committed under this section in the following cases, that is to say—

- (a) where any matter or ingredient not injurious to health has been added to the food or drug because the same is required for the production or preparation thereof as an article of commerce in a state fit for carriage or consumption, and not fraudulently to increase the bulk, weight or measure of the food or drug or conceal the inferior quality thereof ;
- (b) where in the process of production, preparation or conveyance of such article of food or drug some extraneous substance has unavoidably become intermixed therewith ;
- (c) where any matter or ingredient not injurious to health has been added to or mixed with such article of food or drug and before the sale thereof the seller has brought to the notice of the purchaser, either by means of a label distinctly and legibly written or printed on or with the article or drug or otherwise, the fact that such matter or ingredient has been so added or mixed ;
- (d) where the article of food or drug is a proprietary food or medicine.

In a prosecution under this section the Court may presume that any article of food or any drug found in the possession of a person who is in the habit of manufacturing like articles or drugs has been manufactured for sale.

CHAPTER IX.—CONTROL.

Control.
Governor General.

111. The Committee shall be subject in all respects to the control of the Agent to the Rules.

the purposes of this Law.

112. (1) The Agent to the Governor General may, from time to time, make rules to carry out

(2) In particular and without prejudice to the generality of the foregoing power such rules may provide for—

- (a) (i) the duties and terms of office of members of the Committee ;
- (ii) the conduct of proceedings at meetings of the Committee ;
- (b) the assessment and recovery of taxes, fees and monies claimable under this Law and for preventing evasion thereof ;
- (c) the authority on which money may be paid from the Municipal Fund ;
- (d) the condition on which property in the Municipal area may be transferred by sale mortgage, lease, exchange or otherwise ;
- (e) the control of traffic, public processions and music ;
- (f) the registration of births and deaths, the regulation of vaccination, compulsory or otherwise, and the taking of a census ;
- (g) the offences under this Law or under rules made or enactments extended thereunder which shall be cognizable by the police ;
- (h) the proper regulation of hotels and buildings let in lodgings or occupied by more than one family ;
- (i) the proper regulation of cattle pounds, dhobi-ghats, and serais ;
- (j) the prevention and treatment of infectious or contagious disorders ;

(k) the regulation and guidance of committees appointed under sections 71 and 86 and for the conduct of proceedings at meetings of such committees; and

(l) the exemption of persons or localities from the provisions of this Law.

(3) In making any rule under this section, the Agent to the Governor General may direct that the breach of it shall be punished, on conviction by a Magistrate, with fine which may extend to fifty rupees, and, when the breach is a continuing breach, with a further fine which may extend to five rupees for every day after the date of such conviction during which the offender is proved before a Magistrate to have persisted in the offence.

(4) No rule under sub-section (1) shall come into force until it has been notified by the Agent to the Governor General.

113. The Committee may, with the previous sanction of the Agent to the Governor General, by resolution, delegate to the Chairman, Vice-Chairman or a sub-committee all or any of the powers conferred upon it by this Law in respect of all or particular classes of cases arising thereunder and may with the like sanction by resolution withdraw the powers so delegated.

Removal and exclusion from Municipal area of disorderly persons, etc

114. (1) The District Magistrate, on receiving information that any person, whether resident in or frequenting the Municipal area—

(a) is a disorderly person keeping or frequenting a common gaming house, a disorderly drinking-shop or a disorderly house of any other description, or

XLV of 1890.

(b) has been convicted more than once, either within the Municipal area or elsewhere, of an offence punishable under Chapter XVII of the Indian Penal Code; or

V of 1898.

(c) has been ordered, under Chapter VIII of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, either within the Municipal area or elsewhere, to execute a bond for his good behaviour, may make an order, in writing, setting forth the substance of the information received, and issue a summons requiring the person to show cause why he should not be required to remove from the Municipal area and be prohibited from re-entering it.

(2) Every summons issued under sub-section (1) shall be accompanied by a copy of the order aforesaid, and the copy shall be delivered by the officer serving the summons to the person on whom the summons is served.

(3) The District Magistrate shall, when the person so summoned appears before him, proceed to inquire into the truth of the information received and take such further evidence as he thinks fit. If upon such inquiry, it appears to him to be necessary for the maintenance of good order that the person should be required to remove from the Municipal area and be prohibited from re-entering it, the District Magistrate shall report the matter to the Agent to the Governor General. If the Agent to the Governor General so directs, the District Magistrate shall issue a notice in writing requiring the person to remove from the Municipal area within a time to be specified in the notice and prohibiting him from re-entering it without the permission in writing of the Agent to the Governor General.

115. The Agent to the Governor General, if he thinks it expedient to exclude any person from the Municipal area, whether with or without assigning any reason therefor, shall send to the District Magistrate an order in writing to that effect, and the District Magistrate shall cause a copy of the order to be served on the person, together with a notice in writing requiring him to remove from the Municipal area within a time to be specified in the notice, and prohibiting him from re-entering it without the permission in writing of the Agent to the Governor General:

Provided that no such order as aforesaid shall be made where the only reason for making it is that the person—

(a) is disorderly, or

XLV of 1890.

(b) has been convicted of an offence punishable under Chapter XVII of the Indian Penal Code, or

V of 1898.

(c) has been ordered under Chapter VIII of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, to execute a bond for his good behaviour.

116. Whoever, knowing that any person has, under section 114 or section 115, been required to remove from the Municipal area and has not obtained the requisite permission to re-enter it, harbours or conceals such person in the Municipal area, shall be punished with imprisonment for a term which may extend to eight days, or with fine which may extend to fifty rupees.

CHAPTER X—SUPPLEMENTARY.

117. If any member, officer, or servant of the Committee is, otherwise than with the permission in writing of the Agent to the Governor General, directly or indirectly interested in any contract made with the Committee, he shall be deemed to have committed an offence under section 168 of the Indian Penal Code XLV of 1860.

118. No suit or prosecution shall be entertained by any Court against the Committee or any officer or person for anything in good faith done, or purporting to be done, in pursuance of powers conferred by or under this Law on such Committee, officer or person, whether the thing done was or was not authorised by the powers so conferred.

119. Where under this Law the permission of the Committee is required for the doing of any act and application is made to the Committee for such permission, if the Committee for a period of three months from the receipt of such application neglects to pass any orders thereon, such permission shall be deemed to have been granted.

120. (1) Where any person fails to perform any act which he has, by a notice issued under this Law, been required to perform, the Committee may cause the act to be performed and may recover the cost from him.

(2) Any monies recoverable by the Committee under sub-section (1) may be recovered either by suit or, on application to a Magistrate having jurisdiction in the Municipal area, by distress or sale of the moveable property of the person from whom the money is recoverable, and, if recoverable from an owner of property, shall, until it is paid, be a charge on the property.

121. When any land, whether within or without the limits of the Municipality, is required for the purposes of this Law, the Agent to the Governor General may, at the request of the Committee, proceed to acquire it under the provisions of the Land Acquisition Act, 1894, and, on payment by the Committee of the compensation awarded under that Act, and of the charges incurred by the Government in connection with the proceedings, the land shall vest in the Committee. I of 1894.

122. No Judge or Magistrate shall be deemed to be a party to, or interested in, any prosecution for an offence punishable under this Law or any rule thereunder or any other law, within the meaning of section 556 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, by reason only of his being or having been a member of the Committee by the order or under the authority of which it has been instituted, or because as an officer of the Committee he merely approved the prosecution. V of 1898

123. Subject to such rules as the Agent to the Governor General may make under section 112 prescribing the offences which shall be cognizable by the police, no Court shall take cognizance of an offence punishable under this Law or under any enactment extended or rule made thereunder except on the complaint of the Committee or of some person authorised by it in this behalf.

In default of payment of any fine imposed under this Law or any enactment extended or rule made thereunder, the defaulter shall be liable to simple imprisonment for a term not exceeding eight days.

124. Nothing contained in this Law shall be construed to prevent any person from being prosecuted under any other law for any offence made punishable by this Law or from being liable under any other law to any higher penalty or punishment than is provided for such offence by this Law or by any rules made thereunder:

Provided that no person shall be punished twice for the same offence.

125. Any arrear of any tax or any fee or other money claimable by or on behalf of the Committee may, in addition to any method of recovery provided under section 112, be recovered, on application to a Magistrate having jurisdiction within the limits of the Municipal area, by the distress and sale of any moveable property within those limits belonging to the person from whom the money is claimable; and if payable by the owner in respect of any property, moveable or immovable, such arrear shall be a charge on the property.

126. No act done and no proceeding taken under this Law shall be questioned on account of any defect or irregularity not affecting the merits of the case.

No. 266-G1. (A).—In pursuance of Rule 22 of the Rules made by the Government of India under section 14 of the Indian Securities Act, XIII of 1886, and published in the Gazette of India of the 7th January 1888, page 6, the following list is hereby advertised of Securities lost or destroyed, in respect of which an order has been made for payment of interest pending the issue of a duplicate Security, or for the issue of such duplicate Security. All persons, other than the respective claimants named below, who have any claim upon these Securities should communicate immediately with the Controller of Currency, the Treasury, Calcutta.

The list is divided into two parts,—Part A being the list of Securities now advertised for the first time, and Part B the list of Securities previously advertised.

N.B.—Under section 13 of the said Act, Government will be discharged from all liability in respect of these original Securities after the lapse of six years from (a) the several dates stated against them in the last column of the list, or (b) the last payment of interest on them, whichever date is the later.

TELEGRAPHS.

The 1st March 1919.

No. 1931-D.—In exercise of the powers conferred by section 7 of the Indian Telegraph Act, 1885 (XIII of 1885), the Governor General in Council is pleased to direct that the following amendments shall be made in the rules published with the notification of the Government of India in the Department of Commerce and Industry No. 6975-137, dated the 16th September 1909, as subsequently amended, namely :—

1. For rule 18 the following rule shall be substituted, namely :—

"18. Language, etc.—The text of private telegrams may be in plain language, in code language, or in cipher, or partly in one and partly in the other :—

- (a) Plain Language is that which offers an intelligible sense in English, or in any foreign language, or in any of the vernacular languages subject to the conditions of rule 17.
- (b) By "Telegrams in Plain Language" is understood those of which the text is written entirely in plain language. Nevertheless, the presence of code addresses exchange quotations, commercial marks, letters representing the signals of the International Code of Signals employed in maritime telegrams, of abbreviated expressions currently used in ordinary or commercial correspondence such as resp., fob., cfi., cif., caf., sup., s/o., b/l., mo., vpp., am., pm., % or any other analogous expressions, the meaning of which is understood at the office of origin, does not alter the character of a telegram in plain language.
- (c) If in telegrams in which the text is written entirely in plain language, any single word or authorised compound contains more than 15 characters according to the Morse alphabet, the excess is counted separately as one word.
- (d) Code Language is that which is composed of words which do not form intelligible phrases in one or more of the languages authorised for telegraphic correspondence in plain language. The words, whether genuine or artificial, must be formed of syllables capable of pronunciation according to the current usage of one of the following languages :—

English, French, German, Italian, Dutch, Spanish, Portuguese or Latin. Artificial words must not contain the accented letters ä, á, a, é, ñ, ö, ü. Genuine vernacular words are also admissible.

(e) Words in code language must not contain more than 10 characters according to the Morse alphabet (Rule 17), the combinations ae, aa, ao, oe, ue, being counted as two letters each. The combination "oh" is also counted as two letters in artificial words.

(f) Combinations, which do not fulfil the conditions of clauses (d) and (e), are considered as belonging to letter cipher language [clause (g)] and charged accordingly. Compounds composed of two or more words in plain language, combined contrary to the usage of the language are not admitted. (See also rule 51 et seq.)

(g) Cipher language is that which is composed—

(1) either of Arabic figures or groups or series of Arabic figures having a secret meaning, or of letters (excluding the accented letters ä, á, a, é, ñ, ö, ü), groups or series of letters having a secret meaning.

(2) Of words, names, expressions or combinations of letters not fulfilling the conditions of plain language [clauses (a), (b) and (c)] or of code language [clauses (d) and (e)].

(h) The employment in one group of figures and letters having a secret meaning is not admitted. It is desirable to avoid the use of letter cipher, as far as possible, as it is less easy to transmit than pronounceable groups of letters, and is, therefore, more liable to error. In cases where it is necessary to employ letter cipher it should be arranged in groups of five letters in order to facilitate transmission.

(i) The groups referred to in clause (b) are not considered as letter cipher, i.e., as letters having a secret meaning.

(j) Words in plain language inserted in the text of a mixed telegram, i.e., a telegram composed of words in plain language and words in code language, must not contain more than ten characters according to the Morse alphabet, and any excess is counted separately as one word in each case.

(k) If the mixed telegram contains, in addition, cipher language, the passages in cipher are counted according to the stipulations of rule 55.

(l) If the mixed telegram is composed only of passages in plain language and of passages in cipher language, the passages in plain language are counted according to the stipulations of clause (c) and the passages in cipher language according to those of rule 55.

(m) The address or sender's name in telegrams of which the text is written wholly or partly in code language is charged according to the stipulations of rule 53 and clause (c).

) Registered abbreviated addresses are treated as plain language [clause (c)] when occurring in the address or as the sender's name in both plain and code language telegrams and also in the text as plain language telegrams. When in the text of a code language telegram, they are treated according to clause (j).

2. For rule 37 the following rule shall be substituted, namely :—

"7. Language.—The text of State telegrams may in all cases be composed of secret language (i.e., code and cipher) but a combination in the same telegram of figures and letters, having a secret meaning, is not admitted."

TRADING BY FOREIGNERS.

The 1st March 1919.

LICENCE.

No. 1918-D.—Whereas by paragraph 5 of the Trading with the Enemy Proclamation No. 2, dated the 9th day of September 1914, as amended and extended by the Proclamation, dated the 5th day of November 1914, and by the Proclamation, dated the 16th day of October 1915, trade and financial or commercial transactions between British subjects and persons or bodies of persons resident in the territories of the German Empire or in the dual Monarchy of Austria-Hungary or in the respective colonies and dependencies thereof, or in the territories of the Sultan of Turkey (other than Egypt or any territory in the occupation of the British Government or its Allies), or in the territories of the King of the Bulgarians in this licence or in the said Proclamation referred to as "enemy country" are prohibited; and,

Whereas by paragraph 8 of the said Proclamation it is provided that nothing in the Proclamation shall be taken to prohibit anything which may be expressly permitted by licence whether such licence be granted to individuals or be announced as applying to persons; and

Whereas by paragraph 3 of Proclamation, dated the 8th October 1914, power to grant such licences on behalf of the Crown may be exercised in India by the Governor General;

Now, therefore, I, Frederic John Napier Thesiger, Baron Chelmsford, hereby authorise all persons residing, being, or carrying on business in British India to trade or carry on business with persons resident in or carrying on business in Palestine and Syria as far north as a line from Alexandretta to Aleppo inclusive and as far east as the Hejaz Railway inclusive, provided that nothing in this licence shall be taken as permitting the payment or delivery to persons resident or carrying on business within the said territory of the following monies and classes of property :—

- (a) any sum payable to or paid for an enemy by way of dividend, interest or share of profits;
- (b) any sum which has been paid into any account with a Bank or to any other person in trust for an enemy;
- (c) interest on securities issued by or on behalf of Government or the Government of any of His Majesty's Dominions or any foreign Government or by or on behalf of any corporation or any municipal or other authority whether within or without British India;
- (d) securities which have become repayable on maturity or by being drawn for payment or otherwise;
- (e) property real or personal (including any rights, whether legal or equitable, in or arising out of property real or personal) held or managed for or on behalf of an enemy;
- (f) shares, stock, debentures and debenture stock and other obligations of a company which are held by or for the benefit of an enemy;
- (g) any share of profits and interest due to enemies who were partners in a company;
- (h) Bank balances and deposits standing to the credit of enemies and debts to enemies of £50 or upwards.

No. 1949 Rifleman Dhanbir Gurung, 8th Gurkha Rifles.

For conspicuous gallantry and coolness in action. On the night of 22nd-23rd June 1918, this rifleman was one of a patrol which was sent out to obtain information regarding the enemy's post a mile and a half in front of our lines, and if possible capture a prisoner. On approaching the post this man advanced with the patrol commander until close to the enemy's double sentry post. As arranged with the officer he killed one of the sentries with his kukri, and prepared to assist in bringing back the other sentry as a prisoner. The remainder of the enemy who were only ten yards away were, however, disturbed by the noise, and opened a heavy fire, so the two were compelled to kill the second sentry, after which they made their way safely back to their patrol.

Subadar Sher Muhammad Khan, 2nd Patiala Imperial Service Infantry, attached 1st Patiala Imperial Service Infantry.

For gallant and meritorious service. During recent operations he was badly shot through the wrist on the first day the regiment went into action. Though suffering considerable pain he refused to be evacuated and remained on duty throughout the operations another five days.

*War Office,
11th January, 1919.*

His Majesty the KING has been graciously pleased to approve of the following awards to the undermentioned Officers and Warrant Officers in recognition of their gallantry and devotion to duty in the Field :—

* * * * *

AWARDED A BAR TO DISTINGUISHED SERVICE ORDER.

* * * * *

Maj. (T./Lt.-Col.) Cudbert John Massy Thornhill, D.S.O., I.A.

(N. RUSSIA.)

For conspicuous gallantry and ability in command of the "Onega" force. With a small detachment he made a most dashing attack on the enemy, who were in far superior numbers, and by the vigour of his attack was successful in detaching a large force of the enemy, who would otherwise have opposed us at Archangel. Throughout all operations the marked courage displayed by Colonel Thornhill inspired all ranks serving under his command.

(D.S.O. gazetted 1st January, 1918.)

* * * * *

AWARDED THE DISTINGUISHED SERVICE ORDER.

Maj. and Bt. Lt.-Col. Percy Langdon Beddy, 51st Sikhs.

(MESOPOTAMIA.)

For conspicuous gallantry and good leadership. It was largely due to the skill and initiative with which he handled his battalion in the attack following on a night march of twenty miles that the enemy were driven back in a running fight extending over six miles, and by early next morning were turned out of two strongly-prepared positions two miles apart.

* * * * *

Maj. and Bt. Lt.-Col. Sydney Boyce Combe, M.C., 47th Sikhs.

(MESOPOTAMIA.)

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He carried out a reconnaissance of the enemy's position under heavy fire, pushed back the enemy picquets, and assaulted and carried the whole of his objective, three lines of the enemy trenches. Later, though having suffered heavy casualties in officers and men, he successfully beat off a counter-attack. He has shown great judgment and ability in command on all occasions.

* * * *

Lt.-Col. Wilfrid James Mitchell, 2-124th Baluchistan Infy.

(MESOPOTAMIA.)

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He handled his battalion most skilfully in the attack, and in spite of heavy casualties from a strong point on his flank, succeeded in capturing his objective. His courage and perseverance on this occasion were most marked.

* * * *

AWARDED A BAR TO MILITARY CROSS.

* * * *

Capt. Raleigh Blandy, M.C., 2-9th Gurkha Rifs.

(MESOPOTAMIA.)

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He commanded with great ability a patrol which, under the fire of the enemy, discovered after dark a ford over the river by which the troops crossed on the following night. But for his intrepid action the troops would not have been able to cross.

(M.C. gazetted 25th August, 1917.)

* * * *

Lt. William Peat Hogg, M.C., Indian Medical Service.

(MESOPOTAMIA.)

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When his aid post was heavily shelled he collected all his casualties with great coolness and promptitude, and conducted them to a new post. He has previously done similar fine work in action.

(M.C. gazetted 7th February, 1918.)

* * * *

Lt. Adrian Horatius Erskine Lindop, M.C., I.A.R.O., attd. 37th Dogras, now attd. R.A.F.

(MESOPOTAMIA.)

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He forded a river, passed through the enemy picquet line, and brought back most valuable information. On a previous occasion he reconnoitred the sluice at the head of the river, although fired on continuously.

(M.C. gazetted 25th August, 1917.)

* * * *

Capt. Henry Augustus Wellesley, M.C., 2/5th Gurkha Rifles, I.A.

(MESOPOTAMIA.)

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He handled his battalion with the greatest coolness and determination, maintaining his position in close touch with the enemy until nightfall. By his fine personal example he encouraged all ranks who hung on in a most defiant manner.

(M.C. gazetted 25th August, 1917.)

* * * *

AWARDED THE MILITARY CROSS.

* * * *

Lt. Hilary Gilbert Allum, I.A.R.O., attd. 16th Sqdn., M.G.C.

(MESOPOTAMIA.)

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He displayed great courage and coolness in carrying out a successful withdrawal of all his machine guns and horses under intense shell fire. He had previously done good work under trying and hazardous circumstances.

Jemadar Ami Lal, 3rd Skinner's Horse, attd. 16th Sqdn., M.G.C.

(MESOPOTAMIA.)

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in charge of a sub-section of machine guns supporting the advance of the cavalry. Although exposed to heavy fire he continued to use his guns with great skill and coolness until the last squadron of cavalry had withdrawn. On another occasion he showed great coolness and judgment when in charge of led horses which were heavily shelled and suffered casualties.

* * * *

Lt. Bawa Harkishan Singh, Indian Medical Service.

(MESOPOTAMIA.)

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty and coolness under fire when in charge of the dressing station of the ambulance. The dressing station came under heavy fire at night and the situation was critical for a time. He, however, collected the wounded and brought them in. He also showed great coolness and initiative when the ambulance was bombed by aeroplanes during and after the attack.

* * * *

Capt. Vernon Beadon, U.L., attd. 2-9th Gurkha Rifles.

(MESOPOTAMIA.)

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He displayed great coolness and determination during an advance against a strong enemy position. Owing to his able handling, his company, though heavily fired on, suffered very few casualties.

* * * *

Lt. Norman Burgan, 1st, attd., 2-4th Gurkha Rifles.

(MESOPOTAMIA.)

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. This officer displayed great coolness in action and made several excellent reconnaissances of the fords over the river under fire, bringing back information which was of the greatest value.

* * * *

Lt. John McClintock Clive, I.A.R.O., attd., 47th Sikhs.

(MESOPOTAMIA.)

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He led his company with great coolness and skill under heavy fire, and still continued to do so after being wounded. He helped further to consolidate the position, and exposed himself fearlessly in order to direct better the repulse of the counter-attack which ensued.

* * * *

2nd Lt. Terence Claud Crichton, I.A., attd., 5th Cavalry.

(MESOPOTAMIA.)

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in an attack on houses held by malcontents. On one occasion he climbed on to the shoulders of one of his men, fired at the enemy defending the opposite wall, and then dropped into the court, followed by his men.

* * * *

Subadar Dhirat Sing Pundir, 2-39th Garhwal Rifles.

(MESOPOTAMIA.)

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. His platoon throughout two days' operations was the most heavily engaged. He was posted on the right of the line, and came under severe enfilade fire. He displayed great courage, coolness and ability while directing the fire of his men, until a bullet broke his leg.

* * * *

Capt. John Gordon Gibson, 14th Lancers.

(MESOPOTAMIA.)

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He constantly carried orders under fire to squadron leaders and other officers. He displayed great coolness and an utter disregard for personal safety in doing so.

* * * *

Lt. (A./Capt.) Douglas Maxwell Arthur Herbert, 82nd Punjabis.

(MESOPOTAMIA.)

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when a demonstration against the enemy position appeared likely to fail. He promptly reinforced the party, and by his coolness and resolute advance under heavy fire made the demonstration a success. He has always shown great energy and determination in action.

* * * *

Capt. Lionel William Hughes, 125th Napier's Rifles.

(MESOPOTAMIA.)

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He showed great skill and ability in commanding his company both during the final assault on the enemy position and in its consolidation under heavy fire. He has on all occasions displayed courage and coolness in action.

* * * *

2nd Lt. Edward Humphries, D.C.M., Ind. Sig. Serv., attd., 13th Div. Sig. Coy.

(MESOPOTAMIA.)

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of a cable wagon. Although shelled by the enemy, and having to abandon the wagon, he continued to lay the cable and so kept up communication with brigades.

* * * *

T./Lt. Ratenshaw Nariman Kapadia, Indian Medical Service.

(MESOPOTAMIA.)

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Exposed to heavy fire, he continued throughout the action to collect and dress the wounded, who were much scattered, thereby saving many lives.

* * * *

(MESOPOTAMIA.)

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He displayed coolness and enterprise of a high order, and his movements during the action completely outwitted the enemy. He also led a party of swimmers across a swift and treacherous part of the river to discover if the enemy had a gun hidden on a stranded launch.

* * * *

Lt. Geoffrey D'Olier Maclear, I.A.R.O., att'd, 2-39th Garhwal Rifles.

(MESOPOTAMIA.)

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in an attack. He was with the leading company, and although he received a severe wound in the neck, and another bullet in the shoulder, it was not until he had got a bullet in the knee that he stopped advancing. Cool and dashing, his conduct was magnificent throughout.

* * * *

Lt. Eric Prideaux McIntosh, I.A.R.O., att'd., 13th Lancers.

(MESOPOTAMIA.)

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. With a small patrol he penetrated the enemy's lines, returning undetected at daylight with four prisoners, including two officers, having extricated his patrol from a position of considerable danger.

* * * *

Lt. (A./Capt.) Ronald Gervase Mountain, 127th Baluchistan Light Infantry, att'd., 2-12th Baluchistan Infy.

(MESOPOTAMIA.)

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He led his company in an attack with great courage and dash, though wounded in the leg. Later, in an exposed salient of a captured trench, which was heavily swept by fire from front and flank, he collected five Lewis guns and brought a harassing fire to bear on an enemy strong point, thereby greatly assisting another attack made later in the day.

* * * *

(MESOPOTAMIA.)

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He was with a patrol which penetrated the enemy's lines at night, gaining much valuable information and bringing back four prisoners, including two officers. He was of great assistance to his British officer in extricating the patrol from a position of considerable danger.

* * * *

Lt. Arthur Reginald Nye, I.A.R.O., att'd., 2-4th Gurkha Rifles.

(MESOPOTAMIA.)

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He exposed himself freely under heavy fire in order to visit all portions of his front line. His cool and fearless conduct encouraged his men, thereby turning a temporary check into a successful offensive.

* * * *

Lt. (A./Capt.) Charles Henry Kerr Phillips, I.A.R.O., att'd., 24th Punjabis.

(MESOPOTAMIA.)

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an attack. He worked continuously without rest for thirty-six hours, and rendered the greatest assistance. He showed great coolness under fire, and his conduct throughout was of a high order.

* * * *

Lt. (A./Capt.) Charles Knowler Tester, 6th Jat Light Inf.

(MESOPOTAMIA.)

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in action. He worked unceasingly under fire for two days and nights, showing an utter disregard of danger and inspiring all ranks to greater efforts.

* * * *

Capt. Robert Tilly, 123rd Rifles, attd. 51st Sikhs.

(MESOPOTAMIA).

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He led the attack and held it together under heavy enfilade fire. He had to expose himself continuously to do so, and displayed fearlessness of a high order. Owing to casualties among British officers there was a danger of the attack becoming disconnected, and it was entirely due to his gallant leading that this danger was obviated.

* * * * *

Lt. John Dennis Twinberrow, 59th Rif., I.A.

(MESOPOTAMIA).

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He led his company in the attack on three consecutive lines of enemy trenches with great courage and dash, and, though a very young soldier, handled his men with coolness and skill.

* * * * *

Lt. (A./Capt.) William Hoare Hatchell Young, I.A.R.O., attd. 59th Rifles.

(MESOPOTAMIA).

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in action. Whilst exposed to heavy fire he carried out his arduous duties with efficiency and zeal. He was severely wounded.

RAILWAY DEPARTMENT.

(RAILWAY BOARD.)

NOTIFICATIONS.

Delhi, the 24th February 1919.

No. 946-P.-16.—It is hereby notified for general information, that the Railway Board have sanctioned a reconnaissance survey being carried out by the agency of the Darjeeling Himalayan Railway Company for a line of railway on the 2 feet gauge from Ghum, a station on the Darjeeling Himalayan Railway to Simana Bustee on the Nepal frontier, a distance of about 10 miles.

2. The survey will be known as the Ghum Simana Bustee railway reconnaissance survey.

The 25th February 1919.

No. 307-E.-19.—Mr. E. B. Beatson, Executive Engineer, North Western Railway, is transferred to the Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway.

The 26th February 1919.

No. 3-T.—18.—In exercise of the powers conferred by the Notification of the Government of India in the Department of Commerce and Industry, No. 801, dated the 24th March 1905, and in pursuance of section 47, subsection 3 of the Indian Railways Act, 1890 (IX of 1890), as in force in British India or as locally applied, the Railway Board sanction the following rules made by the Barsi Light Railway Company, Limited, under sub-section (1), clauses (f) and (g) of the said section, for and to be applicable to the Barsi Light Railway System situate in British India or in Native States, for regulating the terms and conditions on which the Railway Administration will warehouse or retain goods at any station or depôt on the Barsi Light Railway, on behalf of the consignee or owner, and for regulating the use of rolling stock, engines and trains on the said railway by the public.

BARS LIGHT RAILWAY COMPANY, LIMITED.

I.—RULES FOR THE WAREHOUSING AND RETENTION OF GOODS.

Wharfage.

1. Wharfage should be calculated—

- (1) where freight is levied on weight—upon such weight ;
- (2) where freight is levied on the vehicle in or on which the goods are carried—upon the carrying capacity of such vehicle.

Circumstances.	Time allowed free.	Commodities.	Rate per maund or part of a maund per day or part of a day in excess of the free time.	REMARKS.
On goods for despatch waiting to be consigned, i.e., consignments brought to station, but consignment notes not received.	Closing time of the day.	For all commodities.	1 anna . . .	Goods will in all cases be at owner's risk until a receipt in the prescribed form has been granted duly signed by an authorised railway servant.
On goods available for delivery.
Consignments not removed	From time of arrival till closing time of the day following that on which consignments are made available for delivery.	Do.	1 anna . . .	The goods shall be warehoused either under cover or in the open as space may be available.

2. A consignee must take delivery of goods forming part of a consignment whenever they are available for delivery, notwithstanding that the remaining goods are short or damaged or have not arrived at their destination or otherwise not available for delivery ; and, if the consignee does not take delivery of such goods forming part of a consignment as are available for delivery, they will be subject to wharfage charges if not removed within the time allowed for removal.

On Luggage and Parcels Available for Delivery.

3. For unclaimed booked luggage and parcels, the following warehouse charge will be made if they are not removed from railway premises within 7 days from the date of receipt :—

2 annas per package for first 24 hours or part of 24 hours.

1 anna per package for each subsequent day or part of a day.

On Carriages, Motor Cars and Palanquins.

4. (a) Carriages, motor cars, and palanquins left on the Company's premises over the Barsi Light Railway awaiting removal by consignee will, after the expiration of 24 hours from the time they are available for delivery, be subject to a wharfage charge of Rs. 2 per carriage or motor car, and Re. 1 per palanquin for each subsequent day or part thereof.

(b) A similar charge will be levied on all carriages, motor cars and palanquins left on the Company's premises awaiting despatch order from consignor after the expiration of 24 hours from the time they are brought to the station, but until a railway receipt is granted the Railway does not acknowledge any responsibility in respect to such carriages, motor cars or palanquins which must be at owner's risk.

On Birds, Poultry and Animals.

5. For birds, poultry and animals, charges may be made as follows, after the expiry of 6 hours from the time they are available for delivery :—

Animals—One anna per animal per hour or part of an hour.

Poultry—One anna per head per hour or part of an hour.

Birds in baskets or crates, etc.—One anna per cubic foot or part of a cubic foot per hour or part of an hour.

These charges to be in addition to any expenses entailed in feeding the birds, animals, etc.

Under any circumstances, live animals should be removed from the Railway premises within 24 hours from the time of their arrival at destination, failing which they may be disposed of under section 56, clause 2, Railways Act IX of 1890.

Notice of Arrival.

6. The Barsi Light Railway Company do not undertake to send notice of arrival of goods and parcels to consignees; and the absence of such notice will not entitle consignees to claim exemption from wharfage or demurrage or storage charges if goods and parcels are not removed within the time allowed. Endeavours will, however, be made at receiving stations to advise consignees, when practicable, of the arrival of their goods and parcels. The cost of advices sent by post will be borne by the Company.

Treatment and Disposal of Unclaimed Goods and Parcels.

7. (a) Subject to the exception mentioned in Rule (e) below, unclaimed goods (parcels and luggage) are kept on hand at the station to which booked for a period of not less than one month, during which time the notice prescribed in section 56, sub-section (1) of the Indian Railways Act (IX of 1890), will be issued if the owner of the goods or person entitled thereto is known.

(b) If not taken delivery of within a period of not less than one month after receipt at the station to which invoiced or waybilled, unclaimed goods, luggage and parcels will be sent to the Unclaimed Goods or Lost Property Office and dealt with as laid down in Rule (f) below.

(c) Unclaimed articles will be liable to the wharfage and demurrage charges hereinbefore referred to, as well as to all freight and special expenditure incurred by the Railway on account of their custody and disposal.

(d) Where articles such as arms, ammunition, explosives, intoxicating liquors, opium and its preparations and hemp drugs, the sale of which by unlicensed persons is prohibited by law, are left unclaimed in the possession of the Railway, they will be made over to the Police or Excise authorities for disposal under the laws affecting the article. When not of a dangerous, perishable or offensive character, they will, however, be retained in the possession of the Railway for the same period as that prescribed for other unclaimed articles.

This rule, in so far as it relates to explosives, is supplemental to, and not in modification of, the rules made under the Indian Explosives Act.

(e) Perishable articles unclaimed or not taken delivery of, will be disposed of by auction at owner's risk and expense by the station master of the station at which they may be left after the expiry of 24 hours or earlier if they are, or are likely to become, offensive.

(f) Public sales by auction will be held every quarter of the year of all unclaimed or lost property, which has remained in the possession of the railway over 6 months. At least fifteen days' previous notice of each auction will be given by advertisement in a newspaper.

(g) Any surplus proceeds arising out of sale of lost property or unclaimed consignments after payment of all charges and expenses due to the Railway will be paid to the person or persons thereto entitled.

Lost Property.

8. (a) Lost property found in Railway vehicles or on Railway premises will, subject to the exception mentioned in paragraph (e) above, be sent to the Lost Property Office after 48 hours, and will be dealt with in the same manner as unclaimed booked goods.

(b) Application for the recovery of lost property should be made to the nearest station master, and also to the Traffic Manager, Kurduwadi, marked on the outside cover "Lost Property".

(c) The Lost Property Office is situated at Barsi Town.

(d) A fee of four annas is charged for each article when claimed at the Lost Property Office within one month, and 8 annas for every succeeding month or part of a month.

Left Luggage Offices or Cloak Rooms.

9. (a) Luggage may be placed for temporary custody in charge of the station masters at certain stations.

(b) A left luggage ticket will be given to any person depositing luggage or parcels for custody in a cloak room; and delivery will be made to any person presenting such receipt ticket, after which all responsibility of the Railway Administration in respect of such luggage or parcels shall absolutely cease and determine. The person presenting the ticket must sign his name on the ticket and enter the date. An Indemnity Bond should be executed by the owner in all cases of loss of Left Luggage Receipts.

(c) Before a left luggage ticket is given, the luggage ticket issued at the forwarding station in the case of luggage received by railway must be collected.

(d) A charge of 2 annas per package will be levied for each 24 hours or part of 24 hours, during which the luggage or parcel remains in a cloak room.

For the purpose of this rule, Sundays, Good Friday and Christmas Day are not considered dies non. The charge will be calculated from the time the package is deposited in the cloak room. This time will be marked on the Left Luggage Ticket just below the date.

(e) The responsibility of the Railway Administration for articles left in a cloak room shall be that of a bailee under sections 151, 152 and 161 of the Indian Contract Act, 1872 (IX of 1872).

Articles deposited in cloak rooms, which are unclaimed, will, after a period of one month, be transferred to the Lost Property Office and be dealt with as prescribed in rules for unclaimed packages.

II.—RULES FOR REGULATING THE USE OF ROLLING STOCK, ENGINES AND TRAINS.

10. Demurrage.

Circumstances.	Time allowed free.	Rate per ton or part of a ton of carrying capacity per hour or part of an hour in excess of the free time.	REMARKS.
IN RAILWAY PREMISES.
On vehicles ordered and waiting to be loaded by senders or detained for consignment note or otherwise owing to default of or at the request of the sender.	6 hours of day-light from the time at which the vehicles are placed in position.	4 pies.
On loaded vehicles waiting to be discharged by owners.	6 hours of day-light from the time at which the vehicles are placed in position for unloading.	4 pies.	The Railway Administration will at its option unload the vehicles and charge the consignee for doing so and will also charge wharfage on the contents under Rule 1.
IN PRIVATE SIDINGS.
On vehicles waiting to be loaded at a private siding.	6 hours of day-light from the time at which the vehicles are placed in the siding.	4 pies.
On loaded vehicles waiting to be discharged in a private siding.	6 hours of day-light from the time at which the vehicles are shunted in the siding.	4 pies.

NOTE.—Day-light hours are reckoned as from 6 to 18 o'clock.

Demurrage Charge on Reserved Carriages.

11. When for the convenience of passengers, reserved carriages are detained at intermediate stations, a charge of 12 annas for an 8-wheeled carriage per hour or part of an hour will be made, but the charge will only be collected when orders to this effect are specially issued.

The same charge applies for detention to carriages ordered by intending passengers and not used from the time the vehicle is available till the time when intimation is received that it is not required.

Demurrage Charge for Engine.

12. A demurrage charge of Rs. 8 per hour or part of an hour on account of engine hire will be made for the extra hours if an engine of a public special train is detained en route at the party's request.

III.—CALCULATION OF CHARGES.

13. In calculating wharfage and demurrage charges, fractions of one anna less than 6 pies shall be dropped and 6 pies and over shall be charged as one anna. When the total amount of demurrage or wharfage due on any consignment is less than 2 annas it shall be foregone.

IV.—GENERAL.

14. (a) In the event of goods requiring to be loaded or unloaded by owners becoming liable to both demurrage and wharfage charges, the Railway Administration may levy both demurrage and wharfage charges for such periods as the goods would be liable to such charges under these rules.

(b) If and for so long as the state of the traffic or any sudden emergency makes it necessary and after advertisement in the local newspapers, the rate of demurrage or wharfage may be increased and the free time may be curtailed.

(c) Sundays, Christmas Day and Good Friday will be reckoned in charging demurrage on all wagons made available for unloading on those days and stations will also be opened for unloading of wagons on those days so that merchants receiving wagons to their addresses, which they are required to unload, may do so.

This does not apply in the case of wharfage in which connection the above days will be treated as dies non as hitherto.

(d) Explosives or dangerous goods must be removed by the consignee from the receiving station during the 12 hours of day-light after arrival; if this condition is not strictly complied with, the Railway Administration may return the consignment to the consignor at his risk and expense.

(e) The Railway Administration have the same lien on goods for demurrage and wharfage, and, if incurred, for unloading as for freight, and these charges must be paid before the goods are removed.

PART IV.

Acts of the Indian Legislative Council assented to by the Governor General.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

The following Act of the Indian Legislative Council received the assent of the Governor General on the 26th February, 1919, and is hereby promulgated for general information :—

ACT NO. I OF 1919.

An Act to extend the powers of local authorities in regard to the granting of pensions and gratuities.

WHEREAS it is expedient to extend the powers of local authorities in regard to the granting of pensions and gratuities ; It is hereby enacted as follows :—

1. (1) This Act may be called the Local Authorities Pensions and Gratuities Act, 1919.
Short title and extent.

(2) It extends to the whole of British India, including the Sonthal Parganas.

2. In this Act "officer" means any person who has undertaken the service of Government and who, immediately prior to undertaking such service, was paid and employed solely by a local authority and, but for undertaking such service, would in the ordinary course have continued in such employment.
Definition.

3. Notwithstanding anything contained in any enactment or in any rule made thereunder regulating the powers of local authorities, and without prejudice to any powers conferred by or under any such enactment, a local authority may grant a pension or gratuity to any officer thereof who may, since the fourth day of August, 1914, have been wounded or otherwise incapacitated in the service of Government, and to the widow or child of any such officer who may have died in consequence of injuries received or illness contracted since the fourth day of August, 1914, in the course of such service.

4. (1) Such pension or gratuity may be granted Provision as to pen- in addition to any pension slons and gratuities. or gratuity payable to the officer or his wife or child, as the case may be, under any general or special orders of His Majesty in Council or of the Governor General in Council, but shall not, save with the sanction of the Governor General in Council, exceed the amount of the pension or gratuity to which the officer or his wife or child would have been entitled under any such orders if his employment by the local authority had been service for the same time and on the same pay under Government.

(2) Any pension granted under this Act may be made to take effect from such date subsequent to the fourth day of August, 1914, and subject to such conditions as the local authority may think fit.

5. Subject to the provisions of this Act, the decision of a local authority to grant a pension or gratuity thereunder shall be made in such manner and shall be subject to such sanction as may be prescribed by any enactment or rule regulating the grant by such local authority of pensions and gratuities :
Procedure.

Provided that in every case the sanction of the Local Government shall be necessary.

Bills introduced in the Indian Legislative Council, Reports of Select Committees presented to the Council, and Bills published under Rule 23.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

The following Bill was introduced in the Indian Legislative Council on the 26th February, 1919 :—

No. 6 of 1919.

A Bill further to amend the Indian Oaths Act, 1873.

WHEREAS it is expedient further to amend the Indian Oaths Act, 1873 ; It is hereby enacted X of 1873. as follows :—

1. This Act may be called the Indian Oaths
Short title. (Amendment) Act, 1919.
2. In section 3 of the Indian Oaths Act, 1873, X of 1873.
Amendment of section after the word "prescribed,"
3 of Act X of 1873. the words "by or under any Instruction under the Royal Sign Manual of His Majesty or " shall be inserted.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

The assumption of their high offices by the Governor General, Governors, Lieutenant-Governors, Members of Executive Councils and Chief Commissioners is at present lacking in any formality of a nature to mark the serious nature of the occasion or the weight of responsibility involved. It is accordingly proposed, with the approval of the Secretary of State, that oaths or affirmations of allegiance and office should in future be taken with due solemnity by the officials concerned at the time of entering upon the discharge of their duties.

2. Section 16 of the Indian Oaths Act, 1873, is a bar to the taking of an oath by officials who are not required to take one under any provision of law; and since it is intended to effect the purpose in view by the issue of Instructions to the Governor General under the Royal Sign Manual of His Majesty, it is necessary to except oaths, etc., taken in compliance with such Instructions from the operation of the Act of 1873. The Bill amends section 3 accordingly.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

The following Bill was introduced in the Indian Legislative Council on the 26th February, 1919 :—

No. 7 of 1919.

A Bill further to amend the Indian Electricity Act, 1910.

WHEREAS it is expedient further to amend the Indian Electricity Act, 1910 ; It is hereby enacted as follows :—

1. This Act may be called the Indian Electricity
Short title. (Amendment)
Act, 191 .

2. For clause (b) of sub-section (2) of section of 1910. 8 of the Indian Electricity
Amendment of section Act, 1910, the following 8, Act IX of 1910. shall be substituted, namely :—

“(b) Before granting a license under this Part, the Local Government shall consult every local authority concerned, and where such local authority advances any objection to the grant of a license, the Local Government shall take such objection into consideration, and, if in its opinion it is insufficient, it shall record in writing and communicate to such authority its reasons for such opinion :

Provided that, if such objection is based on a rival claim for such a license, the Local Government shall give preference to the application of the local authority unless there exist special circumstances which, in its opinion, render such preference inexpedient.”

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

UNDER the old Indian Electricity Act, III of 1903, there was an obligation imposed on the Local Government to consult every local authority, as a preliminary measure, on the merits of an application from any person for a license. Under the new Act IX of 1910, this provision has been abolished, and a local authority is reduced to the position of a private individual, who is at liberty to raise objections against the draft application within the prescribed period. Formerly, a local authority had two opportunities of stating its case to the Local Government; now there is only one opportunity for it to raise a protest. The provisions of the old Act embodied in section 4 (1) (a) are, therefore, proposed to be enacted.

Secondly, a proviso is added that when a local authority puts up a rival claim for a license, it shall receive the first consideration inasmuch as it is the proper body entrusted with the interests of the residents of the local area. A joint stock company formed on business consideration ought to have a secondary claim for a license. A local authority has a right to purchase the undertaking under section 7 of the Act, after a certain prescribed period. It follows, therefore, as a natural corollary that if the said authority is willing and able to finance the scheme from its ordinary revenue, or by means of a loan to be raised under the Local Authorities Loans Act, there is no reason why a company of share-holders or another person should have the business from the beginning.

The following Bill was introduced in the Indian Legislative Council on the 26th February, 1919 :—

No. 8 OF 1919.

A Bill further to amend the Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881.

WHEREAS it is expedient further to amend the Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881 ; It is hereby enacted as follows :—

1. This Act may be called the Negotiable Instruments (Amendment) Act, 191 .
Short title.
2. In section 9 of the Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, (hereinafter called the said Act), for the words "payable to, or to the order of, a payee," the words "payable to order" shall be substituted.
Amendment of section 9 of Act XXVI of 1881.
3. For sub-section (1) of section 13 of the said Act, the following sub-section shall be substituted, namely :—
Amendment of section 13 of Act XXVI of 1881.
“(1) A “negotiable instrument” means a promissory note, bill of exchange or cheque payable either to order or to bearer.
Explanation (i).—A promissory note, bill of exchange or cheque is payable to order which is expressed to be so payable or which is expressed to be payable to a particular person, and does not contain words prohibiting transfer or indicating an intention that it shall not be transferable.

Explanation (ii).—A promissory note, bill of exchange or cheque is payable to bearer which is expressed to be so payable or on which the only or last indorsement is an indorsement in blank.

Explanation (iii).—Where a promissory note, bill of exchange or cheque, either originally or by indorsement, is expressed to be payable to the order of a specified person, and not to him or his order, it is nevertheless payable to him or his order at his option.”

4. In section 48 of the said Act for the words “payable to the order of a specified person, or to a specified person or order,” the words “payable to order” shall be substituted.
Amendment of section 48 of Act XXVI of 1881.

5. In section 121 of the said Act for the words “payable to, or to the order of, a specified person,” the words “payable to order” shall be substituted.
Amendment of section 121 of Act XXVI of 1881.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

UNDER section 8, sub-section (4) of the English Bills of Exchange Act, 1882, “a Bill is payable to order which is expressed to be so payable or which is expressed to be payable to a particular person and does not contain words prohibiting transfer or indicating an intention that it should be transferable.” If, therefore, a drawer of a cheque in England desires it to be not negotiable, the words “not negotiable” should be stamped across the face of the cheque, and if he fails to do so, the cheque would be treated as a negotiable instrument although the word “bearer” printed on the cheque is scored through and the word “order” not substituted therefor. In India, too, the mercantile community as well as the banks deal with cheques payable to a specified person without the addition of the words “or order” or “or bearer” in accordance with the English law, namely as cheques payable to that person or his order. It has, however, been recently ruled by the Bombay High Court in Dosabhai vs. Virchand that “a cheque from which the word ‘bearer’ is struck out and there is no substitution of the word ‘order’ is not negotiable within the meaning of the Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881 ; and that the custom of trade which exists in the Bombay market whereby a cheque with the word ‘bearer’ struck out without the word ‘order’ is regarded as an ‘order’ cheque and negotiable cannot legally be recognized.”

This decision has caused a good deal of confusion in commercial and banking circles.

The proposed Bill is, therefore, intended to bring the provisions of the Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, into line with the hitherto existing practice in India.

Proceedings of the Indian Legislative Council.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE INDIAN LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL ASSEMBLED UNDER THE PROVISIONS OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA ACT, 1915.
(5 & 6 Geo. V. Ch. 61.)

The Council met at the Council Chamber, Imperial Secretariat, Delhi, on Wednesday, the 19th February, 1919.

PRESENT :

His Excellency BARON CHELMSFORD, P.C., G.M.S.I., G.M.I.E., G.C.M.G., G.C.B.E., Viceroy and Governor General, presiding, and 47 Members, of whom 40 were Additional Members.

STATEMENT LAID ON THE TABLE.

The Hon'ble Sir Claude Hill :—"In pursuance of your Excellency's promise in your opening speech, I now lay on the table a statement* reviewing the Foodstuffs position up to date, giving details of the steps taken by the Government of India in respect of the control of foodstuffs up to date, estimating the present position and forecasting the results of the measures that we have adopted."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur B. D. Shukul asked :—

1. "Has the feasibility of adopting Indian vernaculars as the media of instruction for Indian pupils in Agricultural Schools and Colleges as a means of popularising agricultural education amongst agricultural classes been considered? If so, with what result?"

* Vide Appendix A.

[Sir Claude Hill ; Rai Bahadur B. D. Shukul.] [19TH FEBRUARY, 1919.]

The Hon'ble Sir Claude Hill replied :—

" At the instance of the Board of Agriculture in India which met at Poona in December, 1917, a scheme for the establishment of Agricultural Middle Schools in the various provinces has been commended to Local Governments and Administrations, but the question whether the schools should be vernacular or Anglo-vernacular has been left to their decision in accordance with local conditions. I may add that in the Bombay Presidency and Sind vernacular Agricultural Schools have been established, and it is proposed to open similar schools in the Central Provinces.

It would not be feasible to adopt Indian vernaculars as the media of instruction in the advanced course of study at Agricultural Colleges, but the Colleges at Lyallpur and Cawnpore have vernacular classes or courses for the sons of agriculturists."

The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur B. D. Shukul asked :—

Information regarding certain heads for the current financial year.

2. " Will Government please furnish information as regards each province relating to the following heads for the current financial year up to 31st December 1918 :—

- (a) Areas affected by famine and scarcity.
- (b) Total amount of suspensions and remissions of the land-revenue.
- (c) Number of persons in receipt of gratuitous relief.
- (d) Number of persons working on relief works and the amount spent thereon.
- (e) Amount of taccavi advances—
 - (i) for seed and bullocks ;
 - (ii) for land improvement.
- (f) Other measures of relief adopted to relieve distress ?"

The Hon'ble Sir Claude Hill replied :—

" The scarcity situation in India had not sufficiently developed by the end of the year 1918 for information to be collated on some of the points dealt with in the Hon'ble Member's question. So far as the information asked for is available, it is given below :—

- (a) No famine had been declared in any part of India on 31st December last. Scarcity had been declared in—
 - (1) a portion of the Garhwal district of the United Provinces ;
 - (2) Sironcha tahsil of the Chanda district, Sihora and Murwara tahsils of the Jubbulpore district, Banda tahsil of the Saugor district and the whole of the Damoh district in the Central Provinces ; and
 - (3) the districts of Ahmedabad, Kaira, Panch Mahals, Ahmednagar, Nasik, Poona and West Khandesh and in the Kathiawar Agency in the Bombay Presidency.

In certain other areas, as I shall show, preliminary measures had been taken, although it had not then been found necessary to declare the existence of famine or scarcity.

- (b) The information is not yet available.
- (c) The numbers in receipt of gratuitous relief in the week ending 28th December last were—

(1)	United Provinces, Garhwal	511
(2)	Bihar and Orissa, Angul	971
(3)	Central Provinces, {	Jubbulpore	1,479
		Damoh	654
		Chanda	1,636
(4)	Central India, {	Lugasi	117
		Bijna	57

[19TH FEBRUARY, 1919.] [Sir Claude Hill; Rai Bahadur B. D. Shukul;
Sir William Vincent.]

(d) No regular relief works had then been opened; but the numbers of persons on test works for the same week were—

(1) United Provinces,	{ Etawah	1,762
	{ Allahabad	155
	{ Jalaun	839
(2) Central Provinces,	{ Damoh	369
	{ Chanda	261

The amount spent on these works during 1918 is not known, but must clearly have been very small.

(e) Statistics of the actual distribution of taccavi before the end of the year are not available; but the following additional grants had by then been sanctioned by the Government of India for distribution as taccavi, mainly with a view to stimulate the sowing of rabi crops, including land improvement and the purchase of seed and fodder :—

	R
United Provinces	1,94,60,000
Punjab	5,00,000
Central Provinces	11,50,000
Ajmer-Merwara	55,000
North-West Frontier Province	1,80,000

(f) Other measures of relief include a grant of R2 lakhs to the Central Provinces for the relief of weavers; and the Madras Government allotted R4,000 for the same purpose in the Anantapur District. Concession rates were introduced for the carriage of fodder by rail to affected areas in the Punjab, the United Provinces and Rajputana; and a grant of R2,58,000 was made for the importation by Government agency of fodder to Ajmer-Merwara. Fodder Controllers were appointed in the Bombay Presidency and the Punjab."

The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur B. D. Shukul asked :—

*3. "(a) Do the Government of India possess any knowledge of the formation of an association in the Province of Bihar and Orissa known as the 'Bihar and Orissa Civil Service Association,' and, if so, will Government please state the aims and objects of the association and the scope of its activities, and whether the organisers of the association had obtained any previous sanction from Government?"

Bihar and Orissa Civil Service Association.

(b) Are the members of the Indian Civil Service, as Government servants, not precluded from organising themselves into a political body?"

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent replied :—

"The Government of India are aware that there is in the Province of Bihar and Orissa as well as in other provinces an Indian Civil Service Association which exists for the purpose, amongst others, of enabling the members of the Service to discuss matters which affect them as a body. A copy of the Government Servants' Conduct Rules on the question of Government servants taking part in political movements is laid on the table."

So far as the Government of India are aware the Bihar and Orissa Indian Civil Service Association has not taken part in any political movement, nor has it contravened this rule."

The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur B. D. Shukul asked :—

4. "(a) Will Government please lay upon the table a statement giving salt figures for the last ten years ending March 1918, showing the proportion borne by salt produced under each of the following three systems separately to the total production of salt and the normal price thereof prevailing in each year:—

* Not included in these Proceedings.

- (i) The Excise license system.
- (ii) The monopoly system.
- (iii) Government factories.

(b) Is it a fact that Government had not under their control a sufficient quantity of salt to meet the balance between supply and demand at the normal price, and that this fact partly contributed to the abnormal rise in prices of late ?

(c) If so, will Government state what action they have taken or propose to take with a view to ensure a continuous flow of supply of a reasonably good quantity of salt at a reasonable price in future ? ”

The Hon'ble Mr. A. H. Ley replied :—

“ (a) As the terms ‘ Excise License System ’ and ‘ Monopoly System ’ are only used in the Madras Presidency, and as an important proportion of that Presidency's salt is now produced under a combination of these two systems, it is impossible to follow the Hon'ble Member's classification. On the assumption that the Hon'ble Member desires to know what proportion of the annual production of salt is initially in Government's hand, a statement* is laid on the table showing the production—

- (i) of Government and Excise Salt in Madras ;
- (ii) of Baragra and Sea Salt in Bombay ; and
- (iii) by the Northern India Salt Revenue Department.

No figures are available to show the normal price of each kind of salt for the last ten years. But a statement* is laid on the table showing the average annual retail price of salt in each Province.

(b) Deficiencies in supply, due to bad seasons, partly contributed to the recent rise in prices ; but the primary causes were the heavy falling off in imports and reckless speculation.

(c) As regards measures to increase production which, it is hoped, will ensure a continuous supply of salt at a reasonable price in future, the Hon'ble Member is referred to the answer given to the Hon'ble Mr. Sarma in the Council of 23rd September, 1918, of which, if he so desires, I shall be very glad to send him a copy.”

The Hon'ble Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda asked :—

Increased freight on rice from Burma.

5. “ (a) Is it a fact that there is scarcity in several parts of the country and the situation threatens to be acute in several provinces ?

(b) Is it a fact that the freight on rice from Burma has now been increased from R6 to R55 per ton ?

(c) If so, do Government propose to consider the necessity of reducing the freight to the pre-war rate ? ”

The Hon'ble Sir Claude Hill replied :—

“ (a) It is a fact that there is scarcity in several parts of the country, but it is only in comparatively small areas that it threatens at present to be acute.

(b) and (c) The freight on rice from Rangoon to Bombay was, until the 15th January, 1919, at R55 per ton, the pre-war rate varying from R7 to R10. The Hon'ble Member is referred to the Press Note issued on the 10th January by the Foodstuffs Commissioner, announcing that the Agent in India to the Shipping Controller had agreed to a reduction in the rate from Rangoon to Bombay to R40 per ton, proportionate reductions being made of freight rates to other Indian ports. On the 30th January a further reduction to R30 per ton in the case of freight to Bombay was announced by the Foodstuffs Commissioner

* Vide Appendix B to these Proceedings.

after consultation with the Agent in India to the Shipping Controller and the Shipping Companies concerned. This rate as also the reduced rates to other ports then announced will remain in force for a minimum period of three months."

The Hon'ble Mr. V. J. Patel asked :—

6. "(a) Is it a fact that a special officer was appointed to the Railway Board a year and a half ago? If so, what are his duties and what is the work entrusted to him at present?"

Appointment of a Special officer to the Railway
Board.

(b) Has any report been prepared by him, or is there any brochure concerning his work? If so, is the said report or brochure to be published?"

The Hon'ble Sir Arthur Anderson replied :—

"It is a fact that a temporary officer was employed by the Railway Board to write a Monograph on Indian Railway rates and connected subjects. He has produced a work of some 600 pages which will shortly be on sale by the Superintendent, Government Printing. His connection with Government terminated on 31st January, 1919."

The Hon'ble Mr. V. J. Patel asked :—

7. "Do Government propose to accept the view contained in paragraph 317 of the Montagu-Chelmsford Report on Indian Constitutional Reforms that there should be in all services that are now recruited in England a fixed percentage of recruitment in India increasing annually?"

Paragraph 317 of the Indian Constitutional Reforms
Report.

(b) If the answer to part (a) be in the affirmative, will Government give the public an opportunity to express themselves on their proposals before the same are laid before the Secretary of State for India in Council?"

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent replied :—

"(a) The matter is at present under the consideration of the Government of India.

(b) It is open to any member of the public or any association to avail themselves of the invitation extended in paragraph 354 of the Report to express an opinion upon it."

The Hon'ble Mr. V. J. Patel asked :—

8. "In giving effect to the various recommendations of the Public Services Commission in the direction of Indianising some of the Imperial Services which would involve reduced terms of employment, do Government propose to take steps to guard, if necessary, the existing vested interests of the present members of the lower Services who are eligible for promotion to the Imperial Services on the higher terms now in force?"

Guarding of interests of members eligible for promotion to Imperial Services.

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent replied :—

"Generally speaking the Government of India have every desire to protect the vested interests of existing members of the various services, but the recommendations of the Commission are still under discussion and consideration, and the conclusions reached will have to be submitted for the final approval of the Secretary of State. While, therefore, it is impossible to make any more definite statement in reply to a question couched in such general terms, it would be helpful if the Hon'ble Member would supply a list of the recommendations of the Commission to which he refers as involving reduced terms of employment."

The Hon'ble Mr. V. J. Patel asked :—

9. "(a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to a letter purporting to come from 'Indian Clerks' which appeared in the Bombay Chronicle of the 30th December, 1918?"

Residential accommodation of Indian and Anglo-Indian clerks at New Delhi.

[Mr. V. J. Patel; Sir Claude Hill; Sir William Vincent.] [19TH FEBRUARY, 1919.]

(b) Will Government be pleased to state the respective residential accommodation provided for Indian and Anglo-Indian clerks at New Delhi?"

The Hon'ble Sir Claude Hill replied :—

" The answer to (a) is in the affirmative. With reference to (b) statements* are placed on the table showing in detail the accommodation which is provided for in the designs approved for European and Indian clerks' quarters in New Delhi. It may be remarked that representatives of the Indian clerks were consulted by me before the designs were approved, and that suggestions made by them were carried out as far as practicable. Generally speaking the designs for the Indian clerks' quarters have been made so as to ensure that privacy in home life which it has been ascertained the very large majority of clerks desire. It has also been arranged that a few quarters similar to those built for European clerks will be set apart for the use of senior Indian clerks who may prefer to adopt a European style of living. During the present season only two classes of quarters intended for Indian clerks have been available, viz., Class D intended for clerks drawing salaries of R101 to R200, and Class E intended for clerks drawing salaries of less than R100. On the other hand, the classes of European clerks' quarters available have been :—

Class II intended for clerks drawing salaries of R201 to 300 and chumeries intended for bachelors. New Delhi accommodation has been resorted to this year on account of congestion, and in the case both of European and of Indian clerks the allotment of accommodation has been made without regard to the seniority of the occupants, and it may thus have happened that some Indian clerks are housed in houses of a class inferior and that some European clerks are housed in houses of a class superior to what they were entitled to. With the construction of houses of the remaining classes in both categories this will be remedied.

As regards the other matters complained of by the writer to the Bombay Chronicle the provision of furniture free of charge is a temporary arrangement. If furniture is provided at all hereafter as a permanent measure, the question of the payment of rent on the basis of value supplied will be considered. With regard to the provision of electric light it has been decided in the first instance not to provide electric light for either European or Indian clerks on pay of less than R200 per mensem as it is considered that few clerks on this rate of pay will wish to pay for an electric installation. If a demand arises, it will be met.

It is not the case, as stated by the writer, that the floors of the Indians' quarters are kutchra. They are pukka, though, owing to the impossibility of securing cement, it was not possible to carry out, in the case of all quarters, the full specification, and on some of them the pukka flooring is composed of lime concrete, which has proved not quite satisfactory. This will be put right as soon as possible. The complaint about the kitchens will be investigated but, as every kitchen is provided with its own cooking place and flue, there is no reason why smoke should penetrate into other rooms."

The Hon'ble Mr. V. J. Patel asked :—

Views of Indian Civil Servants regarding the Reforms
Report.

10. " Will Government be pleased to state whether they have called upon the Indian Civil Servants to express their views on any of the recommendations of the Reforms Report?"

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent replied :—

" The Government of India suggested to the Provincial Governments that, before submitting their views to the Government of India, they should consult selected officials. Individual officers belonging to the Indian Civil Service and other services were thus given an opportunity to express their views."

*Not included in these Proceedings.

[19TH FEBRUARY, 1919.]

[*Mr. V. J. Patel ; Sir William Vincent ;
Mr. A. H. Ley ; Sir Dinshaw Wacha ;
Sir Claude Hill.*]The Hon'ble Mr. V. J. Patel asked :—

11. " Will Government be pleased to lay on the table in due course a statement embodying the rules followed in dealing with applications made by Indians to the India Office authorities in England for appointments in their gift, and showing year by year since 1900 (a) the number of such applications received, (b) the appointment applied for in each case, and (c) the reply given to each applicant ? "

Applications made by Indians in England for appointments.

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent replied :—

" The Government of India regret that they have no information in the matter."

The Hon'ble Mr. V. J. Patel asked :

12. " Has any report been received from the Trade Commissioner for India in London regarding his work since his appointment ? If so, will Government consider the advisability of publishing it ? "

Publication of report of the Trade Commissioner for India in London.

The Hon'ble Mr. A. H. Ley replied :—

" As promised in reply to a question by the Hon'ble Mr. Khaparde in this Council on the 4th September, 1918, the Indian Trade Commissioner was asked for a formal report on the working of his office. This has not yet been received, but will be published as soon as it is received."

The Hon'ble Sir Dinshaw Wacha asked :—

13. " Will Government be pleased to lay on the table a statement regarding the operation of the Cotton Cloth Act, 1918, since it came into force ? "

The Cotton Cloth Act.

The Hon'ble Mr. A. H. Ley replied :—

" Owing to the marked fall in the price of cotton cloth which occurred throughout the country immediately after the Cotton Cloth Act, 1918, came into force, it proved unnecessary to put the provisions of the Act into operation at once. The Controller of Cotton Cloth and the Advisory Committee appointed under the Act have, however, met at regular intervals and have kept a close watch on the situation. The Controller has also visited several of the Provinces. As the price of cloth has again risen considerably, it has been decided to commence the manufacture of standard cloth to meet the requirements of the United Provinces, Bihar and Orissa and the Punjab. Five per cent. only of the monthly output of the looms will be taken up in the first instance. Further details of the work which has been done by the Controller of Cotton Cloth will be found in the Press Communiqué recently issued by that officer, a copy* of which is placed on the table."

The Hon'ble Sir Dinshaw Wacha asked :—

14. " Have any substantial efforts been made in India by the State or by private enterprise or both within recent years to obtain increased agricultural products, specially food-grains, by the use of well-known agricultural chemicals ? If so, to what extent and in what places ? "

Use of chemicals for agricultural purposes.

The Hon'ble Sir Claude Hill replied :—

" All the Agricultural Departments in India have experimented and are experimenting with chemical fertilizers as will be seen from the reports of the Departmental Farms.

Chemical fertilizers are extensively used by planters and to some extent it is believed by large Indian land-holders.

* Not included in these Proceedings.

[Sir Claude Hill; Sir Dinshaw Wacha; Mr. A. H. Ley.] [19TH FEBRUARY, 1919.]

The use of chemical manures by small cultivators is restricted by the price and the small increase in outturn relatively to the cost. There are also difficulties in the way of the small cultivator obtaining such manures on account of the lack of selling agencies. A beginning has, however, been made by one Co-operative Society in the Tanjore District of Madras, which manufactures bone phosphate and sells it to its members."

The Hon'ble Sir Dinshaw Wacha asked :—

The Cotton
Clearing House at Bombay.

15. " Do Government propose to obtain a report from the Chairman of the Cotton Clearing House on the working of the house from its commencement to 31st December last, and to publish the report for general information? "

The Hon'ble Mr. A. H. Ley replied :—

" I will ask the Government of Bombay for a report as suggested by the Hon'ble Member."

The Hon'ble Sir Dinshaw Wacha asked :—

Indian indentured coolies in Fiji.

16. "(a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to the following suggestions made by Mr. O. F. Andrews in an article appearing under his signature in the ' Modern Review ' of December, 1918, on Indian indentured coolies in Fiji, namely :—

- (i) The immediate closing down of the last years of service in the coolie lines of those under indenture.
- (ii) Inducements to be given to unmarried men in Fiji to return to India to get wives.
- (iii) The present coolie lines to be entirely reconstructed on a different model allowing for separate detached dwellings for married people.
- (iv) Matrons to be provided in all the larger Indian hospitals.
- (v) The provision of shipping for repatriation and communication with India as early as possible.

(b) Do Government intend to take steps to bring about the adoption of these suggestions or any of them? "

The Hon'ble Mr. A. H. Ley replied :—

" (a) The answer is in the affirmative.

(b) I would refer the Hon'ble Member to the remarks made by Sir George Barnes in the debate on the Resolution moved by the Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya on the subject at the meeting of the Council held in Simla on the 11th September, 1918. The Government of India are in correspondence with His Majesty's Government in regard to these matters. We have asked that representations should be made to secure reforms with regard to housing and hospital accommodation for free as well as for indentured labourers in Fiji. The Hon'ble Member will no doubt realise that the mere cancellation of indentures unaccompanied by such reforms, will only aggravate the present situation. With regard to the provision of shipping, I am afraid that the position is not materially different from what it was when the Council was addressed by Sir George Barnes in September."

The Hon'ble Sir Dinshaw Wacha asked :—

Colleges for instruction in Agricultural chemistry.

17. " At what institutions in India is agricultural chemistry taught for the purposes of practical agriculture? "

The Hon'ble Sir Claude Hill replied :—

" Agricultural chemistry is taught for the purposes of practical agriculture in the Agricultural Colleges at Coimbatore, Poona, Cawnpore, Lyallpur, Sabour, Nagpur and Pusa."

[19TH FEBRUARY, 1919.] [Sir Dinshaw Wacha ; Sir James Meston ; Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya ; Mr. A. H. Ley ; Sir William Vincent ; Mr. G. S. Khaparde.]

The Hon'ble Sir Dinshaw Wacha asked :—

18. " Are Government aware of the popular cry prevailing in the more distant towns and villages in parts of the country, touching the difficulty of encashing notes for rupees and small silver coins? If so, when do Government propose to afford reasonable facilities so as to allay the existing complaint?"

Encashment of notes for rupees and small silver coins.

The Hon'ble Sir James Meston replied :—

" As was more fully explained in replying to a recent question on the same subject by the Hon'ble Rai Bahadur B. D. Shukul at the last meeting of this Council, the Government are fully aware of the inconvenience, and are doing all that lies in their power to ameliorate it; but the problem, as the Hon'ble Member knows, is far from an easy one."

The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya asked :—

19. " Has the recommendation of the Indian Industrial Commission that an expert Committee should be appointed to consider what additional banking facilities are necessary whether for the initial or for the current finance of industries been accepted by Government, and if so, when do they propose to appoint the Committee?"

Appointment of an expert Committee to consider additional banking facilities.

The Hon'ble Mr. A. H. Ley replied :—

" As the Hon'ble Member has already been informed the various recommendations contained in the Indian Industrial Commission's report are receiving the consideration of Government, and he cannot expect that an immediate decision should be arrived at on all these questions. He will remember that the report was not received until the very end of October, and consultation with Local Governments is obviously necessary before definite conclusions can be reached. No decision has yet been arrived at with regard to the setting up of a banking committee."

The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya asked :—

20. "(a) On what date was the recommendation of Mr. Montagu and Lord Chelmsford, contained in paragraph 272 of their Report, that another Indian member should be appointed to the Executive Council of the Government of India 'as soon as may be' submitted to His Majesty's Government?"

Appointment of a second Indian member to the Executive Council.

(b) Is it a fact that no exception has been taken to this recommendation either by the Government of India or by His Majesty's Government?

(c) If the answer to part (b) be in the affirmative, what is the reason for the delay in giving effect to the said recommendation?

(d) When do Government intend to appoint a second Indian member to the Executive Council?"

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent replied :—

"The report by His Excellency the Viceroy and the Secretary of State on Indian Constitutional reforms is at present being considered by the Government of India, who hope to be able to submit their recommendations thereon to the Secretary of State in the near future. The Government of India have no information as to the views of His Majesty's Government, nor is it possible for them yet to state when any of the proposals will be given effect to. The Hon'ble Member is no doubt aware that any increase of the Executive Council would require an amendment of the Statute."

The Hon'ble Mr. G. S. Khaparde asked :—

21. "(a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to the facts stated and comments made in a Calcutta paper called 'Railways' in its issues of the 1st and 16th January, 1919, regarding the appointment of Mr. B. C. Scott as Agent of the South Indian Railway?"

Appointment of Mr. B. C. Scott as Agent of the South Indian Railway.

[Mr. G. S. Khaparde ; Sir Arthur Anderson ; [19TH FEBRUARY, 1919.]
Mr. A. H. Ley ; Mir Asad Ali, Khan
Bahadur ; Sir William Vincent.]

(b) Will Government be pleased to make a statement showing the incorrectness or otherwise of the said facts ?”

The Hon'ble Sir Arthur Anderson replied :—

“(a) The answer to the first question is in the affirmative.

(b) Government are not aware of the intentions of the Board of Director of the South Indian Railway Company, or whether they propose to select Mr. Scott as Agent when Mr. Muirhead retires. Mr. Muirhead is at present temporarily absent from duty, and intimation has been received by the Railway Board that Mr. LeMesurier acts during the present vacancy. Government are not in a position to give any further information at present.”

The Hon'ble Mr. G. S. Khaparde asked :—

Formation of an Imperial Department of Industries and an Imperial Board of Industries.

22. “(a) Has any correspondence passed between Government and the Secretary of State on the subject of the formation of an Imperial Department of Industries and an Imperial Board of Industries, as recommended by the Industries Commission ?

(b) If the answer to (a) be in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to place the correspondence on the table ?”

The Hon'ble Mr. A. H. Ley replied :—

(a) “Yes.

(b) The Government of India are still in correspondence with the Secretary of State on the subject, and I am unable at present to lay any papers on the table.”

The Hon'ble Mir Asad Ali, Khan Bahadur, asked :—

Publication of the reports of the Franchise and Subjects Committees.

23. “Will Government be pleased to state—

(a) whether the reports of the Franchise and Subjects Committees will be published and made available for the public ;

(b) whether an opportunity will be given to the members of this Council to discuss at length the Reform proposals soon after the introduction into Parliament of the Bill on the subject ?”

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent replied :—

“(a) The reports will not be published before submission to the Secretary of State, and it will rest with the Secretary of State to determine what papers shall be made public ; but the Government of India are confident that all important official correspondence and reports in connection with the Reforms proposals since the date of the publication of the Report by the Viceroy and the Secretary of State will be published.

(b) The Government of India are not prepared to give any undertaking upon this point.”

The Hon'ble Mir Asad Ali, Khan Bahadur, asked :—

Investigation of the indigenous system of medicine.

24. “With reference to the reply given on the 26th September, 1918, to my question on the subject, will Government be pleased to state :—

(a) whether the opinion of the Committee of the All-India Ayurvedic and Unani Tibbi Conference on the indigenous systems of medicine has been received, and, if so, will they be pleased to lay it on the table along with the opinions, if any, received from other non-official bodies ?

(b) whether they propose to invite further the opinion of independent non-official medical practitioners on the subject before the matter under consideration is finally disposed of ?

[19TH FEBRUARY, 1919.]

[Mir Asad Ali, Khan Bahadur ; Sir William Vincent ; Sir Fazulbhoy Currimbhoy ; Sir James Meston ; Sir George Lowndes.]

(c) what measures have already been considered by the various Local Governments for conducting the scientific investigations of the properties of indigenous drugs, and whether these measures, if postponed during the war, will be resumed early ? ”

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent replied :—

“ (a) The opinion of the Committee of the All-India Ayurvedic and Unani Tibbi Conference has not yet been received ; no other non-official body has addressed the Government of India on the subject.

(b) Some of the principal Local Governments consulted independent non-official medical practitioners before submitting their reports, and it is not proposed to invite further opinions.

(c) The Government of India notice that on the 30th of July last the Government of Bombay accepted a resolution moved in their Legislative Council for the appointment of a Committee which will recommend what steps should be taken to start a pharmacological laboratory or research institute in medicine at a suitable centre in the Presidency for scientific experiment with and research into indigenous drugs. They have however received no report on this subject from the Government of Bombay or from any other Government, and they would suggest that information, if required, as to what each Government is doing should be elicited by questions in the local Legislative Councils.”

The Hon'ble Sir Fazulbhoy Currimbhoy asked :—

25. “ Will Government be pleased to state whether they proposed to give effect to the recommendations of the Decentralisation Commission on financial decentralisation ? ”

The Hon'ble Sir James Meston replied :—

“ Effect has already been given to a number of the proposals of the Royal Commission. The whole question of financial decentralisation is now once more under careful consideration in connection with the question of Constitutional Reforms.”

TERMINATION OF THE PRESENT WAR (DEFINITION) BILL.

The Hon'ble Sir George Lowndes :—“ My Lord, I move for leave to introduce a Bill to make provision to determine the date of the termination of the present war and for purposes connected therewith. The Bill hardly needs explanation. It is obviously necessary that the same date should be adopted throughout the Empire for the formal termination of the war. Parliament has legislated in order to allow His Majesty to declare by Order in Council what date should be fixed for the formal termination of the war, and we are proposing in India to follow the same procedure. I move for leave to introduce the Bill.”

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble Sir George Lowndes :—“ My Lord, I beg to introduce the Bill, and move that the Bill, together with the Statement of Objects and Reasons relating thereto, be published in the ‘ Gazette of India ’ in English.”

The motion was put and agreed to.

EXCESS PROFITS DUTY BILL.

11-24 A.M.

The Hon'ble Sir James Meston :—" My Lord, when the armistices were signed three months ago, men's minds naturally turned with gratitude to picture a world from which war with all its attendant evils had at last been removed ; and it came to many of us as an unpleasant surprise when this document was published a few weeks after the noise of battle had ceased. It reminded us that, although the war was over, the price of victory had yet to be paid. In human lives and suffering that price has been paid in full measure. But on those of us who remain the duty rests of trying to help in some degree to liquidate the incalculable material loss which has fallen upon the world during these last four years. In some countries that task will occupy the attention of the present generation and of generations yet unborn ; but in more fortunate India the pecuniary burden of war will relatively be a trivial and transient embarrassment. India, under your Excellency's guidance, however, has not been ungrateful for the shelter and security that she has enjoyed during these anxious years, and most Members of this Council took part in the enthusiasm with which India bestowed her first magnificent gift of £100 millions towards the cost of the war. Then, again, in September last this Council with virtual unanimity decided upon a further gift by taking over from His Majesty's Government the charges of a large Indian fighting force which had previously been met out of British funds. The value of that second donation was estimated by my predecessor at £45 millions, or in the neighbourhood thereof. He assumed that the forces for which we were providing would be at war for two years and would be demobilized in the third year, while there would be a running accompaniment of pension charges dwindling until that part of the burden finally disappeared. Well, the war happily ended long before the period of Sir William Meyer's estimate, and our total payments are not likely now to be more than £30 millions. For the current year our bill is being honoured partly out of our current revenues and partly by an overdraft upon our balances. But for the next year we have to find £8½, and it is to help in providing that sum that we are now asking the approval of Council to the measure which I introduce to-day. Our need for this extra taxation may be very briefly explained. When Sir William Meyer described his proposals in September last, he told the Council that the military expenditure which we were then accepting would amount to about £12·7 millions in the current year, to £14·7 millions in the next year, and if the war then terminated to £7·7 millions in the third year or the period of demobilization with, of course, pension charges added in each case. For the current year he expressed the hope that he would be able to provide the required funds out of the large surplus which he then anticipated. I have heard him sharply criticized for the expression of this hope, but I think, my Lord, most Members of this Council will agree that criticism on that point is a little unreasonable. At that time Sir William Meyer had before him only the figures of the first quarter of the current year ; and as we all know a sudden rapid change for the worse came over our financial position almost immediately after he had spoken. Famine raised its head with all its attendant re-action upon our revenues. Exports, especially of food, were curtailed in a very large measure, and the sale of Council drafts stopped from October, while all the time we had to go on merrily coining rupees to a very large extent, and enduring the loss in which they involved us on account of our compulsory purchases of silver. As Hon'ble Members are aware, we had, recently on two occasions, to reverse the ordinary procedure of exchange and sell what are ordinarily known as reverse Councils in India. All these forces combined to defeat Sir William Meyer's hope of a large surplus, and in actual fact we shall probably have to admit a heavy deficit, a deficit of about £4 millions in the current year. We have thus not been able to meet anything like the first instalment of our obligations out of the current year's revenues. For next year Sir William Meyer was under no delusions. To pay the second instalment he warned the Council that extra taxation would be necessary, and he made it perfectly clear that in the forefront of that taxation there would be a duty on excess profits. With the advent of peace it is true that that second instalment has disappeared, and all that we have now to face, apart from the running pension charges, is the £8½ millions of the last instalment. But the tightness which Sir William Meyer foresaw is now upon us, and it is my duty to-day to attempt to convince the Council that we cannot find this amount without some of the additional taxation which he warned us would be inevitable. For it will be remembered that Sir William Meyer in speaking last September held out no hope that the excess profits duty would be the only measure necessary to fill the gap.

[19TH FEBRUARY, 1919.]

“ Our Budget estimates unfortunately are not ready ; it will be ten days before they are. I wish they were, for Hon'ble Members would then be able to study the position for themselves and find a justification for what is now proposed. But briefly it comes to this. We have pitched our revenue-estimates as high as we dare without imprudence. We have of course had to allow very large grants for railway renewals which had fallen to a point of danger during the war ; but in all other matters of expenditure we have counted every rupee. His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, in particular, has accepted for the current expenses of the Army a grant which has been cut so fine that only his resolute insistence on economy will enable it to suffice. And yet with all this our revenues we expect will be barely £3½ millions ahead of our normal outlay. It is obvious that a fraction of this, say a crore or £½ of a million, must be kept as a surplus, or margin—and it is not a very extravagant margin—against the vicissitudes of the year. So that we are left with £3 millions out of our normal revenues to meet our liabilities under your September Resolution for £8½ millions. There is a shortage of £5½ millions, and it is approximately that sum of £5½ to £6 millions which we aim, if Council passes the measure which I now introduce, at recovering from the excess profits duty on a 50 per cent. basis.

“ The Bill, my Lord, is a very simple measure and endeavours to be as elastic as the peculiar circumstances* require. It applies, with certain large exceptions, to all businesses in India which during the current year have returned profits exceeding Rs. 30,000. The first of these exceptions is Agriculture or, as it is called in the United Kingdom, Husbandry, which we do not propose to tax. The second is salaried employments, which have not participated in the special profits of the war. Then come professional incomes which depend upon the personal skill of the earner ; and, lastly, we propose to exempt concerns which are already paying excess profits duty in England very much higher than it is proposed to levy in India. With these exceptions it is proposed to take every business in British India and ascertain the profits upon which it paid income-tax in the two years before the year in which war was declared and in the two years after that event. The average of these four years is struck and set up as the standard of profits. Any sum by which the ascertained profits of the current year exceed that standard is treated as excess profits, and the Government asks for half that sum. If any business, either because it has just started or for any other good reason, did not pay income-tax in the four earlier years, its excess profits are assumed to be the amount by which its actual profits in the current year exceed 10 per cent. on its present capital. My Lord, this is the kernel of the Bill, but there will of course be many exceptional cases. There are concerns with plant which has been running night and day for war work and which will shortly need heavy renewals. These are concerns which have installed machinery for war work, which they will be unable to use for other purposes. There are others which have brought out equipment at possibly three or four times its normal price ; others again where renewals and repairs have been impossible in the last four years. The list, which is virtually given in clause 8 of the Bill, is one which might be largely extended ; but it is sufficient to say that the Bill recognises such cases as deserving generous treatment, and gives the Collector a wide liberty to modify the assessment. There are probably other cases which have not been referred to in the Bill, and which I have no doubt the Select Committee will be glad to consider. Among these I may incidentally mention, without committing the Government to any decision, the case of controlled trades in which owing to the operation of Government control the profits, which would otherwise have accrued to the business, have not been allowed to pass into their pockets. Still another case is that of a new, or a struggling, industry which was set on its feet by the war and which has now again to face the full blast of the foreign competition which had formerly deterred it from making profits. These and any other matters like these will have to be considered on their merits, and will be considered in a generous and sympathetic spirit. The Bill also allows every assessee an appeal. The Bill sets up—and this is perhaps the most important of all—under clause 9 of the Bill, special tribunals for dealing with questions of general importance which would be outside the experience of the ordinary income-tax establishment. The tribunal is a Board of Referees which will always include at least one non-official with special knowledge of the business which is the subject of reference. If Hon'ble Members would like this body strengthened in any way, so as to secure adequate attention to technical business considerations to which they attach importance, I hope it will be possible to meet their wishes in Select Committee. There are many other matters, not included in the Bill, which it is necessary to touch upon in order to give the Council the complete outline of our taxation proposals. First of all, it is recognised that the super-tax was a rough and ready substitute for a tax on war profits, and that it would be inequitable to levy both these duties from the same individual or firm. The necessary steps will accordingly be taken to secure the relief from one tax of every assessee who pays the other. The Finance Department is often twitted with its partiality for the maxim 'Whichever is less.' On the present occasion we are prepared magnanimously to reverse that motto and take whichever is greater. If the super-tax which would be payable in the absence of an excess profits duty is higher than what we should get by assessing the excess profits and taking no super-tax, we should ask for the former, and vice versa. In the second place, it is not proposed to assess income-tax upon the share of excess profits which is taken by Government. In the third place, we are doing all that is possible to overhaul and strengthen the machinery of assessment. To assist us in this work we have been singularly fortunate in obtaining, through the good offices of the Secretary of State and by the courtesy of the Board of Inland Revenue, the services of a distinguished expert from Whitehall, Mr. W. S. Watkins, who is expected to leave London at the end of this month and will bring out to us the valuable experience which the British authorities have acquired in this kind of work. We hope that Mr. Watkins will be able to sit on Boards of Referees which have to deal with questions of peculiar difficulty or importance; that he will assist us in framing the rules and regulations under the Act; and that Local Governments will permit him to advise and guide their income-tax authorities in matters where weight is naturally attached to English experience.

" Having explained the proposed relations between the excess profits duty, the super-tax and the income-tax, I would naturally be expected to put forward some kind of estimate of the amount to be expected from the operation of this Bill when it becomes law. It is naturally very difficult and a little invidious to define the profits which we expect to realise from each individual industry. Consequently—and I think Hon'ble Members will accept this proposal,—I shall lump the figures together, and simply say that according to the best of our estimates we believe that the excess profits which will be assessable after all allowances for depreciation and the like, will aggregate, for the whole of British India, about 22½ crores. When we get half of that, it is equivalent to £7½ millions gross; from which we have to deduct the super-tax which will be remitted under the provisions which I have just described, that remission we calculate roughly at about a million sterling. Then, again, we have to deduct the income-tax which will be payable on the Government share of the excess profits, and that by an easy calculation works out to about £400,000. So altogether we expect to realise about £6 millions net as our share of the excess profits duty. Making some remission for unavoidable contingencies or miscalculations, we thus just succeed in covering the figure which we set out to try to obtain.

[19TH FEBRUARY, 1919.]

[Sir James Meston.]

" Now, my Lord, I do not propose to take the Council through all the technical provisions of the Bill. They have been thoroughly canvassed by competent critics from whom we are already receiving most useful criticisms. Mr. Howard and I have had the advantage of informal discussions with the members of several of the leading commercial communities; and I should like to express our indebtedness for the courtesy and frankness with which we have uniformly met. The criticisms furnished to us both at these informal conversations and in the written opinions which are now arriving will be closely examined in Select Committee, and it would be useless to weary the patience of the Council by discussing them to-day.

" But what the Council will no doubt prefer is that I should attempt to answer very briefly the main objections that have been taken to the principles of the Bill and the necessity for it at all. Now those objections, my Lord, divide themselves naturally into several different categories.

" With one set of critics I need not occupy much time. They are those who argue that India has already done enough, and that the further contribution which this Council decided to offer last September should now be withdrawn. I leave those critics to the judgment of the Council whose decision they challenge. But I think, my Lord, we can leave them also to the judgment of another tribunal. If those critics, looking round upon the millions of lives that have been sacrificed, on the long-drawn misery of the millions maimed and disabled, on the sufferings of the invaded lands, on the loss which whole nations have endured of their homes and everything that is dear to them, and of the universal hardships which have been cheerfully borne by every class, every creed in the British Empire—if, I say, on looking round upon this world of strain and privation, they still can be content to hug their wealth, their comforts and their luxuries—then, my Lord, I think we may leave them to the tribunal of their own conscience.

" There is, however, another class of critics who urge that our proposals are ill-timed; that war is over, and that war levies ought to cease. Some of my friends who hold this view emphasise the agricultural difficulties in which parts of India are now plunged and argue, with much plausibility, that India's first duty is to look after herself. Others describe the depression in the markets, the reaction which must follow the recent prosperity, the unwisdom of adding to all this unsettlement by an unpopular tax. Well, the Government of India may confidently assure those who hold such language that, in combating agricultural distress, the full energies of our resources will be as ever available, and that this tax will not by one jot or tittle interfere with the financing of whatever measures are required to avert the results of scarcity. If it were the case that this new tax fell upon an industrial community weakened by the collapse of its markets, we ought certainly to think twice before going on with it. But, my Lord, is this the case except to a very narrow and limited extent? No signs of collapse, I believe, are yet apparent in the jute trade or in the many subsidiary industries to which the war has given a fillip. The position of the cotton trade undoubtedly is different. It has passed through a bad time, partly owing to labour difficulties, but also, I am surely right in saying, to unwise speculation. The fanciful heights to which the cloth market and the Bombay share market had soared last year could not possibly have been maintained in permanency; and the fact that they are now approaching a lower, and we may hope, a saner level, is surely no valid argument against our proposals. And is this Bill so untimely as I am told? I am frequently assured that the excess profits duty would have been an excellent idea three years ago, but that is all wrong now. Well, unfortunately it is impossible to accept the implied offer and to lay hands on the profits of three years ago. But what is wrong with the tax now? It is no reply to say that the war is over. War is not like a game of chess which you can finish, put away the chessmen and fold up the board and walk off. War is an evil of which the consequences remain, and those consequences have got to be paid for by whatever name we call the requisite taxation.

" The plain fact, my Lord, is that in September last we undertook to pay for an extra force of 200,000 Indian troops. That force is still in being; it is rendering valuable service in garrisoning conquered countries and in enabling peace to be secured and the benefits of peace to be established. We are in honour bound to pay for those men until they are returned to civil life. We are in honour bound to pay the pensions and allowances to those who are disabled, to those who are superannuated, and to the families of those who have died. That is the clear duty of the Government, and it is for that purpose that we are to-day asking for the necessary money.

[Sir James Meston.]

"I pass now, my Lord, to another class of critics. Soon after arriving in Delhi, I was visited by a number of my old friends from Cawnpore, gentlemen in charge of large industrial concerns which had been continuously engaged in war work. What they said was this: 'We know that the money is wanted; we know that you have got to raise it; the money is here and you shall have it; but you are going about the wrong way to take it.' Well, similar things afterwards were said to me by representatives of commercial communities in other parts of India, and I invariably found that this criticism came from those who had taken a large and patriotic share in our war effort and invested largely in our war loans, and consequently it is our bounden duty in all courtesy to give very special consideration to their objections. Accordingly, my Lord, all possible alternatives were thoroughly examined. First of these alternatives was a loan. Many varied and ingenious forms for raising the money by loan were pressed upon us, particularly in Bombay; but we have had finally to reject the idea. As Hon'ble Members will have recognised, our difficulties in the current year compel us to borrow indirectly about £4 million towards the first instalment of our new obligation. If to this we add the £8½ millions which still have to be paid, and the capitalised value of pension obligations which will remain for the future, we should be placing a very substantial addition upon our temporary debt. That debt is already higher than any of us like. We have to get rid of it before we can launch out into the programme of remunerative borrowing for the development of India which all of us look forward to. Another alternative which we found considerably favoured, in certain though not in all commercial circles, was an amendment of the super-tax system which would allow that tax to be assessed on the whole profits of companies, and not only on the undistributed profits. Personally, although I have no authority from the Government of India to announce a policy in this matter, I confess to being much in sympathy with the desire for the amendment of our existing system of taxation on incomes. But I feel that the whole subject requires more ventilation and discussion, in order to get at an equitable graded scale which will carry us over the period of recovery from the consequences of war. To frame a scale which would have produced the extra revenue required by us this year, would have entailed a higher range of assessment than should be necessary in more normal circumstances; and having got such a range, the Finance Member, being only a fallible mortal, would probably find himself sorely tempted to stick to it after the necessity for it had passed. Moreover, as a prominent feature on the fiscal side of the Reforms Scheme is the appropriation of income-tax wholly for Imperial purposes, I confess I should look with some misgiving upon a situation in which the various provinces could point to a high return from the taxation of incomes as an argument for the immediate reduction of their contributions to the Central Exchequer. It seemed therefore inexpedient on all grounds to revise the income-tax and the super-tax just at present, although I trust that such a revision will be taken in hand as soon as the excess profits duty ceases to operate. Another, and really the only other, suggestion of any value was that while standing by our proposals, we should be content with a smaller share of the current year's profits, say one-third instead of one-half. I can assure the Council that this proposal was very carefully examined, and that at one time we had hopes of being able to accept it, but since that time there has come upon us a large additional liability for the maintenance of our Army, which will add over £2 millions, probably £2½ millions, to next year's expenditure. A third of the assessable profits, if Hon'ble Members followed the brief calculation I tried to place before them a few minutes ago, would have given us £4 millions and that would not have been enough with a gap of very nearly £6 millions to fill ; and I am afraid we have been driven by force of circumstances to fall back upon the full 50 per cent. So that we come, almost by a process of exhaustion, back to the proposals embodied in this Bill, and we have not been able to find any other sound economic method of raising the necessary funds which would be either advisable or indeed in consonance with the general wishes of those affected.

"There is only one other important class of critics, and with them I will close. They are the numerous well-wishers who warn us that a tax on profits is economically bad and mischievous to industry. If their arguments were accepted in full, there would, of course, be no taxation at all. It would be foolish to contend, and I do not for a moment profess to contend, that there are not some taxes which are less felt by the ordinary man than others; and probably a direct tax on profits is a form of levy which economists would gladly avoid at normal times. But are the times normal, or are the profits which we are taxing sound? Have not these huge profits of recent years been responsible, in some measure at least, for an orgy of harmful speculation, for much of the labour trouble that has since visited us, for an inflated standard of values which is entirely hostile to the healthy financial development of the country? It is this scale of profits which is unsound much more than the tax; and I am sure many a business man will agree with me in his heart of hearts, if not to-day, certainly in later years, when he looks back upon an artificial prosperity which has left him nothing but a legacy of trouble.

"My Lord, this then is the position. We have undertaken an obligation to pay a share of the cost of our own fighting forces. It is an infinitely small sum as compared with the burden which lies on the rest of the Empire; it is not a large sum relatively to our own resources. From that obligation we cannot in honour recede. To meet it we have to find £8½ millions next year. We have pinched and saved, and postponed all avoidable expenditure; and have thus been able to provide only a fraction of this (about £3 millions) out of our current revenues. For the remainder we must have extra taxation. We have searched for any form of tax which would furnish the necessary sum without adding to the burdens of the poorer classes. We have accordingly determined to appeal to the wealthy, and more particularly to that class whose incomes have been largely increased as a result, directly or indirectly, of the war. There are reasons at the moment why we should not take the money by an enhancement of the rates of the ordinary income-tax. We have, therefore, had recourse to what seems as fair in India as it has been acknowledged to be in the United Kingdom, a tax on the profits made by industries in excess of a normal standard. We have taken the normal standard, however, not as in England on a pre-war basis, but, in order to show all consideration for those who have to pay a somewhat belated duty, at an average between a lean period before the war and a fat period after the outbreak of hostilities. We are prepared to make all possible allowance for hard cases, and to correct our own valuations, wherever possible, by the skilled knowledge of business men.

"This, my Lord, is the case for the Bill which I now introduce. Firstly, secondly and lastly, the Bill is a war measure; it is a measure for paying fighting men who are actually at the present moment in the field. It is thus a measure which will help to secure, we hope, for the world a lasting peace; and I would appeal to all those who place a higher value on that achievement than on the mere amassing of wealth to lend it their support.

"My Lord, I introduce the Bill and beg to move that it be referred to a Select Committee consisting of the Hon'ble Sir George Lowndes, the Hon'ble Mr. Kesteven, the Hon'ble Sir Fazulbhoj Currimbhoy, the Hon'ble Rai Sita Nath Ray Bahadur, the Hon'ble Mr. Howard, the Hon'ble Mr. Hogg, the Hon'ble Sir Gangadhar Chitnavis, the Hon'ble Mr. Ironside, the Hon'ble Mr. Rice, the Hon'ble Mr. Moncrieff Smith and myself, with instructions to report on or before the 12th March, 1919."

The Hon'ble Mr. Malcolm N. Hogg :—"My Lord, this is a Bill on the merits of which I had some difficulty in making up my mind, and when

11-59 A.M.

[Mr. Malcolm N. Hogg.] [19TH FEBRUARY, 1919.]

I had made it up, I arrived at a conclusion which is in some respects contrary to the very large majority of commercial opinion, both European and Indian, in Bombay. My only course, therefore, is to lay my personal views before the Council for what they are worth, and then to point out how very little they are worth for practical purposes inasmuch as they are entirely unrepresentative on this matter. Few, I think, will deny the inherent justice of the underlying principle of this Bill, namely, that those to whom circumstances arising out of the war have brought exceptional profits should contribute a portion of those profits to the cost of the war. It is when we come to try and apply this principle in legislation that difficulties arise. In England, the principle was applied at a very early stage of the war; that is to say at the most favourable moment. But even in England the excess profits duty has proved in some respects unsatisfactory; it has been difficult and troublesome to assess, and often inequitable in its incidence. But it has been accepted in England as a necessary war evil, and I think that it would have been accepted in India as a necessary war evil if it had been introduced at an earlier stage. For various reasons, but principally on account of the difficulties of assessment and collection, it was not introduced, and the delay far from lessening the difficulties has increased them. The delay has also prejudiced the reception of the Bill, and a measure which, I think, would have been generally accepted a year or two ago, has now met with very general opposition and condemnation. It is not necessary for me to recapitulate the grounds on which this opposition is based, for I think that they are sufficiently well known; but I am bound to admit that there is considerable force in some of the arguments advanced. I share the general objection to retrospective taxation. I am aware that the present economic situation in certain important trades and industries, particularly in Bombay, is very unfavourable for the introduction of such a duty, and I realise—and this to my mind is the most important objection to the Bill—the very great difficulties which exist in this country in the way of its equitable assessment and successful collection, difficulties which are far greater than those of a like nature existing in England. I have endeavoured to weigh carefully these theoretical and practical objections to the Bill, but I have come to the conclusion that, in spite of them all, the inherent soundness of the underlying principle justifies an attempt being made to apply it even at this late stage. It cannot be denied that very considerable profits have been made by certain trades and industries in India through circumstances arising out of the war, and I feel that it is still worth while making an attempt to secure a portion of those profits for expenditure arising out of the war.

“ But there is another reason which has impelled me to the same conclusion. Assuming that this money is required for war expenditure, how else is it to be raised? I have said, assuming it is required for war expenditure, because that, I think, is an essential condition, and until the presentation of the Financial Statement we are to some extent in the dark on this matter, although the speech of the Hon'ble the Finance Member in introducing the Bill has done much to enlighten us. On this assumption, however, how else is the money to be raised? One suggestion has been a loan. Well, in the first place, my Lord, I am personally not very sanguine about the prospects of raising any large sum of money by loan in India this year. But, secondly, I feel that we have already raised as much of our exceptional war expenditure by short term loans in this country as is advisable. Next year, the first of these short term loans will be falling due for repayment, and I feel that Government will have their work cut out to meet this and the succeeding loans as they fall due without pursuing the policy of financing exceptional war expenditure by short term loans any further.

“ A second expedient which has been suggested is an increase in one or other of the existing sources of taxation. Well, I feel that all possible permanent increases of taxation will be required and more than required in this country during the next few years to meet the repayment of existing short term loans and the very heavy increases in permanent recurring expenditure which are ahead of us. I do not think that it is sufficiently recognised what a very great strain will be placed upon both the loan and the taxation resources of

India to meet the urgent demands of education, sanitation, housing, railways and other needs of a like nature. It seems to me, therefore, that we are forced back upon the necessity of attempting to meet the remainder of our exceptional war expenditure by exceptional war taxation.

“I do not propose, to-day, to enter into any detailed criticism of the Bill because the proper time for that is the Select Committee and the subsequent stages; but I do wish just to say this, that I think that the Bill as drafted requires considerable amendment with a view to ensuring that it falls, as far as possible, only on those who are in a position to bear the burden, and with a view to seeing that its total yield does not exceed the requirements of urgent war expenditure.

“Such, my Lord, are my personal views, but I feel it my duty to place another aspect of this question before the Council with considerable emphasis. I have stated that my views do not coincide with general commercial opinion, which is strongly opposed to the passage of this measure. That opposition is shared by the Bombay Chamber of Commerce whom I have the honour to represent upon this Council. My absence from Bombay during the last three months with the Franchise Committee has prevented my having any recent opportunity of a discussion of the Bill in detail with the members or Committee of my Chamber; but their views have been recently fully communicated to Government in writing, and will no doubt be circulated to Hon'ble Members as one of the papers on this Bill. I feel bound to advise your Excellency's Government to attach far more weight to this expression of opinion from a body such as the Bombay Chamber of Commerce than to my own personal views; and it is a matter for the very serious consideration of Government whether it is expedient to persevere with a measure which has provoked such a large measure of opposition and resentment among those whom it will affect, particularly in view of the fact that it is to these same classes of the community that Government must look for the bulk of any loan which they may desire to raise. In this connection, I should like to make it clear that my Chamber do not share my opinion as to the prospects of a loan this year. I received from them last Monday a telegram in which they state, firstly, that they adhere to their opinion that the sum required should be raised by other methods; secondly, that, if Government persist with this measure, the sum to be raised by it should be strictly limited to the rough amount of 6 crores of rupees which had previously been stated to be approximately required, and also that the Bill should be amended so as to remove some inequalities which they consider exist in the present draft, bearing in mind that a tax which may be suited to conditions in one province, say Bengal, may operate very unfairly in other provinces; thirdly, they state—and this is particularly important—that in their opinion the prospects of a loan this year are good, and that they see no reason why 20 or 25 crores should not be raised, but that they consider that the Bill in its present form is calculated seriously to prejudice the prospects of raising even a smaller amount. I invite the very serious consideration of your Excellency's Government and of this Council to this considered expression of an opinion which is, I believe, very generally held.

“I do not think that there are any serious differences of opinion between my Chamber and myself on the details of the Bill, and I hope in the course of the Select Committee proceedings to secure some important amendments. It is only on the question whether the Bill should be proceeded with and amended or whether it should be entirely withdrawn, that I differ from my Chamber. I feel that, under the circumstances, the only proper course for me to pursue is to refrain from voting. I cannot reconcile it with the views which I hold, and hold with conviction, to vote against this Bill. At the same time I feel that it would not be right for me to record a vote in its favour, knowing that that vote is directly contrary to the wishes and opinions of those whom I am here to represent. In conclusion, I desire to repeat that it is the duty of your Excellency's Government to attach very great weight to the opinion expressed by the Bombay Chamber of Commerce and by so many other commercial associations and bodies throughout India."

[Mr. Malcolm N. Hogg; Sir Fazulbhoy Currimbhoy.]

The Hon'ble Sir Fazulbhoy Currimbhoy :—My Lord, I rise to oppose the Excess Profits Bill. I am doing so with the full consciousness of my responsibility as a Member of this Council notwithstanding the fact that I gave my cordial support, in last September to the Resolution, moved by Sir William Meyer, for India's taking a larger share, in respect of the cost of military forces raised in the country. I supported the Resolution because we had not, then, seen the successful termination of the war. At the War Conference held in April last, your Lordship had indicated the grave military danger across the borders, and it was made clear to the country that a further contribution from India meant not only the performance of Imperial obligations that fell to the share of India, but as a sort of self-defence to ward-off the threatened invasion of the country. Successful operations in Mesopotamia and elsewhere would, it was expected, create diversions which would make it impossible for the enemy to succeed in his nefarious plans across our borders. Whatever my views were with regard to the poverty of the country and with regard to the enormous burden that a further contribution will lay upon the people of this country, I was one of those who cheerfully and boldly supported that Resolution anticipating at the same time considerable criticism outside this Council, where the issues were not so clearly understood.

" My Lord, the situation has changed since then, and it is no longer possible to impose the taxation outlined in the speech of the Finance Member at that time, except by ' violating the conditions and safeguards ' which were specifically mentioned in the Resolution. Sir William Meyer had assured this Council that the matter was liable to reconsideration ' if we were faced with grave financial burdens in other respects, such as a worse agricultural situation or a grave currency crisis. ' I urge that the matter should be reconsidered because the rainfall this year has been deficient in certain areas and there is actual famine calling forth for famine relief from Imperial funds. While one part of the country is suffering from actual famine and the shortage of food materials, the rest of the country is in the grip of high prices which were not known even in some of the worst famine times from which the people have suffered. Nothing but the extraordinary confidence, which the people of this country have, in the Government of India could have sustained our currency system from reaching a crisis, and even now business-men everywhere are feeling—though they are loyal enough not to complain—the restraints on exports that had been exercised in the interest of our artificial currency for preventing the exchange from rising still further. Added to all this, the sudden termination of the war has brought about a depression in trade, a dislocation of ordinary business activities; a situation that can fittingly be described as an incipient financial crisis. The present depression of trade and uncertainty has ruined a good many merchants and has robbed many more of the profits they made during the war. The high prices have brought on an epidemic of strike which have imposed additional and excessive burden on industries everywhere, and to complete this tale of woe we had epidemics, one after the other, more serious than the plague, that has taken its victims from this country for many years. These epidemics have interfered with industry everywhere in a very real and material manner. I submit, my Lord, that the situation that has now arisen was not foreseen by anyone of us when we gave our support to the Resolution in September last.

" There are other reasons for not pushing on this Bill which I shall briefly state with your permission. Now that the war is over, there is not the same need for India's assistance, nor is there the need to raise such large sums as it was proposed to raise at the time. Far be it from me to suggest that India should not do her duty with regard to the Empire, but I now think this should be attempted in a more suitable manner and on a better occasion. I am led to this opinion not in the spirit of shirking our just obligations, but because it would be a very unwise policy to push on with the Bill at the present moment. Many of those that have made profits in the war have also made serious losses at the termination of the war. The promise of the Finance Minister that the Government would avoid placing the burden on the poorer classes could not be carried out if this Bill was pushed on, because all transactions have taken place on the profits and on values that have been fixed on the old basis. The joint-stock companies have already divided out their profits, and the investing public the last holder, in many cases the bonâ fide holders, would be penalised. The mere announcement of the excess profits tax has made so much harm and I honestly believe that the Government could not push through the Bill without causing further serious dislocation in the activities of business all over the country. As an industrialist and as one who as a member of the Industrial Commission recommended assistance to industries in different ways in exceptional circumstances, even to the extent of assistance from the finance of the State, I cannot countenance, without raising my humble protest, a proposal that involves such a levy on Capital and that reverses the process withdrawing the Capital from the most enterprising section of the community. The most serious objection that I have to the passing of this Bill is not one of a sentimental character, but one dictated by weighty reasons of financial policy. I am aware that at the time of the floating of the second war loan in India, no assurance was given by the then Finance Member that new taxation would not be imposed, and yet human nature being what it is, it was the general hope in the business community that if the loan was made successful they would escape further taxation. This was one of the causes of the magnificent response which had been given last year to the call for subscriptions to the War Loan, War bonds and Treasury bills. The section which takes up Government script immediately is just the section which is going to be crippled by this levy under the Excess Profits Bill, and I am positive that if this Bill is passed, then the prospects of a new loan if the Government of India would want to raise it in the country would be altogether ruined. The Government have several obligations in connection with the treasury bills and in connection with the war bonds maturing in the coming year, and they have also to provide for the accumulated demands of capital expenditure on Railways and in other ways. I submit that the Government would be paying too high a price for the revenue which they propose to raise by this Bill, if they emasculate the business community thereby and if they have to face the failure of their loan policy in the coming year, besides the levy as excess profits was in the first instance going to be a temporary war levy. The war having now ended, perhaps such a heroic measure involving much interference with business is not needed. The burden which was proposed to be borne by this country should not be levied under the present conditions of agricultural distress and trade depression and financial anxiety. I would urge upon the Government of India, with all the emphasis I am capable of, the reconsideration of the whole matter, and at all events the dropping of the Bill at this stage.

“ My Lord, the Council is no doubt aware that the opinion in the Bombay presidency is opposed to the Bill, and this has been very ably voiced by the Bombay Government in their letter to your Lordship's Government, dated the 4th February, 1919. My Lord, with your permission I will read one paragraph. In paragraph four of the above mentioned letter Mr. J. L. Rieu, the Secretary to the Government of Bombay, says: ‘ I am to state that after further consideration the Governor in Council is still unable to recommend that the proposal to levy a duty on excess profits should be proceeded with, in view of the difficulty of the assessment of the duty, the inequality of its incidence, the likelihood of evasion and avoidance and the political effect of the general resentment which the imposition of this tax, after the virtual conclusion of war and at a time when the Indian Industry requires every encouragement, is calculated to arouse.’ My Lord, the above truly reflects the general feelings prevailing among the commercial community of Bombay.

“ My Lord, of the apparent justice of taxing those who have made profits in the war, I think too much can be made and it would be unwise to consider any tax isolated in this manner without reference to the direct and indirect reactions of the tax on all sections of the community. Personally I feel that the whole matter of this burden should be reconsidered, but if that cannot be done, then this obligation should be met by means of a long period loan with sinking fund, distributed over a number of years. Other proposals which are suggested are for raising the rate of customs duty and for screwing up the income-tax. The adoption of either of these would place a burden on the country, which the country at this time can ill afford owing to famine conditions and depression in the trade. But any of these would cause less disturbance and would on the whole be less objectionable in principle and in the actual working of the tax, than the proposed levy under the Bill.

"My Lord, I find the Bill as has been drafted requires substantial changes, and on the details of the Bill I do not propose to offer at this stage any criticism. Should the Government still wish to carry through this Bill, then I shall take an opportunity at a later stage in the Select Committee to make suggestions for the modification of this Bill so as to minimise the injustice of the levy in several directions.

"With these few remarks, my Lord, I oppose the Bill."

12-20 P.M.

The Hon'ble Mr. W. A. Ironside:—"My Lord, representing the Bengal Chamber of Commerce and the interests of that great body, I feel it necessary to state at once that my instructions are to oppose and to vote against this Bill. I find myself in very much the same position as my colleague, the Hon'ble Mr. Hogg, in that my personal views and those that I represent are not in accord. As representing those views I feel I must give them every possible assistance, and place before Government opinions that should carry great weight. I feel that my personal views must not take precedence of those that I represent, particularly as they are so largely in the majority. The delay in giving a final pronouncement on the provisions of the Bill by the Select Committee has, I feel, caused a great deal of unnecessary difficulty. The Bill was one essentially for a prompt decision. In business promptitude is the soul of our work, and in the matter of this Bill people—and there are a great number seriously affected by it—have been prevented from taking a final and complete survey of their position and if need be cut their losses before it was possible to commence work again. The criticism which I offered in September last could well be repeated again to-day, and we have heard and read criticism galore against the Bill. I do not think it necessary to weary the Council with any further criticism of at any rate a destructive character, but would rather try and place a reasonable view before you; and I trust that opportunities will arise in the Select Committee whereby we can eliminate what are obvious cases of hardship. No one of course can view a Bill of this description with pleasure; no taxation is exactly a gift; but I think that this Bill is largely due to a very wrong financial policy in the past; a financial policy for which the non-official Members of this Council have been directly responsible. I notice that a number of them are not here to-day; but the financial policy of the past has been to pledge the country's credit gaily in times of prosperity, forgetting that debts are birds which come home to roost. We borrowed from Peter to pay Paul, and now the time is coming when Peter will change his name. After listening with considerable interest to Sir James Meston's very masterly exposition of the Bill, I feel less averse, and I think that the financial and commercial public will view with less alarm the Bill as a whole; but I do feel, after listening to the figures cited by Sir James Meston, that there still is a great opening for leniency. I think that the maximum percentage may yet be materially reduced, and I think that those industries which have been started during the period of the war can be absolved from all taxation; and for all that they will bring into the Exchequer I confidently believe they could well be left out. I am glad to hear Sir James Meston mention the fact of those industries which are now faced with severe or the prospect of severe foreign competition, and I trust that that policy will be followed through the Select Committee; and if so, I believe that much of the danger and risk will thereby be eliminated. I trust that very effective taxation will be provided for the foreign firms who have made use of India for obtaining large profits during the period of the war ; and even now as a consequence of easier financial conditions and special freight facilities they are, I assure you, having it all their own way.

[19TH FEBRUARY, 1919.]

“ I have heard certain suggestions made for alternative measures of taxation. An additional loan at this stage I personally reject ; but I think there are more practical measures. I refer to income-tax. I think the machinery of collection might easily be tightened. At the present time the individual with the fixed income, the man of moderate means and the firm and the company with published accounts, they are easily got at and they have to pay. But, my Lord, there are thousands of people who shirk their responsibility, who evade their duty, and as long as the present system is allowed to go on, the shirkers will go on shirking.

“ My Lord, I trust that the benefits of citizenship will not be reserved to commerce and industry, and that those people who are not ready or willing will in future take their share of the taxation of the country. I also trust that hidden away in the figures which the Hon'ble the Finance Member has provided there may not be some balances to be made available for other than war purposes. I also trust, my Lord, that thoughtless expenditure may be avoided. I refer to this in no carping or hypercritical spirit, but I am tempted to mention it because in the last 48 hours I saw a consignment of iron which had travelled, or would eventually travel, more than half way round India by passenger train in order to reach Basrah. Now this is thoughtless expenditure. I do hope that very rigorous economy will be exercised in the spending departments, for I feel that with the tightening of the machinery for the collection of income-tax, together with economy in expenditure, it would be possible to provide a considerable portion of the sum of money which is required under the present tax.”

The Hon'ble Sir James Meston :—“ My Lord, the Council may be congratulated on the speedy conclusion of what I feared was going to be a somewhat acrimonious debate. I personally am grateful for the extremely courteous manner in which these proposals have been received. I am particularly indebted to the Hon'ble Mr. Hogg for the courageous and friendly speech in which he opened the discussion. I fully realise that he spoke his own personal feelings at some sacrifice, and that he had considerable difficulty in differentiating between the convictions that he holds himself and the views that his constituency have directed him to impress on this Council. I value all the more the frank expression of his own views with which he has favoured us. The same applies in a large measure to what has been said by the Hon'ble Mr. Ironside. I see the difficulties of his position and value the expression of opinion that he has given upon our proposals. We have had outside blessings upon this Bill, but they are generally blessings from that class of the community who like most of ourselves will never be called upon to pay excess profits. On this occasion we have had most encouraging advice and helpful speeches from two leading captains of industry from each of the great commercial centres of India. The other speech, that of the Hon'ble Sir Fazulbhoy Currimbhoy, reminded me somewhat of a passage from the Epistle of my patron Saint. In the 5th chapter of St. James, when no doubt an Excess Profits Duty or something similar was to befall Judea, he says to the leading men :—‘ Go to now, ye rich men, weep and howl, for the miseries that have come upon you.’ 12-33 P.M.

“ Coming to the detailed suggestions that have been made for the improvement of the Bill that is now before the Council, I have, my Lord, nothing to add to what I said in my opening remarks. I do most heartily agree with what Mr. Ironside said as to the importance of tightening up our income-tax assessments and of catching the shirkers in our net. I do fully concur with him in what he said about the necessity of the closest economy at a time when we are raising taxes to meet our war debts. I can assure him that, so far as we know, there are no hidden reserves in our Budget ; as Mr. Howard has suggested to me just now, there are really no more rabbits in the hat.

[Sir James Meston ; Sir William Vincent.]

[19TH FEBRUARY, 1919.]

" Well, my Lord, this is a business proposition and it is a business proposition which has been received in a business-like manner. I trust that when it emerges from Select Committee, Hon'ble Members will find the Bill pruned of any of its defects and still more elastic and more capable of dealing with the hard cases which they have enumerated or have in mind; and I trust that the great business communities, who naturally feel a little sore at this curtailment of their gains—gains for which they have laboured hard and with a large element of genuine patriotism—will lend their influence to make the best of what after all is a temporary and very exceptional measure."

The motion was put and agreed to.

POISONS BILL.

12-40 P.M.

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent:—" My Lord, I move for leave to introduce a Bill to consolidate and amend the law regulating the importation, possession and sale of poisons throughout British India. The present law is contained in the Poisons Act of 1904, which was, I think, the first all-India measure for dealing with this subject. Under that Act the Local Government has power to regulate the sale, or possession for sale, of any poison in any municipality or cantonment. In regard to white arsenic the powers are more extensive, and Local Governments can regulate the sale or possession for sale of that poison throughout any part of the province; the Government of India has also power to control the importation into British India of this poison. Under section 6 of the Act, the Government of India can, however, notify that all the provisions of the Act which apply to white arsenic also apply to any other specified poison. Under section 10 of the Act, medical and veterinary practitioners, chemists with European qualifications, and chemists not so qualified when dispensing medicines in accordance with a prescription of a medical practitioner, are exempted from the provisions of the Act. The changes which it is proposed now to make in the law are very simple. In the first place, it is proposed to allow Local Governments to regulate sale or possession for sale of any specified poison throughout the province, and not to confine this provision to white arsenic. This power can now be exercised by a Local Government once a notification is issued by the Government of India under section 6. Similarly, we propose to allow the Government of India to control the import into British India of any specified poison. Both these results can be attained at present by the somewhat cumbrous procedure of double notifications under the Act. What we really are proposing is to devolve a power on Local Governments which is vested in the Government of India, and in the case of imports avoiding the clumsy procedure to which I have adverted.

" There is, however, one clause of the Bill to which I ought to draw special attention, clause 10. I have explained that under the present Act amongst others certain chemists and druggists with English qualifications and those dispensing medicines are exempted from the provisions of the Act. I should also have mentioned tanners and hide merchants as they are also exempted. It is now proposed to withdraw those exemptions and subject these classes of persons to control by the Local Governments in their dealing with poisons. It is believed that chemists with English qualifications at present keep registers of poisons and that no inconvenience will be caused by authorising the Local Governments to make the keeping of such registers a legal requirement. The Government have made inquiries regarding tanners and hide merchants, and they believe that their legitimate trade will not be hampered by reasonable restrictions such as those which Local Governments will impose. At present there is reason to believe that in some cases poison is obtained for criminal purposes, such as murder and cattle poisoning from these tanners and hide dealers.

" There is perhaps only one other clause to which I need refer, and that is clause 9 (3) of the Bill, which authorises the Government to exclude from

[19TH FEBRUARY, 1919.]

[*Sir William Vincent ; Mr. V. J. Patel ;
Mr. G. S. Khaparde.*]

the benefit of the exemption now enjoyed any particular medical practitioner or class of practitioners should they find it necessary to do so. The remainder of the Bill is a consolidating measure, and the only changes of importance are those to which I have already drawn attention.

"At present I only ask for leave to introduce the Bill, I shall subsequently move that the Bill be published in the Gazette of India. I understand that notice of an amendment has been received suggesting that the Bill should be published also in the Provincial Gazettes, and I wish to take the opportunity of saying now that if that amendment is supported by any considerable body of opinion in this Council, and if it is thought desirable to postpone the further consideration of this measure until it has been published in the local official Gazettes, the Government are perfectly ready to meet Hon'ble Members in this matter."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent :—"My Lord, I introduce the Bill, and move that the Bill, together with the Statement of Objects and Reasons relating thereto, be published in the Gazette of India in English."

The Hon'ble Mr. V. J. Patel :—"My Lord, I beg to move the following amendment, that for the motion for publishing the Bill in the Gazette of India in English, the following words be added at the end :—

12-15 P.M.

'and in the local official Gazettes in English and in such other languages as the Local Governments think fit.'

"My Lord, I have compared the provisions of the Poisons Act of 1904 with those of this Bill, and I find that four important modifications are proposed to be introduced. In the first place, the old Act applies to the Municipal and Cantonment areas. By this Bill it is proposed to apply the provisions of the Poisons Act to all areas. Secondly, the old Act gives power to the Governor General in Council to regulate the possession and sale of the importation of white arsenic. It is now proposed to take powers to regulate the importation of any specified poisons. Thirdly, under the old Act certain exemptions were provided, firstly, in favour of medical and veterinary practitioners; secondly, in favour of certain chemists and druggists; thirdly, in favour of compounders dispensing medicines under prescriptions; and fourthly, in favour of tanners and hide merchants. It is now proposed by this Bill to take away the exemptions in respect of the last three classes, and to retain them only in respect of medical and veterinary practitioners. There too, that is, in the case of medical and veterinary practitioners, it is proposed by this measure to empower the Local Governments to exclude any medical or veterinary practitioner from the benefit of the exemption. The scope of the Poisons Act of 1904 was particularly limited in order that its provisions might not interfere with legitimate industries. Now, when it is proposed to take away the exemption in favour of tanners and hide merchants, it is a question as to how far this new measure would interfere with the tanning and hide industries in the country. The Bill has not been before the public, and I respectfully submit that due time should be allowed to the people concerned to express their opinion. I believe that changes of far-reaching importance are proposed to be introduced by this Bill, and a great number of people, more especially the tanning and hide merchants, are likely to be affected by it, and therefore, I trust the Council will favour this amendment and pass it."

The Hon'ble Mr. G. S. Khaparde :—"I am in favour of the publication of this Bill in the local official Gazettes, because, I think, it has not reached those classes which will be chiefly affected by it. In addition to these tanners and other people, there are a number of small industries which may use these poisons, and if they never get any idea of the provisions of this Bill they will not be able to put forward the particular exemptions that they might seek. For these reasons, my Lord, I submit that this Bill should be re-published in the vernaculars as far as possible."

12-49 P.M.

[Mr. G. S. Khaparde ; Sir William Vincent.] [19TH FEBRUARY, 1919.]

12-50 P.M.

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent:—"My Lord, there does not appear to be any particular enthusiasm about this amendment, but I am perfectly prepared to defer to the wishes of the two Hon'ble Members who press for publication in the local Gazettes. The measure is not one of any urgency, and I am always glad, though not always able, to meet Hon'ble Members of this Council. I must at the same time take exception to the statement made by the Hon'ble Mr. Patel that the first part of the Bill makes material changes in the law. It is quite true that the present Act applies specifically to white arsenic only for areas outside municipalities and cantonments, but I think the Hon'ble Member omitted to take into account section 6, which says, 'The Governor General in Council may, by notification in the Gazette of India, apply to any specified poison other than white arsenic all or any of the provisions of this Act relating exclusively to white arsenic.' So that the Government of India is taking no additional powers now. It merely is proposed to specify in the law powers which the Government of India can now exercise indirectly by double notifications. There is really no other substantial change in the law in this matter except that power is now decentralised from the Government of India to Local Governments. It is however true that in regard to tanners and hide merchants, we do propose a material change. We have ascertained to the best of our ability that that change will not hamper trade, and it seems to the Government of India prima facie reasonable that a man who is dealing with poisons that may be used for murder and for causing mischief to cattle should be, at any rate, under a requirement to keep registers showing what his stocks are and how they are dealt with. However, my Lord, I am quite prepared, as I said, to accept the amendment of the Hon'ble Member."

The motion, as amended, was put and agreed to.

The Council then adjourned to Wednesday, the 26th of February, 1919, at 11 A.M.

A. P. MUDDIMAN,

Secretary to the Government of India.

DELHI :

The 26th February 1919. }

APPENDIX A.

As desired by His Excellency the Viceroy I take this opportunity to make a comprehensive statement regarding the agricultural position resulting from the widespread failure of last monsoon and the economic situation in regard to foodstuffs ensuing from it. I will also explain the action we have taken in respect of our foodstuffs, but, in order that this Council may be able fully to appreciate the reasons for that action and its variations, I shall have to go back to a period anterior to last monsoon.

It will be within the recollection of this Council that, as explained in 1916 and 1917, the Government of India undertook to co-operate in a scheme for the export, on behalf of Great Britain and her Allies, of the wheat required by them; and that export of wheat for other purposes and destinations was brought under strict control. Later, in connection with the great pressure upon rolling stock on Indian Railways, resulting from the shortage of sea freight, it became necessary, in April of last year, to appoint Directors of Civil Supplies, who were empowered to grant certificates, in respect of articles required on civil account, which gave priority for those articles over ordinary uncertificated traffic. Foodstuffs were during last summer dealt with by Directors of Civil Supplies under this system. When it became apparent, during July last, that there was reason to apprehend an unfavourable agricultural season, the Foodstuffs Board, which had come into being as a result of the Delhi Conference, advised, and Government approved the advice, that a meeting should be convened at Nagpur, of all Director of Civil Supplies and of the Railway authorities chiefly concerned, to consider the situation, and to concert measures of a precautionary character. As a result of that conference, improvements were effected in the system of priority certificates and a better understanding was reached between different provinces and the Railway authorities as to the methods by which railway traffic in foodstuffs should be regulated. Though the latter end of August saw a partial improvement in the kharif situation in parts of India, the hopes then engendered were disappointed. September and October were unusually rainless: and it became obvious that we must prepare for a severe restriction in the output of kharif crops over a very wide area. Accordingly we telegraphed on October 2nd to the Secretary of State describing the situation, and intimating the inability of India to continue the purchase and export of wheat and other foodstuffs other than those required for Mesopotamia.

We further decided that the situation was so serious that it required, to meet it, a revision of our organisation. We substituted an executive officer, the Foodstuffs Commissioner, for the Advisory Board, which had till then helped us. Prompt action, capacity to confer direct with provincial authorities on the spot, and defined authority were considered essential in substitution for consultative and advisory powers. The Central Transport and Foodstuffs Board had helped the Government admirably during the period when events were maturing and I take this opportunity to express, on behalf of the Government of India, our acknowledgments of the services so spontaneously given by the non-official members of that Board.

At the Conference convened on October 15th in Delhi, at which the newly appointed Foodstuffs Commissioner was present, the whole situation was revised and discussed, in the light of the agricultural situation as it had developed, and having regard to the action already taken, in co-operation with His Majesty's Government, for the restriction of exports. It will be remembered that on October 15th the war was still in progress and the action then determined on had to be limited with due regard to that dominant factor; but the dramatic collapse of Germany, resulting in the Armistice, still further freed the hands of the Government of India in respect of external obligations, and I will now describe the steps taken in November and December to conserve the food reserves of India. On our representation to the Secretary of State His Majesty's Government not only agreed to our maintaining our prohibition against exports of wheat to all destinations but, as regards rice, they also acceded to a scheme, which we proposed to them, under which the exportable surplus of the Burma crop of 1919 should be utilised primarily for the needs of India and of certain countries which contain an Indian population and are dependent on this country for their supplies of rice. Practically then it may be said that those western and many eastern markets which have in the past been regularly drawing on India have now turned elsewhere for their supplies of rice and wheat.

Again, early in December when a brief review of the position indicated the necessity of assuring an additional supply of wheat, we proposed through the Secretary of State to the Home Government a programme of purchases from Australia to tide over the period until the rabi was harvested. I am glad to say that through the good offices of His Majesty's Government, who have secured this wheat and freight for us at cost price, we have been able to make some progress with this programme, and actually we have purchased, and there are or will shortly be on their way to us, 125,000 tons of Australian wheat. The original programme which contemplated an import of 200,000 tons we have now still further extended, and provided that shipping can be made available we trust that it may be possible for His Majesty's Government to obtain for us in Australia 500,000 tons to reach India before the end of July.

In regard to the Burma rice crop, we have taken still further steps. Not only have exports from Burma been restricted to certain destinations, as I have just explained, but even these limited exports are to be subject to a price control, for no export license is being granted except on satisfactory evidence being produced to the effect that the price paid does not exceed the maximum controlled price. Finally, we have secured two substantial reductions in the freight on rice from Rangoon. The first resulted in a cheapening of the price of this commodity in Bombay by Rs 1 a bag and in Madras by 12 annas, while the second which has brought down the freight rate to Bombay to Rs 30 will ensure a further reduction of Rs 1 per bag in the price of this necessary article.

These measures have been supplemented by prohibitory orders against the exportation of other food grains. A position has thus been reached at which no food grains will leave India except in very limited quantities, and for exceptionally strong reasons. In such circumstances, we felt we were able to contemplate a relaxation of the restrictions which had been placed on the movement of foodstuffs within India. The imposition of these restrictions on the movement of foodstuffs dates back to the time when, as will have been understood from my earlier remarks, in order to facilitate the purchases for the Royal Commission and at the same time to protect the Indian consumer against an undue inflation of prices, it was found necessary to prohibit the movements of wheat from the Punjab. But the main cause which led to the regulation of the traffic in foodstuffs was, as His Excellency the Viceroy explained in this Council last September, the congestion on the railways which, owing to the enormous quantity of military material and the large number of troops which had to be transported, formed a very serious difficulty in providing facilities for the movement of the commodities essentially required by the civil population. Directors of Civil Supplies were then created, whose certification of any particular traffic was, as I have explained, to be accepted by the railway authorities as entitling such traffic to priority. Subsequently it was found that the holders of these priority certificates were in certain parts of India thereby placed in a favourable position and were taking advantage of this to raise prices against the consumer; and we were approached by almost all the Local Governments, asking that they should be empowered to regulate the movement into, from and within, their provinces. At the time this demand manifested itself we felt very grave doubts as to the desirability of acceding to it, for we anticipated, as has indeed come about, that the discretionary power so granted to local authorities would result in certain areas finding themselves cut off from purchasing their essential requirements in those parts of the country to which they had ordinarily in the past looked for their supplies. The opinion of the Local Governments was, however, so strong and insistent that we decided to defer to it, at any rate until some experience had been gained of the way in which these powers would be used. At the same time, we withdrew from the scope of the Local Governments' control two essential commodities, rice and wheat, which we decided must be kept in our own hands, and in regard to which, while we were ready to consult, and hear the views of, the Local Governments as to the capacity of their provinces to supply, we recognised that it must be left to us definitely to decide to what extent each supplying province should contribute its quota. More recently we have added gram to the list of commodities the movement of which we ourselves regulate. Towards the end of the last month, as a result of the protests which we received from the Government of Bombay against the results of the policy of entrusting to local authorities the right of directing movements from their provinces, we have withdrawn this power from all Local Governments.

The protest from the Bombay Government to which I have referred laid stress on the very great difference between the prices in Bombay and those prevailing in up-country centres. It is indeed only a natural result of the obstacles which have been placed by the system of regulation in the way of free movement of foodstuffs that there should be in different parts of the country abnormal variations in the price of foodstuffs. That in itself was a grave demerit, but other disadvantages followed from this attempt to run counter to economic laws. Trade was hampered, the fullest use was not made of long established trade connections and it was inevitable that the setting up of new trade connections should be attended with difficulty and delay.

I can only make a brief allusion to the subject of prices. These have reached an abnormally high level, and we fully realise the hardships that they entail on the great mass of the population; but, during the period following such a world-wide cataclysm as we have been through during the last four years, it is idle to expect that conditions should return at once to the normal. The effect of the diversion of human effort from the labours of peace to the work of war is bound to continue to make itself felt for some time to come. To a large extent India has been saved from many of the consequences which other belligerent countries have had to undergo and it is only in the last few months that we have seen prices here begin to move towards the level which obtains in the outside world, and even now, in many cases, Indian prices are still much below world prices. It has been argued in some quarters that the present level of Indian prices indicates a shortage of supplies. This is not necessarily the case for we have seen that the rise in prices is not limited to any specific commodity or group of commodities but is practically universal, and for the universality of a rise in prices we must probably look to some cause of general application. The whole subject is an intricate one and would need more elaborate discussion than I can give to it here.

As regards the palliative and relief measures, regarding which questions have been asked in Council, large allotments have been made for faccavi loans, a measure of relief which proved to be of the greatest benefit in the famine in the United Provinces in 1913-14. The programmes of public works are being expanded, where necessary, to provide labour, and earthwork is being started on some projected railways. Direct measures of relief are only in the initial stages, such as the opening of poor houses on a small scale and the distribution of gratuitous relief. It has hitherto been an accepted principle, embodied in the famine codes, that gratuitous relief should not be given before scarcity has been declared, but we have found it necessary to relax this principle in some cases where the economic distress has been aggravated by the epidemic of influenza.

One bright feature illumines the otherwise sombre retrospect of the past season. The monsoon was slightly more active than usual in November and December, in Madras and the Central Provinces especially, while the rain of three weeks ago all over the country except Bombay has been of incalculable benefit to the standing rabi of upper and central India. We can now hope to reap a rabi crop sufficient, with the imports of Burma rice and Australian wheat, to carry us through the ensuing months : and though the position is not free from anxiety, an anxiety largely occasioned by the degree in which the world at large is hampered by shortage of shipping freight, I think we may hope successfully to tide over the period intervening between now and the next monsoon harvest.

I should like to add my tribute to what His Excellency said in regard to Mr. Gubbay's work. Without his resourcefulness and devoted industry we should have found it hard at times to carry on and the general public as well as the Government owe him a warm debt of gratitude.

Rainfall summary for the seven days ending at 8 hrs. on Thursday, the 27th February 1919, based on the Indian Daily Weather Reports of the period.

1. Settled dry weather prevailed generally during the first three days, but during the rest of the week a diffuse disturbance affected northern and central India, causing widespread snow in the Punjab and Kumaon hills, with nearly general rain in Chota Nagpur and local rain in the Central Provinces, Central India East, Assam and the east of the United Provinces. A few falls also occurred in Burma, Bengal, Orissa, Hyderabad and south Madras.

2. Burma.—Rangoon, Toungoo, Yamethin, Myitkyina and Lashio were the only stations that reported rain.

Northeast India, including Orissa.—Rainfall was nearly general in Chota Nagpur on the 24th and in the Sikkim Himalayas on the 25th, and local in Assam on the 26th; there was some rain in Orissa and southeast Bengal during the week.

The United Provinces, Central India and the Central Provinces.—Nearly general snow fell in the Kumaon hills on the 25th; local falls of rain occurred in the west of the Central Provinces on the 23rd, and in Central India East and in the east of the Central Provinces and of the United Provinces on the 24th.

Northwest India.—The week was rainless.

The Peninsula.—Weather was dry except for light falls at Cochin, Kodaikanal and Aurangabad.

3. The chief amounts of rainfall reported were as follows:—

February 23rd. Akola 0·42", Amraoti 0·88", Nagpur 0·56" and Chanda 0·60".

„ 24th. Allahabad 0·31", Sutna 0·82", Akola 0·32", Pendra 0·58" and Raipur 1·46".

„ 25th. Myitkyina 0·35", Darjeeling 1·58" and False Point 0·68".

„ 26th. Myitkyina 0·45".

4. The week's rainfall was 20 per cent or more in excess in Upper Burma, Central India East and the Central Provinces; and was 20 per cent or more in defect in the Bay Islands, Lower Burma, Assam, Bengal, Chota Nagpur, Bihar, the United Provinces West, the Punjab, Kashmir, the North-West Frontier Province, Baluchistan, Sind, Rajputana East, Central India West, Hyderabad South, Madras Southeast and the Madras Coast North. It was normal in Orissa, the United Provinces East, Hyderabad North and Malabar. No rain usually falls at this time of year in Rajputana West, Gujarat, the Konkan, the Bombay Deccan, Mysore and the Madras Deccan.

The rainfall from the 29th November to date is 20 per cent or more in defect in Upper Burma, Assam and Bengal; and is 20 per cent or more in excess in Lower Burma, Bihar and Orissa, the United Provinces, Gujarat, Central India, the Central Provinces, the Konkan, the Bombay Deccan, Hyderabad, Mysore, Malabar and the Madras Coast North. It is within 20 per cent of the normal in the remaining divisions.

Season and Crop Prospects for the week ending Saturday, 22nd February 1919.

Burma.—Excepting slight showers in Akyab and Mergui the week was rainless. Threshing and winnowing of winter rice have practically been completed in Lower Burma. In Upper Burma cultivation of spring rice and harvesting of gram, peas and beans are still progressing. Standing crops are good. Cattle are generally healthy. The price of unhusked rice in Rangoon has risen slightly to Rupees 124 per 100 baskets and is above normal. The market for white rice is dull at Rupees 307-3 per hundred baskets for specials.

Assam.—The weather was seasonable. Rain is wanted in five districts for agricultural operations and growth of crops. Harvesting of pulses is finished and that of mustard is nearing completion. Pressing of sugarcane, pruning of tea and ploughing for autumn rice and jute continue. Outturns and prospects of crops are generally indifferent. Cattle disease is reported from two districts. The price of common rice shows a tendency to fall.

Bengal.—Rainfall was general all over western districts during the week, but elsewhere the fall was light. Recent rain has improved prospects of standing crops especially in western districts, and has facilitated preparatory tillage for autumn crops. Sowing of jute, autumn paddy and millet has commenced in some districts of Eastern Bengal. Harvesting of oilseeds, potatoes and other spring crops continues. The average price of common rice has risen by 1·63 per cent. Distress prevails in Bankura and in Brahmanbaria sub-division of Tippera where 1,549 and 738 persons respectively resorted to test works. Agricultural loans are being distributed. Gratuitous relief is being given to 1,021 persons in Bankura.

Bihar and Orissa.—Light rain was nearly general over the province. Pressing of sugarcane still continues. Harvesting of oilseeds and preparation of lands for the next season's crops are going on. Standing crops are on the whole doing well. The daily average number of persons attending test works in Ranchi was 34 and in Angul 762. Gratuitous relief was given to 2,339 persons in the latter district. The price of common rice has risen in five districts, fallen in three and remained stationary in the remaining districts as compared with that of the preceding week. Cattle disease is reported from nine districts.

United Provinces.—Rainfall was light to moderate in nearly the whole province and benefited the standing crops. Slight damage by hail is reported from Naini Tal, Rae Bareilly, Fyzabad, Fatehpur and Mirzapur. Preparation of land for and sowing of sugarcane and extra crops, harvesting of peas and mustard, irrigation of spring crops and poppy and pressing of sugarcane continue. Standing crops are doing well. Prospects are hopeful. Very little cattle disease is reported and agricultural stock is on the whole good. Fodder is still scarce in some districts, but as much Government hay is being supplied as possible. Water and market supplies are sufficient. Prices are stationary with a tendency to fall.

The weekly report on scarcity is as follows :— Rainfall was good in Garhwal and light elsewhere. It was beneficial to standing crops. Sugarcane is being pressed. Irrigation of spring crops and poppy continues. Standing crops are in good condition. Prospects are hopeful. Condition of agricultural stock is satisfactory except in the affected tracts of Etawah and Bundelkhand districts where slight cattle disease is reported. Fodder is still scarce but Government hay is being sold and advances are being given. Market supplies are generally adequate but shortage is reported from some villages in the affected tracts of Etawah. No marked increase in serious crime is noticeable. There is some increase in petty crime against property in Banda. No wandering or emaciation is reported. Influenza is decreasing in Garhwal. Plague is reported from 3 villages of scarcity area in Benares. No epidemic is reported elsewhere and public health is generally good. Physical condition of people on works is fair. Clothing is in demand in Benares, Banda and Jalaun, and private charity is being organised in all these districts. Prices are high but stationary. Price basis in Garhwal is 4, Benares 6½, elsewhere 7 seers per rupee. Number of persons on test works is decreasing as harvesting operations have begun. Numbers relieved on works :—Etawah civil 3,275, forest 6,175, aided 310, private 431; Jalaun 386, Jhansi 194, Hamirpur 889, Banda 213. Numbers relieved in poor houses :—Jalaun 15, Jhansi 10, Hamirpur 213, Banda 75. Numbers gratuitously relieved, Garhwal 801, Etawah 2,257, Benares 1,620, Jalaun 772, Jhansi 39, Hamirpur 3,697, Banda 6,603. Relief measures are adequate. Numbers relieved in Agra 384 (average), Fatehpur 455 and Allahabad 205.

Punjab.—Except for light rain in parts of a few districts the weather remained dry. Condition and prospects of irrigated wheat and other standing crops are average to good and of unirrigated crops below average to average. Pressing of sugarcane continues in some districts. The yield is generally below normal. Sowings of extra spring crops are in progress and are below normal. Cattle are generally healthy but dry fodder is scarce in most districts. Green fodder is available. Water is generally sufficient. Prices are generally stationary and above scarcity rates. Prices of wheat :—Ferozepore and Rawalpindi 5½, Ambala, Lahore and Lyallpur 5½ seers per rupee.

North-West Frontier Province.—The week was rainless. More rain is still badly wanted in Dera Ismail Khan. Prospects of standing crops both on irrigated and unirrigated areas are generally average in Peshawar and Bannu and below average in Dera Ismail Khan. Pressing of sugarcane continues in one district with outturn average. Prices of wheat :—Peshawar 7½ and Dera Ismail Khan 6½ seers per rupee.

Jammu.—Rain was slight. Prices are stationary. Fodder is sufficient.

Kashmir.—The week was generally cloudy and cold. Standing spring crops are in fair condition. Cattle disease is reported in Muzafferabad tehsil. Prices are fluctuating.

Rajputana.—The weather was clear and is getting hot in places. Condition of spring crops on irrigated land is fair. Water is sufficient. Fodder is scarce. Cattle are in losing condition. In some places foot and mouth disease is reported. In two States grant of taccavi advances continues. Prices are steady. Number gratuitously relieved :—Todgarh 102. Number on famine works in Karauli :—637.

Central India.—Rainfall was practically nil. Spring crops are being irrigated and harvested. Sugarcane is being pressed in Gwalior. Threshing and winnowing of autumn crops is nearly completed in Malwa. Land is being prepared for autumn crops in Indore. Standing crops and probable outturn are fair except in parts of Gwalior, Malwa and the Southern States. Crops have been damaged in Jaora and Manpur. Agricultural stock is bad in parts of Gwalior and fair elsewhere except for cattle disease in parts of Bhopal and the Southern States. Scarcity of fodder prevails in Gwalior, Indore, Bundelkhand and in parts of Malwa and the Southern States. Prices are high but stationary. Opium is fair in Indore and Malwa and is being irrigated and weeded in Gwalior.

The report on scarcity is as follows:—Distress in Bundelkhand is increasing though it is not acute. Poorer classes and smaller cultivators are mostly affected. There is no wandering or emaciation. Relief measures are adequate. Suspensions of land revenue have been granted and takavi advanced for deepening wells and fodder. Public health is good. There is no epidemic and no need of relief in clothing is felt. Prices are high, but stationary prices are as follows :—Orchha 11, Samthar 6½, Bijawar 9, Northern group 6½ to 7½, Western 6 to 6½, Headquarters and Central 6 to 6½. Numbers on relief in thousands :—Orchha, works 1·1, gratuitous ·4, total 1·5; Samthar, works 4, gratuitous 1, total 5; Ajaigarh, works 1·8, gratuitous ·6, total 2·4; Bijawar, works 4, gratuitous 1, total 5; Northern group, works 2·7, gratuitous ·6, total 3·3; Western, works nil, gratuitous 1, total 1; Headquarters, works 1, gratuitous ·3, total 4; Central, works 7, gratuitous 2, total 9; Grand total, works 10·8, gratuitous 3·3, both 14·1. Report from Charkhari not received.

Central Provinces.—The weather has been clear with occasional clouds. Nights and mornings are cool, but days are getting warm. During the week six districts had no rain. Bhandara and Raipur registered 1½ and 1½ inches of rain respectively while the remaining districts received light showers accompanied by hail in a few places causing some local damage. Harvesting of spring crops has begun in several districts and prospects are generally fair to good. The supply of fodder is adequate in parts of Hoshangabad and Berar. Cattle are faring well but mouth disease prevails in parts of certain districts. Relief works continue in the distressed tracts of Damoh, Jubbulpore, Betul and Chanda. Rice in Bhandara and gram in Buldana fell by 1 seer per rupee. Elsewhere prices remained steady or fluctuated slightly.

The weekly report on scarcity is as follows:—General health is good in all affected districts except for after effects of influenza. Owing to immigrants from adjoining States coming in large numbers in search of work, dislocation of work due to heavy rain and high prices, distress has become more acute in Marwara and Sihora tahsils of Jubbulpore where declaration of famine is being made. Private funds continue to distribute cloth here and have been started in Seoni. Situation has deteriorated in a limited area in Betul and declaration of famine is probable. Spring harvest is affording employment in Sironcha and the Saugor districts. Prices of food grains are high but stationary. Numbers on special works :—Jubbulpore 2,014, Damoh 2,817, Chanda nil, Betul 3,390, Seoni 2,753, Saugor 374, total 11,948. Figures of increased numbers on ordinary works have not yet been supplied but have been called for. Numbers on gratuitous relief :—Jubbulpore 8,975, Damoh 3,277, Chanda 376, Betul 1,549, Seoni 1,038, Saugor 37, total 15,262.

Dependatory States.—Seven States received light showers. Spring prospects are generally good.

Bombay.—Standing crops are fair to good except slight damage by insects and frost in parts of Karachi. Harvesting of spring crops continues in parts of Karnatak. Cotton picking is nearing completion. Fodder supply is generally insufficient but supplies continue to be moved to worst affected areas under Government arrangements. Agricultural stock is generally sufficient, but cattle are deteriorating except in Konkan. Irrigation is generally deficient. Prices of food grains are high but generally steady.

The weekly report on scarcity is as follows:—No rain fell during the week in scarcity or famine areas. Scarcity has been declared in Bijapur District. Relief works continue in Ahmednagar, parts of Poona, Panch Mahals, and public works programme is being extended in most districts to afford work. Test works are in progress in Panch Mahals, Kaira, Broach, Poona and Satara. One poor house has been open in Poona and another in Thana for destitute immigrants into Bombay. Numbers of persons on relief works including dependants on last day of week ending 22nd instant were:—works, Panch Mahals 6,315, Ahmednagar 15,800, Poona 9,847, total 31,962. Numbers on gratuitous relief including village servants in Panch Mahals 2,411, Kaira 7,012, Broach 1,366, Kathiawar 1,622, West Khandesh 585, Ahmednagar 9,350, Poona 4,805, Satara 3,197, Belgaum 1,677, total 32,025; Native States:—Kathiawar and Palitana 241, Limbdi 125, total 366. Numbers in poor house:—Thana 430. Numbers of persons on test works were—Kaira 449, Broach 379, Poona 741, Satara 226, total 1,795. People on relief works are in good condition. No increase in mortality is reported. Medical arrangements are sufficient. Crime is normal. Numbers on works are increasing. Hardly any wandering or emaciation is noticed. Emigration continues from Satara. Public health is generally good. Liberal suspensions of land revenue have been granted and takavi is being freely advanced. Cheap grain shops continue working in West Khandesh, Nasik and Kathiawar. Cattle Camps have been organised in some districts. Private charitable relief is being organised and distributed in several districts. Fodder and water are scarce. Fodder is being supplied to affected areas under Government arrangements.

Hyderabad.—No rain fell during the week. Spring harvest continues. The crop is fair to good except in Aurangabad, Bir and Warangal districts. Late rice crop is fair and is being weeded. Fodder is scarce in some districts. Prices of grains continue to be abnormally high. Juar is selling at three seers per rupee in the Gulbarga district.

Mysore.—The week was rainless. Standing crops are in fair condition. Harvested ragi, rice and sugarcane outturn is poor to fair. Cattle are generally healthy. Water and fodder are available. Prices are high and rising. Prospects of season are fair.

Coorg.—The weather was cloudy. Threshing of rice and picking of coffee continue. Water and fodder for cattle are sufficient. Cattle disease prevails in parts. Prices of food grains are high. Public health is fair.

Madras.—Rainfall was light in Ganjam, Vizagapatam, Godavari, Tinnevely, Malabar, Cochin and the Hills and nil elsewhere. Standing crops are fair generally but have been damaged or are withering in limited areas in Ganjam and parts of Carnatic. Cholam has been affected by disease in parts of the Deccan. Harvests of paddy, sugarcane and dry crops are limited with outturn sometimes fair but poor in parts of fourteen districts. Late sowings of paddy and dry crops are proceeding under wells and tanks to a small extent. Condition of cattle is good generally. Water is insufficient except in Kistna, Nellore, Chingleput, Malabar and the Hills. Pasture is sufficient except in parts of seven districts. Fodder is insufficient in parts of four districts. Prices of rice are generally stationary but those of dry grains are rising. Prospects are fair generally but bad in parts of Ganjam, Bellary, Chittoor, North Arcot and Salem. Total attendance in Ganjam on thirteen test works in Gumsur and five in Udayagiri Agency:—13,414. Gratuitous relief:—4,037.

RESOLUTION RELATING TO CLASSIFICATION OF ANCIENT MONUMENTS.

RESOLUTION.

At present the lists of ancient monuments in India are classified in accordance with the instructions laid down in paragraphs 3 and 4 of the Home Department resolution no. 3-168-183, dated the 26th November 1883. It has been represented to the Government of India that since the passing of the Ancient Monuments Preservation Act, 1904 (VII of 1904), the classification laid down in the above mentioned resolution has been found inadequate inasmuch as it makes no provision for those monuments which, although privately-owned, are nevertheless maintained by Government in accordance with agreements made under section 5 of the Ancient Monuments Preservation Act, VII of 1904. The Governor General in Council has, therefore, given the matter his careful consideration and after consulting the Director General of Archæology in India is pleased to direct that in future the lists of ancient monuments should be classified as noted below :—

- I. Those monuments which from their present condition and historical or archæological value ought to be maintained in permanent good repair.
 - II. Those monuments which it is now only possible or desirable to save from further decay by such minor measures as the eradication of vegetation, the exclusion of water from the walls and the like.
 - III. Those monuments which from their advanced stage of decay or comparative unimportance it is impossible or unnecessary to preserve.
- The monuments in classes I and II should be further sub-divided thus :—
- I (a) and II (a).—Monuments owned and maintained by Government.
 - I (b) and II (b).—Monuments owned and maintained by private persons.
 - I (c) and II (c).—Monuments owned by private persons but maintained by the owners and Government jointly or by the Government exclusively.

2. His Excellency in Council is satisfied that, while the adoption of the classification noted above will be distinctly advantageous in preparing future lists, it will not in any case render the existing lists either useless or ineffectual, as it will be a simple matter in each province to circulate to officials concerned a brief schedule showing the corrections to be made which may be pasted in their appropriate places in the lists.

3. The words "Ancient monuments" in this resolution should be interpreted as monuments within the meaning of section 2 (1) of the Ancient Monuments Preservation Act, 1904, (VII of 1904).

ORDER.—Ordered that a copy of this resolution be forwarded to local Governments and Administrations and the Director General of Archæology in India for information and guidance.

Ordered also, that a copy be forwarded to the Foreign and Political, Public Works and Finance Departments for information and that the resolution be published in the Supplement to the Gazette of India.

NARRATIVE OF THE HONOURABLE FINANCE MEMBER INTRODUCING THE FINANCIAL STATEMENT
FOR 1919-20.

Narrative of the Honourable Finance Member

INTRODUCING THE

FINANCIAL STATEMENT FOR 1919-20.

Introductory.

The treatment of the Financial Statement in Council will follow the same lines as last year. It is presented to-day: a general debate upon it will take place on the 7th instant; the second and third stages of the discussion will open on the 8th instant; and it is hoped that the Budget in its final form will be presented on the 21st instant. The statement this year has been made as brief as possible, consistently with the number of important topics on which it is bound to touch.

SECTION I.—THE YEAR 1918-1919.

A.—General characteristics.

2. It is doubtful whether, in the financial history of British India, there has been a year of more diversified character or varied difficulties than 1918-1919. To understand our transactions during the twelve months, and our commitments for the future, explanations are necessary which, however briefly put, must cover a wide area.

3. The Armistice.—Dominating all other features of the year, financial or others, was the sudden cessation of hostilities in November. The last budget was presented at a time of grave crisis for the Allied arms, when Germany was making its final and greatest endeavour to break through our line in France. The peril had the effect in India of calling forth more strenuous effort, in men and materials; and the first seven months of the year were a period of great and widespread activity. Up to the end of October, the value of the external trade of India was bigger than in either of the two previous years; the exports of food grains, tea and gunny bags being evidence of India's material help to the Allied countries, and the imports of sugar and textiles being indicative of the high prosperity which she reaped in return. The railway revenue corresponded: and at one time it looked as if trade remittances through the Secretary of State would be heavier than the record figure of the previous year. Prices remained high, and there was much speculation based on the expectancy that this hectic energy would endure. With the armistices came a sudden change. The wheat export had stopped in September for other reasons; but cotton now fell off immediately, and there was a great slackening in gunnies. Imports of all kinds declined sharply, chiefly sugar and piece-goods. Panic fell upon the cloth market: prices came tumbling down, forward orders were cancelled and peace brought catastrophe to those who had been gambling wildly on the continuation of war. The reaction on the Government exchequer was mainly caused by the complete cessation of trade remittances to India. The Secretary of State stopped selling bills near the end of October, and since then we have lost the large exchange profits which a one-and-six penny rupee had been yielding us, while we had to go on at express speed coining rupees, and losing on them, to meet the unassuaged thirst of the people for metallic currency. All these factors will be discussed in more detail later. The cardinal point is that peace has laid its hand upon the unhealthy prosperity which the war had brought us; and we have now to descend to a more normal plane of trade and business.

4. Scarcity.—To this painful process the chief obstacle at present is the persistently high range of prices for all the necessities, as well as the comforts, of life. The world factors responsible for high prices have been supplemented, so far as cereals are concerned, by the unfortunate agricultural situation over a large area in India. The outlook when the last Budget was prepared was generally good, although the several meteorological disturbances of the cold weather type which had appeared in January and February 1918 were all feeble and gave little rain. The weather was accordingly exceptionally dry throughout northern and central India. In the Peninsula on the other hand conditions had been unusually disturbed during January and February, and very heavy rain for the time of the year occurred in the west coast districts. The Arabian Sea monsoon appeared nearly three weeks before its normal date and gave widespread and unusually heavy rain over nearly the whole of the Peninsula for about five weeks. Its activities then began to decline and, after an appreciable improvement during the latter half of August, it merged during September into a complete break which continued till the end of the regular monsoon season. The Bay monsoon also arrived upwards of two weeks earlier than usual, and was of normal intensity. But unfortunately its activities were confined during nearly the whole season to Burma and north-east India. The average rainfall over the plains was in defect by 6·5 inches, or 19 per cent., which is the highest deficiency on record since the year 1899. The prolonged break in the monsoon adversely affected the area and yield of the principal crops. The condition of the crops now standing is on the whole favourable, especially in the northern and central parts of the country, but there is a serious reduction in area. The shortage of rain has affected most provinces, although the Peninsula was favoured with abundant rain during November and December and more recent falls have much improved prospects in the Punjab, Central Provinces and the United Provinces. The agricultural record of the closing year is therefore an unhappy one, and has entailed the usual consequences. Famine has had to be declared in the Ahmednagar district and in certain other parts of Bombay. Scarcity has been declared in 2 districts of the United Provinces, 6 districts of the Central Provinces, 11 districts and the Kathiawar Agency of Bombay. Distress prevails in Bankura, and is impending in Angul, in 5 districts of the United Provinces, 2 districts of Madras, and considerable areas in Central India. The number of persons on test works, in receipt of gratuitous relief, and in poor houses during the week ending 15th February 1919 was 128,178. Cattle are suffering even more than men, for there is a serious scarcity of fodder in the United Provinces, the Punjab, Bombay, Rajputana and the Bogra district of Bengal. Concession rates for the carriage of fodder by rail to affected areas have been sanctioned, and Fodder Controllers have been appointed in the Punjab and Bombay. All the elaborate mechanism for famine relief, well tried and now thoroughly understood, is ready to combat distress in its various forms. The approved prophylactic of agricultural loans on a generous scale has been already applied, the large sum of two crores having been sanctioned for advances in the United Provinces alone. The good seasons of recent years and the full prices paid for agricultural produce must have accumulated unusual reserves of rural wealth, and it may be expected that widespread or acute distress will be averted; but it is a sad reflection that this calamity should have befallen the country at a time when it had hoped to join in the universal thanksgiving at the end of war.

5. The Influenza.—More calamitous than famine, or than a great campaign, has been the epidemic of influenza which ravaged India in the autumn of 1918. A reference to this terrible scourge was made by His Excellency the Viceroy in his speech at the opening of this session; and all that need be added is to emphasize the effect of the epidemic in weakening the capacity of the rural population to cope with their ordinary work, and particularly with the drought which simultaneously fastened on them. It has had most depressing results on rural efficiency, and has complicated the task of famine relief.

6. Commerce and Prices.—In judging of the year's trade, it has to be remembered that the steady rise in prices, which continued from 1917-18 into the current year, frequently obscures an actual fall in the volume of imports or exports. Subject to this reservation we have an increase of £8 millions in the total value of private merchandise imported into India during the first nine months of the current year, as compared with the same period in 1917. For exports of private merchandise, the increase is over £9 millions. The export figures incidentally demonstrate the extent to which India was able to increase her assistance in the way of supplies to the Allied nations and their armed forces. Exports of cereals rose by over 50 per cent. to a total in 1917-18 of 5,400,000 tons valued at £36,000,000. In the case of wheat the record figure of 1,500,000 tons was reached. In the earlier months of the current year, India's contribution of foodstuffs was maintained at an even higher level than in 1917. With the failure of the monsoon, however, the exportable surplus rapidly diminished and artificial checks on export have had to be imposed. Fortunately a marked improvement took place in the food situation in the Allied countries during the summer months.

7. Our command of raw materials apart from cereals placed us in a highly favourable position until the effects of scarcity began to make themselves felt. The trade in oilseeds suffered, it is true, from the shortage of freight, which was naturally most marked in the case of seeds not essential for war purposes. But a rapid expansion has taken place in the crushing of seed for the export of oil, and there is a marked rise in prices : oil cake tends more and more to be retained for local consumption. Last year raw jute continued to decline as an export, and prices were low. In the summer of 1918 a sharp recovery took place, when it was apparent that the crop was likely to be short ; and with an improvement in shipping facilities exports during the first nine months of the current year showed an advance in value of 100 per cent. on the 1917 figures. In manufactured jute, high prices appear to have restricted to some extent the foreign demand for gunny bags, but none the less this great industry has beaten all records by exporting goods to the value of £28,000,000 during the nine months April to December 1918. Record quantities of tea were exported in 1917-18 though at a somewhat less remunerative price than in the previous two years. The current year promises to be equally prosperous for the tea industry. Coffee planters have been less fortunate during the war, but should be able to look forward to the future without apprehension. Valuable new markets have been exploited and the English market has now been re-opened to Indian coffee. Exports of rubber have grown steadily during the war, though prices ruled low during the current year. The price of raw cotton reached unprecedented heights early in the current year and there was consequently a striking fall in our shipments both of the raw material and of cotton yarn. Another consequence was that the rates for country cloth became so exorbitant as to cause much hardship and discontent. With better news from the theatres of war, the holding up of stocks for still higher prices came to an end, and the whole position became easier ; but there are again signs of an upward tendency. In cotton piece-goods from Indian mills, the export naturally diminished, with the high prices ruling in the local markets ; but it is noteworthy that, in the first nine months of this year, a decline of 14 per cent. in the volume of export has been concomitant with a rise of 36 per cent. in its value. The net result of this brief review is to show the enormous strength that India has acquired as a producer, under peaceful conditions, of the chief necessities of life.

8. Restrictions on trade.—With the cessation of hostilities, it has already become possible to withdraw many of the restrictions on trade which have been inevitable during the war. No one is more anxious than the Government of India to complete this process of liberation, and a word may now be said as to how far it has been possible to go in this direction and what is the position of Government with respect to the restrictions that still remain. Interference during the war with the normal course of trade has, as a rule, been undertaken in pursuance of one of three aims :—to satisfy India's own needs ; to satisfy the needs of Great Britain and the Allies ; and to hamper the enemy. Restrictions of the third class remain in full force. They consist in a complete prohibition of trade with enemy countries and a very strict control of trade with neutral countries adjacent thereto. These restrictions apply to other countries equally with India and their relaxation depends entirely on the decisions of the Peace Conference. Of the second class of restrictions, namely, those designed to assist the Allied cause, some are of necessity still in force. Until the food situation has become normal in the Allied countries and until their depleted industries have been rehabilitated, it is only just that they should have some form of preference in the supply of certain raw products and other necessities of national existence. The scheme for the control of tea which gave to the producer a guaranteed market at a fair price for a large percentage of his output has been maintained in the interest of the consumer hitherto, but will shortly be terminated. Control is still being maintained over mica which is an essential to Allied industry, and a system of licensing is being retained for certain other products for which a survey of the Allied demand is not yet complete. On the other hand, the restrictions on the export of jute manufactures, saltpetre, tanning materials and petrol have been removed. The control of raw and tanned hides has been very greatly relaxed subject to certain safeguards in the interest of the future of the trade. The tanning of skins is no longer prohibited and restrictions on the transport of skins by rail have been withdrawn and export has been re-opened. Shellac exporters have been relieved of their obligation to give preferential supplies to the Ministry of Munitions and free export of oilseeds, vegetable oils and manganese is now permitted. The prohibition on the import of motor cars has been raised. The Ministry of Shipping has already, subject to certain safeguards, terminated the Liner Requisition scheme and freights have been reduced to a fraction of their recent rates.

9. In the case of interference with trade undertaken in India's own interest, much has also been done. Restrictions on the transport of wool by rail and coastwise by sea, which were imposed in order to ensure adequate supplies of wool for the manufacture of Army blankets, have been removed, and numerous textile and other industrial undertakings brought under control for the production of war supplies have been freed from that control. The difficulty of obtaining supplies of manufactured articles from the United Kingdom has during the war forced many of the British Colonies in the East to look to India for the replenishment of their stocks. India herself has had great difficulty in obtaining supplies and it was eventually found necessary to establish a system of priority for demands of this nature on India similar to that instituted in the United Kingdom, and to couple with it a comprehensive set of restrictions on the exports from India of manufactured articles. With the termination of the Home priority scheme and the re-opening of exports in the United Kingdom, the necessity for these restrictions has largely ceased. The Indian priority system has therefore been abandoned as regards both demands from India on the United Kingdom and demands on India from the Colonies, and the great majority of manufactured articles have been expunged from our export prohibition list. Similarly in the case of drugs, for which the war produced a universally enhanced demand, the prohibition on export has only been maintained in the case of a very limited number, such as quinine, which are of vital importance to the health of the country. The failure of the 1918 monsoon has necessitated certain further restrictions on the movement of foodstuffs. The machinery for the control of rice originally set up in the interest of the Allies is now being applied to the relief of distress in India and to the distribution of supplies so far as possible to countries with Indian population. It has also been found necessary to prohibit the export of certain other cereals which formerly were unrestricted.

10. I may refer to one other respect in which it has not been found possible to remove the interference with the normal course of trade which Government has been obliged to effect. As this Council is aware, Government took powers during the last session to provide for the manufacture of standard cloth. Soon after this legislation was passed, the piece-goods market slumped and for some time the Act was not applied. Now, however, it has been found necessary to commence the manufacture and distribution of standard cloth in the interests of the poorest classes and I am sure that, if he were here, Sir George Barnes would like me to take this opportunity of acknowledging the willingness of the local industry to co-operate in the working of the scheme.

11. War Effort.—The beginning of the year witnessed the great German offensive in the West,—an offensive which had been foreseen by the Allies and to meet which every possible preparation had been made. The initial successes of the enemy were, however, great, and the situation became so critical that the Prime Minister called on India to rally again to the assistance of the Empire. How successful that effort has been is well known to this Council. His Excellency the Viceroy summoned a Conference at Delhi towards the end of April, and as a result of the resolutions passed thereat the Government of India offered to raise and train an additional 500,000 men in the twelve months commencing from the 1st June. This offer was accepted and recruitment proceeded apace. The raising of a large additional body of Indian troops involved heavy expenditure in many directions. Temporary accommodation had to be hastily provided; the recruiting and training staff had to be largely increased; the men had to be clothed, fed, armed and equipped; large bodies of men had to be moved by rail; more officers had to be entertained; and instructional classes of various kinds had to be hastily organised. I will not weary this Council with detailed figures, but will merely mention that the immediate result of this great expansion of our military activity led to an increase in our recoverable war expenditure from a scale of £60 millions in 1917-18 to an estimated expenditure of £70½ millions in 1918-19. This latter figure would have been far higher, had it not been for the decision by this Council last September to relieve His Majesty's Government of the charges of 200,000 additional troops with effect from 1st April 1918, and a farther 100,000 troops from 1st April 1919. Fortunately, with the collapse of our principal enemies in October and November last, the necessity for continuing recruitment on this scale ceased. Nevertheless, the offer made by India of further assistance to His Majesty's Government has resulted in an addition of £12·7 millions to our military expenditure during the current financial year, and there will be further large sums due to His Majesty's Government next year, after which the Government of India will only be responsible for meeting certain non-effective charges as they accrue.

12. The raising of recruits was in some ways the simplest part of the task which India set before herself. Thanks to the loyalty and martial spirit of the peoples of India and to the magnificent efforts of the Provincial recruiting boards, men, both combatant and non-combatant, were obtained in large and increasing numbers. To stimulate recruitment, it was decided to offer still better terms to the Indian Army, which had already received a material concession in the grant of free rations to all ranks from the 1st January 1917. Consequently a gratuity was granted to each man on completing the recruit's course, and in addition, to every Indian officer and soldier, a war bonus payable every six months until the declaration of peace, or until general demobilization is declared. It was, however, the provision of the necessary munitions of war which presented the most urgent and difficult problem. To meet this, the activities of the Indian Munitions Board, which had been started early in 1917-18, were expanded in every direction. Additional staff was engaged; the Army Clothing Factories were expanded; the output of the Ordnance Factories was increased; and closer control was exercised over the stocks of imported articles still available in India. After three and a half years of war, India had been almost drained of such stocks, and it was essential to conserve for military purposes the little that was left. This, however, proved quite insufficient in most cases to meet our needs, and it became necessary to stimulate the local manufacture of many articles for which India had hitherto relied upon importation from abroad. A Controller of Contracts was appointed to supervise the purchase of all foodstuffs and various other articles for the use of troops. This measure led to considerable economies, as did also the assumption of control over a number of mills which were employed solely on producing flour and atta for the Army. In order to increase the world's food supply, and in particular to reduce the enormous demands made by Mesopotamia on India for feeding the troops in that country, a large and costly scheme of agricultural development was adopted in Mesopotamia. This, too, had to be financed by recoverable advances from India, and seed grains and most of the agricultural produce had to be furnished by this country. To meet the ever-increasing strain on our Railway system due to the larger movement of troops, passenger traffic had to be curtailed. Large quantities of locomotive and rolling stocks were sent from India to Mesopotamia and the whole output of rails from 'Tatas' works was utilized to meet overseas requirements, though the condition of our own lines was such that rails were urgently needed to replace those which were worn out. These we had to forge. Simultaneously India had to be prepared to meet the contingency of a strategical situation arising which would enable the Powers in the West to threaten our Northern Frontier. This new danger entailed special measures to increase the mobility and radius of action of the troops which guard our country, and thus added to our already heavy financial burden.

B.—Currency and Exchange.

13. The foregoing narrative gives a necessarily brief account of some of the main currents in the difficult sea through which the bark of State finance has had to ride in the current year. It will have been seen that the year was one of great activity in the production of materials of war, of much inevitable dislocation in external trade, of high prices enhanced by speculation on the chance of protracted hostilities, of much internal prosperity for certain classes of the community, and of considerable hardship for others. Wealth was pouring into India in payment for its products and its services ; but the varying fortunes of the war and the incessant rumours which preyed upon the fears of the people stimulated the immemorial practice of hoarding. Half way through the year came the dramatic approach of unexpected peace. Speculation collapsed, and new alarms replaced the old. Labour trouble developed. Simultaneously there came scarcity, grievous epidemic, and much loss of agricultural efficiency and purchasing power. Still the energy of our manufactories continued, and labour which had been devoted to the prosecution of the war was diverted into the work of demobilisation. Running through all this complication was the priority that had to be given to the needs of the British and Allied Governments and the consequent interference with the ordinary channels and methods of trade. It was the whole of this kaleidoscopic movement which was reflected in the difficulties of our currency and exchange.

14. These difficulties were fully described by Sir William Meyer a year ago, and I need not attempt to do more than bring his narrative up to date. Put briefly the problem with which he had to contend has two aspects. First, funds had to be provided on an unprecedented scale for war work in India and in countries where Indian troops were fighting. A large share of this outlay was on account of the British Government, who gave India a corresponding credit in London. To convert this credit into remittances was the difficulty; gold was unobtainable, and silver was exceedingly scarce. Thus the repayments of our war advances continued to bank up in London, and were of little help in meeting our expenditure here. Currency had to be created; and currency could take only three forms, notes, rupees or gold. To issue notes freely without a strong metallic backing was obviously unsound. To coin and issue our relatively small stock of gold would have been wasteful to a degree; the premium upon the metal would have driven, and did in fact drive, any coined gold out of circulation immediately; it was an emergency ration rather than a currency medium. We had no alternative but to provide silver rupees in immense quantity; and this was the second aspect of the problem. The silver produce of the world had become the subject of fierce competition among many nations; the price was rising in a manner which threatened the stability of our exchange; and the actual amount which could be procured in the open market was wholly inadequate to the demands upon us.

15. Silver crisis in 1918.—To appreciate the gravity of our silver position, it is necessary to go back to the beginning of 1918. The absorption of rupees at that period was monotonously high, rising to over $1\frac{1}{2}$ crores in each of the first three weeks of January. At the end of February the rupee balances had fallen to $12\frac{1}{2}$ crores, a point which in previous years would have been regarded, in the absence of large supplies of silver available for further coinage, as marking a position of grave danger. March saw no improvement, and on the closing day of the financial year the silver balances had been brought to under $10\frac{1}{2}$ crores. It was clear that a serious crisis was impending and to many who followed the figures of April and saw an absorption of $4\frac{1}{2}$ crores in the first fortnight of that month, catastrophe must have seemed imminent. Our thin line of rupees had been precariously supplemented by an issue of sovereigns in parts of India where gold is freely taken in payment for the crops; but the benefit of this expedient was transient and its continuance unjustifiable. In April the position at Bombay was most critical. Rupees were pouring out to finance the cotton crop at fanciful prices. Bad news from France brought a run upon our currency offices by timid holders of our notes. Our visible reserve of silver had dwindled to insignificance, and for several days the maintenance of specie payments hung in the balance. The Mints however responded nobly to the strain, the Controller of Currency scraped together every rupee that could be spared from other parts of India, and the run upon us abated. Similar difficulty had however arisen in Madras and a minor crisis a little later at Lahore made things no easier. Every ounce of silver that could be laid hands upon was poured into the Mints; the Mints worked night and day; and yet by the end of April our rupees had diminished to $7\frac{1}{2}$ crores and by the end of the first week in June to little more than 4 crores. It seemed incredible that business could have been carried on so far below the minimum of safety; and to those of us who were watching the position in England it appeared a certainty that our paper currency would have to be declared inconvertible. Skill and audacity however prevailed and from that time onwards, with the help which had now begun to arrive from America, the situation improved.

16. The possibility of such a crisis as I have been describing had not been overlooked by those who were responsible for the solvency of India. Their thoughts had naturally turned to America, the great storehouse of silver. The Mexican mines had been working far below their full capacity, owing mainly to political disturbances. In the United States production had been hampered by labour difficulties and the high prices of machinery and chemicals; but their Government was still buying and seemed most likely to be able to help us. In February 1918 therefore an appeal was addressed to them by Lord Reading, who represented the serious set-back which the war efforts of India would receive if we were unable to continue rupee payments. The Government of the United States were wholly sympathetic, and almost immediately arranged to sell us 6 million ounces. When the crisis became still more acute in April, they offered us another two million ounces. At this end, special measures were taken to accelerate the transit of the silver thus obtained. For example, with the co-operation of the Naval authorities, the Royal Indian Marine vessel "Northbrook" was diverted to Hong Kong to bring to India a large cargo of silver which was awaiting transshipment there from San Francisco. This consignment reached India on the 4th June, and marked the turn of the tide. By that time, more substantial relief was in prospect. Ever since the middle of 1917, the United States authorities had been anxious about the payment in silver for their heavy purchases in the East, particularly their orders for jute and gunnies. For this purpose they ultimately turned to the vast inert reserve of dollars which their Treasury held as security for their Silver Certificates. In April there was introduced in Congress a Bill, subsequently known as the Pittman Act, enabling the United States Government to withdraw Silver Certificates and to borrow from the Treasury the greater part of its dollar reserve of 375 million ounces of fine silver. This measure was commended to the Legislature by a personal message from the President as a war measure of national importance, and it became law at record speed. Early in June, an agreement was arrived at between Lord Reading and the United States Government, by which the latter consented to let India have 200 million ounces of the silver thus released, on terms which no one would hesitate to describe as generous to India. I need not go into details here; I will only ask the Council to recognise the skill and patience with which these lengthy and delicate negotiations were conducted on our behalf by Lord Reading and by Sir James Brunyate, who was at his right hand throughout as technical adviser and advocate of India's needs.

17. The announcement about the middle of April that the United States were arranging to help us had a marked effect in relieving anxiety in this country. It is certain that in the critical weeks of May and June we could not possibly have carried on with the low balances at our command, had we not been able to reassure the public as to the adequacy of our future silver supplies. By the beginning of July shipments of silver under the Pittman Act began to arrive in large quantities, and during the succeeding months a position of relative safety was gradually reached. This would have been attained more rapidly but for the serious difficulties with which our mints had to contend owing to repeated attacks of influenza and to the concurrent demand for small coinage. Although the return of rupees which can normally be expected in the slack season was absent, the rupee balance steadily improved throughout July, August and September, and by the end of September our stocks had risen to nearly 12½ crores. With October and the commencement of the busy season the absorption once more overtook the coinage, and by the end of November balances had fallen to 8½ crores; this rendered it necessary for the mints, which had been endeavouring to cope with an intense demand for small coinage, to concentrate once more on the coinage of whole rupees. Special measures were taken to improve the mints' output, and a system of double shifts was instituted. I should like here to pay a tribute to the staff of both the mints for the loyal way in which they have responded to the further call made upon them, in spite of the continuous strain under which they had worked throughout the year. As the result of these measures, combined with the gradual passing away of the sequelæ of influenza, the output of the mints during December attained the enormous figure of Rs. 534 lakhs of rupees, which is a world's record, apart from a concurrent outturn of small coinage,—in all, over a hundred million pieces—and by the 22nd February our rupee balance stood at 13 crores.

18. Expansion of the Paper Currency.—At this point we may now leave the silver difficulty, though there is still much to be said upon it as regards the future; and turn to the other form of currency, paper to wit, which had to be created to meet the emergencies of the year. The expansion of our paper currency, in spite of the distrust with which the rumours of war had burdened it, has been striking. On the 31st of March 1915 the net circulation, excluding notes held in the reserve treasuries, was 55½ crores; on the same date in 1917 it had risen to 82 crores, and in 1918 to 98 crores. At the present time it is about 150 crores. This inflation, in many ways unwelcome, has not been allowed to go beyond the sheer necessities of the time. High prices and the disappearance of rupees from circulation rendered the use of notes imperative, particularly for the finance of our great staple crops. In Bengal, where silver rupees had previously been almost exclusively employed for the finance of jute, the bulk of the crop has been financed in the current year by notes; paper has also been used almost wholly for the finance of the cotton crop. It cannot be pretended that this has been entirely a voluntary process. With our silver stocks at the low level to which they fell last year, it was essential to concentrate them in the head currency offices, as it would have been otherwise impossible to meet our legal liability for the encashment of notes there. Free encashment at our district treasuries was therefore no longer feasible, and we had reluctantly to withdraw that facility in a very large degree. Similarly, in order to safeguard our position at the currency offices, we were obliged, during the course of the crisis, to prohibit booking of specie by rail and steamer, and also to place an embargo on its transmission by post. However undesirable these measures may be in themselves, we can only appeal to the emergencies of the year and to the supreme importance of carrying the country through the war, and maintaining its usefulness, without a breakdown in the machinery of its financial business. Our position was intrinsically sound, and it would have been unpardonable to allow our work as producers and manufacturers of war material to be paralysed by technical currency difficulties.

19. The rapid expansion of our paper currency had certain unavoidable consequences. A minor sequel was the increased demand for subsidiary coinage. In coping with this, the Mints have been hampered by the incessant demand for rupees, as well as the difficulty at one time of obtaining nickel in sufficient quantities. The latter defect should before long be remedied; but the provision of small change is at present admittedly inadequate. A graver consequence of our large note issues—and one to which several questions have recently been directed in this Council—is the discount at which our notes have been changing hands in many places. The matter is one of great concern to Government; it has given opportunities for profiteering to unscrupulous people, trading on the ignorance and gullibility of the poorer classes, with the result that hardship has unquestionably been caused to many. It is not easy to see, things being as they are, how this particular defect could be removed unless we were in a position to renew the encashment of our currency notes at every treasury in India,—a consummation devoutly to be wished for, but at present somewhat distant. Happily however signs are not wanting that the people, as personal experience tells them that notes are accepted by Government at their face value, are acquiring greater confidence in resisting improper attempts to exact commission. It would be idle to pretend that paper can ever be viewed by the ordinary villager with the same assurance as metallic currency; the whole conditions of his life make that impossible; but it is legitimate to hope that, for the daily transactions of the market, our paper currency will steadily grow in popularity. Gratifying confirmation of this hope is found in the unexpected readiness with which our new low value notes have been accepted by the public. As the Council is aware, one rupee and two and a half rupee notes were put into circulation in December 1917 and January 1918 respectively. At the close of December 1918 the value of one rupee notes in circulation amounted to 9 crores and of two and a half rupee notes to over 2 crores. The latter note has not achieved the same popularity as the one rupee pieces, possibly owing to the risk of confusion with them. The whole question of designing new and at the same time more attractive forms for our currency notes is now under examination.

20. Control of export finance.—In his last Financial Statement Sir William Meyer referred at some length to the effect upon exchange of the huge balance of trade in India's favour and the great difficulties which had had to be surmounted in order to ensure that exports from India, of urgent importance for the war, should not be handicapped by the inability of the Exchange Banks to provide the necessary finance. The necessity of safeguarding such exports obliged the Secretary of State and ourselves, not only to adopt certain measures of control, but also to make a widespread appeal for the co-operation of merchants and others, with the object of securing that the financing of these war exports should have the first call upon the funds set free by homeward remittances. I should like here to pay a tribute to the response which our appeal met with. Everyone who is conversant with practical exchange matters knows that the control instituted over the operations of the Exchange Banks could without much difficulty have been evaded by the trading public, if motives of patriotism had not constrained them to fall in with the measures which Government had initiated. Isolated instances of evasion were, indeed, reported to us from time to time, but I am happy to say that the great bulk of merchants having foreign business most loyally co-operated, with the result that the financing of the export of wheat and foodstuffs, sandbags, and other articles which were urgently needed in Europe, was carried through successfully, and Government's grateful thanks are due to all those who, by resisting the temptation to profiteer in exchange, rendered this result possible. During the current year the former difficulties in the way of arranging for the finance of exports of urgent national importance have been practically absent, owing to the very different situation which exchange has reached as compared with what we had got accustomed to in the last two years.

21. Movements of Exchange.—From the beginning of 1916 silver began to break away from its old pre-war level of about 26*d.* per ounce; and as it rose, exchange left the 1*s.* 4*d.* rate and painfully climbed after it. This time last year the rupee was quoted at 1*s.* 5*d.* and silver at about 12*d.* per ounce. In April 1918 however the position was stabilised by our purchase of American silver. The reserve from which we were subsequently to draw had been held at the rate of 1 dollar per ounce, and that rate determined the price at which silver was sold to us, while our agreement with the United States Government bound us not to buy any silver at a higher price while the Pittman Act remained in force. As Sir William Meyer pointed out last year, it would be impossible for us to face a position in which we should be turning out rupees at a loss and placing a permanent premium on the export of our silver currency. It thus became necessary to fix a sterling exchange value for the rupee which would ensure that our coinage would not be liable to be smuggled out of India in indefinite quantities. Accordingly, with effect from the 12th April, the rate for Council drafts was fixed on a basis of 1*s.* 6*d.* per rupee for immediate telegraphic transfers and this rate still remains. Early in July however the weakness of the monsoon and a falling off in the normal supply of export bills seemed to threaten a fall in exchange. Business men with funds in India which sooner or later would have to be remitted to England began to consider the desirability of settling their exchange against a possible drop. There is evidence of a considerable accumulation of such funds, seeking temporary investment in India in preference to remittance to England. The reasons were various: taxation was heavier in England than here: hopes had been entertained of a further rise in exchange; money was being kept handy for post-bellum developments: and there was always the uncertainty about being able to recall spare money from England with the same promptitude as in former years. There was thus a large amount of floating capital which any threat of a fall in exchange would bring out for remittance purposes. For some time, although weakness continued, there was no real apprehension, as a similar position had arisen in September and October 1917 and had rapidly passed away. By October, however, the wheat exports had closed down, the demand for remittance quickened and considerably exceeded the supply of bills, and a new problem was definitely established. The first step to meet the situation was naturally the cessation of the sale of Councils, but this could only be regarded as preliminary to further action. In pre-war times, when no one dreamt of the intrinsic value of the rupee soaring above 1*s.* 4*d.*, the problem would have been a simple one, as it would only have been necessary to sell reverse councils at or about the ordinary gold point. In the conditions set up by the war the problem was not quite so easy. We decided, however, that, without prejudice to our future exchange policy, it was essential to maintain the stability of exchange at or about the existing rate, until such time as it would be possible to estimate more clearly the new conditions of the financial world and their re-actions upon our permanent exchange policy. Accordingly, early in November we offered to sell telegraphic transfers on London at the rate of 1*s.* 5½*d.* for immediates and 1s. 6 $\frac{1}{2}$ d. for deferreds. This announcement was, I believe, generally welcome, and it certainly had a steadying effect on the markets. A total of £3,560,000 was sold up to the beginning of December. This satisfied the immediate demand for remittance, and seemed to restore confidence. For some time subsequently the balance of exchange remained fairly even, there being quite enough demand for sterling to cover the few bills offering. More recently, the demand for remittance has again somewhat exceeded the supply of bills, and during February we sold a further small amount of sterling.

C.—Revised Estimates of Revenue and Expenditure.

22. The peculiar features of the year find their next reflection in the extent to which our current revenue and expenditure have departed from the estimates presented to this Council a year ago. In discussing these figures reference, except where otherwise mentioned, will be exclusively to the Government of India's own receipts and charges. The provincial transactions, save in so far as they affect our ways and means position, are more properly the subjects of scrutiny and debate in the provincial Legislative Councils, and in the case of the provinces I shall therefore merely give a brief resumé of their collective transactions. On the Imperial side, it will be remembered that Sir William Meyer budgeted for a total revenue of about £71 $\frac{1}{4}$ millions and expenditure of about £71 $\frac{3}{4}$ millions, giving an Imperial surplus of rather over £2 $\frac{1}{2}$ millions. Our latest figures suggest that the revenue will be better by £11 millions, but the expenditure heavier by £18 millions. The position is thus worse than our estimate by £7 millions, and we shall close the year with a deficit of £4 $\frac{1}{2}$ millions. For this transformation the chief cause may be taken as being the liability accepted last September for the cost of the additional Indian troops. Our instalment of that liability for the current year, including the extra pension charges incurred up to date, amounts to about £12 $\frac{3}{4}$ millions; and if we had not undertaken this contribution to war expenses, our transactions for the year would have ended, it may be assumed, in a revenue surplus of £8 $\frac{1}{4}$ millions, or an improvement of £5 $\frac{3}{4}$ millions on the Budget. To this result the chief contributors would have been exchange, railways, customs and the mints; with a substantial set-off from losses of land revenue, higher military outlay, and a general rise in the expenses of our civil departments due, in some cases, to increased allowances for the higher cost of living. The more important variations are briefly discussed below.

23. Exchange.—As the Council is aware, our accounts are prepared on the basis of 1s. 4d. to the rupee, and my predecessor did not feel himself justified in taking credit for what we should gain by a higher rate. The position at the time was unstable, and he prudently refused to gamble on a continuance of the rate which was then in force—approximately 1s. 5d. In April however the arrangement with the United States Government, to which allusion has been made above, made it necessary to fix the sterling exchange value of the rupee arbitrarily at 1s. 6d. We have thus been able to meet our sterling obligations at a great saving in rupees as compared with the Budget provision on the basis of 1s. 4d. Per contra, we deduct from this gain our loss on the coinage of rupees which are intrinsically worth more than their legal issue price of 1s. 4d. The net profit for the year is expected to be £4·3 millions. At one time it looked as if the figure was going to be much higher. Indeed the Council will recollect that in September last Sir William Meyer hoped that the first instalment of our new war liability might be met in full out of a surplus accruing largely from this windfall. That his hope was not realised is due to the change which came over the situation at a later stage. The stopping of the sale of Council Bills in October meant that no further gain from exchange has accrued on these transactions, while the sale of “reverse Councils” has made a hole in the gain already to our credit. Furthermore, our receipts of silver will be greatly in excess of the September estimate, and the loss on coinage will be correspondingly enhanced. Had war continued, it is quite probable that our first part of the contribution would have been liquidated in the manner which Sir William Meyer hoped for; but on the other hand subsequent payments on the same account would of course have been larger.

24. Railways.—These have again been a great stand-by. Though we were informed a year ago that the limit of the carrying capacities of the lines had been practically reached, and that a further advance in receipts would be handicapped by the difficulties in war conditions of effecting repairs and renewals, the earnings have continued to grow, and are now expected to reach over 76½ crores against 70½ crores taken in the Budget. After allowing for some increase in the working expenses the net improvement amounts to nearly £2½ millions.

Customs.—Our revenue for the current year was estimated at 16½ crores. As a result partly of continued high prices it will probably rise to 19 crores, in spite of the heavy handicap of the freight position, among the more important tariff heads contributing to the improvement being sugar, tobacco, manufactured articles and the excise duty on cotton goods.

Mint.—An improvement of £1·3 million is expected. Over one-half of this represents the profits on the subsidiary nickel and bronze coinage for which there has been an extraordinary demand throughout the year. The balance is seigniorage on rupee coinage, the volume of which has been greatly in excess of figures which could safely be taken into account a year ago.

Army.—The increased outlay on the Army in India, about £2·2 millions exclusive of the special war contribution, will be explained in detail in a later section. Briefly it has been due in the main to the unforeseen and unbudgeted operations against the Marri tribe, and to the necessity for a large mobilization on the North-West Frontier as part of the general Imperial strategy against the far-flung German menace. Contributory items to the excess have been the higher railway charges and the increased cost of food.

Scarcity.—The direct effects of scarcity are seen in the remissions and suspensions of land revenue. The drop in land revenue receipts will be most marked in Bombay (64 lakhs), the United Provinces (53 lakhs), Madras (14 lakhs) and the Central Provinces (12 lakhs). The total Imperial share of the loss of land revenue is just over £1 million, to which must be added, although they appear under the Transfer head, payments which had to be made to Bombay and the United Provinces in order to prevent their land revenue receipts from falling below a guaranteed minimum; those payments aggregate about 43 lakhs. It is not expected that there will be any excess over the normal grant for Famine Relief and Insurance. The Imperial share of actual relief measures will cost about £400,000, and the portion of the grant available for avoidance or reduction of debt will now amount to £130,000 only.

25. Provincial Estimates.—Under this head all that need be said is that Sir William Meyer budgeted for a small surplus of £130,000 for the provinces collectively. The gross provincial expenditure will be slightly exceeded; and there ought to be a more than corresponding increase in provincial revenues in spite of a somewhat heavy loss (£800,000) of land revenue, with the result that these are now expected to show a surplus of over £1 million. Our obligations are due to the provinces for the loyal help that they have given in a very difficult year by keeping down their expenditure, and for the many devices by which they have pursued economy.

D.—Ways and Means.

26. The ways and means problem in India is always a double one. We have not only to consider whether our total resources, in London and India combined, are sufficient to meet the probable calls on them; we have also to see that the money is where it is wanted; in other words, we have to consider the distribution of those resources between London and this country. It frequently happens that one of these two aspects of the problem is much more important than the other. Thus, before the war, the difficulty was usually to provide for sufficient total resources to meet capital expenditure on our productive works; there was rarely any difficulty as regards their distribution, for in most years we could always rely on trade demands being more than large enough to absorb the Council drawings by which our funds were remitted home to pay for our railway and public works material. Within the last few years, however, as Sir William Meyer has brought out prominently in connection with his last two budgets, the main difficulty with which we have had to deal has been distribution. This difficulty arises from the fact that we have had to meet, apart entirely from the expenditure finally debited to Indian revenues, cash outgoings in India on an enormous scale exceeding our own expenditure. These very heavy disbursements, on behalf of the Imperial and other Governments, have been repaid to us in London; and there we have recently had such ample funds that the Secretary of State was able to set aside, apart from his ordinary cash balance, a special reserve of £20 millions in order to meet liabilities likely to come upon us in future. The trouble has been that, except in so far as the Secretary of State could purchase and remit silver to us, there has been no method by which we could bring to India the large resources which we possessed in London, and in consequence we have been obliged to incur a large amount of floating debt in this country, and to borrow large sums from our Currency Reserve, measures regarding which I shall have more to say later on.

27. As was anticipated, these difficulties continued in an acute form during a considerable portion of the current year. Sir William Meyer estimated that, without including any provision for Council drawings by the Secretary of State, our cash outgoings in India, apart from those debited to our own Indian revenues, would amount to about £78 million. This represented mainly war expenditure on behalf of His Majesty's Government, for which we are repaid in London, and included other remittance transactions somewhat similar in character and also certain other non-revenue transactions. In the event, the funds which we have to find are expected to amount to no less than £141 million made up roughly as follows:—

	£ million.
War outlay on behalf of His Majesty's Government recoverable in London	72.7
Funds supplied for East Africa	3.3
Postal and money order transactions	4.2
Excess of Treasury Bill payments over receipts — vide paragraph 36 below	10.7
Repayment of temporary loan taken from Bank of Bombay in 1917-18	2.7
Council Bills	20.6
Cost of military stores and equipment purchased in advance of allocation to definite objects	12.7
Rupee credits for Federal Reserve Board in part payment for American silver	11.0
Remittance of gold in part payment of same	2.0
Additional takavi loans	1.4
Total	141.3

These transactions have been financed in the following manner:—

	£ million.
Receipts from Indian War Loan (inclusive of cash certificates)	37.1
Receipt of purchased silver	56.3
Surplus of revenue over expenditure in India and miscellaneous transactions	13.0
Issue of currency notes against additional investments	24.7
Receipts in India from sales of reverse Councils (£5.4 million less loss on exchange)	4.8
Reduction of balance	5.4
Total	141.3

28. Of the disbursements which we have had to meet, no remarks are required upon our war outlay on behalf of His Majesty's Government or the remittance to East Africa, as the nature of these has already been explained in previous Financial Statements. The amount of our money locked up in advance purchases of military stores and equipment has considerably increased during the current year. Pending their allocation to specific requirements the cost has been charged to a suspense head. As they are so allocated, the cost will be treated as expenditure debitable to Indian revenues or recoverable from the Home Government, and, since the accumulation of stocks took place with reference to war conditions, we expect that in the coming year the lock up of funds will be very substantially reduced in this way. Apart from this, we expect even during the current year on the other side of the account to obtain an advance of £5.9 millions from the War Office against purchases so far made. The large payments on account of postal money orders are due to the continuing demand for remittance to India in this form in the earlier portion of the year. The Treasury Bill transactions will be separately discussed; in brief we anticipate that, as against ₹43½ crores outstanding at the commencement of the year, our liability in respect of Bills issued to the public will have been reduced to ₹27½ crores at its close. The only other important item on the outlay side consists of the rupee credits granted to the Federal Reserve Board in connection with the agreement under which we have purchased silver from the United States Government. Briefly, the position is that one of the methods by which we are making payment for the silver delivered to us by the United States in the current year is by granting rupee credits to the Federal Reserve Board at a rate representing approximately the cost of laying the rupees down in India - 1s. 6d. to the rupee - for the purposes and to the extent required by them for financing exports from India for work of urgent national importance in America. For the rest, we are making over to the United States Government the equivalent of £2 millions in gold, and the balance which is not covered by these and the rupee credits granted to the Federal Reserve Board will be settled with the United States Government by His Majesty's Treasury, to whom the Secretary of State will make the necessary payment in London.

29. On the receipt side, I shall touch later upon the results of the war loan. Though the proceeds of this are payable to His Majesty's Government, that payment is made in London, and meanwhile we have the use of the money received by us in India. We anticipate that we shall be placed in funds to the extent of no less than £56 million in the form of silver received either from the American Government or as a result of the Secretary of State's own purchases. This silver is, after receipt, placed in the Paper Currency Reserve and notes are issued against it to our treasuries to the extent of its anticipated rupee outturn, though a good deal of the silver will not actually be coined up until next year. Next come the funds we have obtained by issuing notes against an increase in the investment of the Paper Currency Reserve. £16 millions, or ₹24 crores, were invested in British Treasury Bills under the powers obtained in March last. The balance has been invested mainly in British Treasury Bills but partly also in Indian Treasury Bills under the powers taken by an Ordinance in December 1918 of which the Council will later be asked to continue the operation by legislation. It is desirable that I should say a few words here regarding the last mentioned transaction. Under the last Ordinance our total investment powers stand at 100 crores. Up to 80 crores of this can be invested only in British Treasury Bills; while 10 crores may be invested only in Government of India securities, and the remaining 10 crores in either British or Indian Government securities. Our actual investments in Indian and British securities other than Treasury Bills amount at present only to about 11 crores, and the rest of our investments are entirely in the form of Treasury Bills, of which about 9 crores may at our option be either British or Indian. It must be observed, however, that investment in British Treasury Bills does not increase the total funds at our disposal; the Secretary of State merely transfers the Bills from his own treasury to the currency reserve in London, while we release their value from our currency reserve in India. If however our Paper Currency Reserve here buys our own Treasury Bills, payment is made to our Treasury in notes, and our total resources are thereby temporarily increased. Of this more will be said later.

30. I now turn to the Secretary of State's position. He has to meet in the current year the following disbursements:—

	£ Million
Ordinary home charges, including capital outlay	22·9
Payments for silver	44
Payment to the Treasury of the proceeds of the Second Indian War Loan .	33·4
Investment in British Treasury Bills on behalf of the Paper Currency Reserve	20·7
Sterling transfers on London	5·4
Discharge of India Bonds and Railway debentures	1·8
Miscellaneous transactions	3·1
Total	131·3

Against this we estimate that his resources will be as follows :—

	£ million.
Receipts from Council Bills	20·9
Recoveries from His Majesty's Government for disbursements in India on their behalf at the rate of exchange of 1s. 5d. and 1s. 6d. per rupee inclusive of a recovery of £5·9 million in respect of stores charged to Suspense	86·3
Recovery from the East African Protectorate at the same rates of exchange	3·6
Withdrawals from special reserve	13·1
Postal and money order transactions	4·3
Reduction of cash balances	3·1
Total	131·3

We do not estimate that the Secretary of State will pay over to the Home Government during the current year the complete proceeds of our second War Loan, it having been found convenient to throw forward the payment of a portion to next year's budget. The net effect of these transactions will be to leave the Secretary of State with a closing balance of £7·5 million against an opening balance of £10·6 million.

31. England and India combined.—When we consider the combined India and England position, the matter is greatly simplified by the fact that the various transactions which represent cash outgoings in India and recoveries in London, and vice versa, can be cancelled, and we have only to look at the net result of our non-revenue operations. This is shown briefly in the following statement :—

Outgoings.	£ million.	Receipts.	£ million.
Discharge of treasury bills in excess of issues	10·7	Excess of proceeds of war loan over payments to His Majesty's Government	4·2
Cost of military stores and equipment purchased in advance of allocation to definite objects	12·7	Issue of Indian Treasury bills to the Paper Currency Reserve	4·0
Imperial deficit	4·3	Withdrawal from Special Reserve	13·1
Capital outlay on :—		Recovery from War Office in respect of stores charged to the Suspense head	5·9
Railways	4·4
Irrigation	0·3	Provincial surplus	1·1
Delhi	0·3	Net deposits into Savings Banks and miscellaneous transactions	1·8
	5·0
Discharge of debt (inclusive of railway debentures and temporary loan from Bank of Bombay)	4·6
Net issues of Imperial and Provincial loans	1·3
	38·6		30·1

The difference will be met by a reduction in our total cash balances from £25·9 millions at the commencement to £17·4 millions at the close of the year.

E.—Borrowing and the Money Market.

32. The War Loan.—It will have been seen from the figures just mentioned how greatly our position was helped by the success of the Second Indian War Loan. The receipts from the main section of the loan amounted to R51½ crores and those from the Post Office section to over R5½ crores, making a total of R57 crores, or £38 millions. Though we did not, as on the previous occasion, offer any conversion rights in respect of past loans, the terms of the 1918 loan were undoubtedly more attractive than those given in 1917 since, in addition to 3 and 5-year War Bonds, we also offered 7 and 10-year Bonds bearing the same rate of 5½ per cent. free of income tax and repayable at the rate of ₹103 and 105 respectively. That the 10-year Bonds proved a great attraction to investors is clear from the fact that over 40 per cent. of the loan was taken in the form of these Bonds, which are already changing hands at ₹101 or thereabouts. While the attractiveness of the loan as an investment has no doubt had much to do with its success, nothing like the same amount would have been obtained but for the patriotic and most valuable assistance rendered by a host of willing co-operators throughout the country, from captains of industry like our honourable friend Mr. Ironside down to the humblest workers in the villages.

33. The success of the loan suggests certain natural reflections. Apart from the actual amount realized, the most encouraging feature of these operations has been the enormous increase in the number of people throughout the country who have become holders of Government securities. In the 1917 loan the number of investors, excluding purchasers of Cash Certificates, was 155,103; in the 1918 loan the subscribers number no less than 227,706. It is clearly of the highest importance that we should do all we can to retain, and if possible increase, our new clientèle and so foster the seed which we hope we have sown. In the first place, India, if she is to exploit to the full her vast natural resources, will require a large outlay of capital both by the Government and by private enterprise, and for this purpose a steady stream of investment within India is essential. Secondly, the gradual spread throughout the country of a habit of investment will help to divert to fruitful purposes India's sterile hoard of precious metals, to the mutual advantage of the individual and the State. Thirdly, the effect of the substitution of investment for hoarding will minimise India's demands for future additions to her metallic currency and thus help to solve one of the most pressing problems in front of us. Progress in this direction must, I need hardly say, go hand in hand with the very necessary development and extension of banking facilities.

34. I should like in connection with the loan to mention that the Government has been doing what it can to adapt the previous procedure for the issue of its loans to the circumstances of the small investor. Previous to the issue of the 1917 war loan, subscriptions to our annual loans were for the most part confined to a few Banks and financial houses, the loans being allotted on tender. The former procedure, involving as it did the submission of application forms and the issue of allotment letters and so forth, was found to be quite unsuited to a loan of the magnitude of that floated in 1917. There was accordingly devised, with the co-operation of the Presidency Banks, a new and greatly simplified procedure whereby at most important centres scrip could be issued over the counter, and at other places after a very short delay by the Accountant General, instead of its issue being concentrated at the Public Debt Office in Calcutta. I need not go into any great detail with regard to these arrangements, as they are fully described in a very interesting report on the 1918 loan by our Controller of Currency. I may however add that we are also considering the possibility of further adapting the law and procedure relating to our securities, by the elimination of irksome formalities, so as to meet the new situation which has arisen from the enormous addition to the number of our creditors.

35. Cash Certificates.—The figures given above do not include Cash Certificates. The results of these may at first sight be regarded as disappointing. We had a net receipt in 1917-18 of about £6 millions. During the current year we expect that, as against fresh certificates issued to the value of £2·1 millions, those presented for payment will amount to £2·5 millions, or, in other words, that there will be a net payment of about £½ million. It would seem that in the operations of the first war loan the zeal of the canvassers occasionally outran their discretion, with the result that in some areas those who took up certificates presented them not long afterwards for encashment in considerable quantities. Apart, however, from this, it is not unnatural that in a year of scarcity some proportion of those having their funds invested in this way should have found it convenient to realize them. The present indications are that the weaker holders are in the process of being eliminated; while, therefore, we estimate that in the coming year the receipts and payments will balance each other, we can hope that gradually the merits of the Cash Certificate as a form of investment for the small man will be more and more generally appreciated.

36. Treasury Bills and Bank advances.—Another important item in our financial operations was the further issue of Indian Treasury Bills. At the commencement of the year the bills outstanding amounted to ₹43½ crores, against which we anticipate that the outstandings at the close of the year will be about ₹34 crores, inclusive of ₹6½ crores issued to our Paper Currency Reserve. When the year opened we were faced with heavy maturities in April amounting to ₹12¼ crores, three-fourths of which, however, were replaced by fresh sales during that month, while the remainder together with maturities of ₹8¾ crores in May were more than replaced by fresh sales before the 3rd of June. On this date the sale of treasury bills was shut down in view of the opening of the war loan campaign. While the war loan was in progress, ₹35 crores of treasury bills were discharged and ₹1 crore received under discount by way of subscription to the loan as the equivalent of a cash subscription. Our heavy military and other continuing disbursements in July and more particularly in August forced us not only to use up our war loan receipts as these came in, but also to look for some method of supplementing them. We were very reluctant to re-open treasury bills while war loan operations were in progress, and the extent to which Government disbursements were at that time returning to the Presidency Banks fortunately made it possible for them to assist us with ways and means advances to the extent of no less than ₹17 crores. These were for the most part liquidated in time for the Banks to make use of the money when the trade demand of the busy season began. When the main section of the loan closed, issues of the longer-dated treasury bills were re-commenced, the issue of three months' bills being added in November, and the rates subsequently raised in January. With the tightness of money during December and January, the receipts were small, but during the last few weeks, as the general money market has eased, funds have again flowed in more freely from this source, the position at the end of the year being that, excluding Treasury Bills issued to the Paper Currency Reserve, our outstandings under this head are estimated to stand at ₹16 crores less than at the commencement of the year.

37. The Money Market and Presidency Banks.—This brief account of our treasury bill operations leads naturally to a consideration of the general money market conditions during the year. At the commencement of the year the markets generally were inclined to be nervous, not merely on account of the military situation, but also particularly because of the approach of the April cotton settlement at Bombay, where the speculative transactions involved had been unusually large. Prices of cotton had risen; a squeeze for money was threatened in Bombay; and those heavy speculators whose anticipations had been falsified by events appealed to Government to intervene by fixing a maximum price to protect them from loss, declaring that unless this step was taken a general financial debacle was inevitable. Government decided that the circumstances did not justify their intervention, and in point of fact the settlement was attended by no serious crisis, and as usually happens in Bombay the period of tight money rapidly passed away. Incidentally as the result of the financial disturbance attaching to the April settlement, which recurs almost every year though not always in so aggravated a form, a more civilized system of monthly settlements has been evolved. These are understood to be working without friction and if, as may be hoped, they have come to stay, they promise to make the operations of local speculators less a matter of anxiety to the general commercial public.

38. The receipt of the war loan proceeds and the absence of any substantial trade demand caused the percentages of cash to liabilities in all three Presidency Banks to improve throughout July. Before the end of August, however, the Bank of Bengal began to feel the demand for the finance of jute. In the previous year, owing to the low price of the crop and the fact that the jute concerns were possessed of large resources of their own, the Bank of Bengal had been called upon to provide finance to a very much smaller extent than usual. In the current year, owing to higher prices and possibly also to the fact that many firms had invested heavily in the loan, the Bank's jute advances were fairly large and from the end of July their cash percentage steadily fell. The Bank of Bombay's cash continued to increase during August, but after that month the effect of the disbursements by Government of the large ways and means advances taken from the Bank made itself felt, and the cash dropped from ₹14 crores at the end of August to ₹9½ crores at the end of October. Simultaneously the Bank of Bengal's cash had steadily decreased from ₹15 crores at the end of August to ₹9 crores by the first week in November, and both Banks accordingly then raised their rate from 5 per cent., at which it stood since May, to 6 per cent. The Bank of Madras, which had temporarily reduced its rate to 6 per cent. on the 6th August, followed suit by raising its rate to 7 per cent. on the 11th November.

The low level at which the cash of the Bank of Bengal and Bombay stood during last autumn as compared with 1917, and the growing tightness of money during the later months with its inevitable reaction on the ability of Government to finance themselves by temporary borrowing, have been the most noteworthy feature of the money market conditions during the year. These were in marked contrast to the conditions of the preceding year. In both years Government were making continuous heavy disbursements. At the time of issue of the 1917 War Loan there was some apprehension lest the money which Government were taking off the market should land the Banks and trade in serious difficulties. In point of fact, however, the reverse happened and perhaps for the first time in India there were clear and encouraging signs that a substantial portion of the money disbursed by Government was returning very rapidly to the Banks, from which it could again be caught up in the wheel of Government's borrowings. It is difficult to give any completely satisfactory explanation of the less favourable position in 1918. It was all the less to be expected, as primâ facie the natural result of the advent and attainment of victory would be to restore confidence and to make for greater easiness in money conditions. More recently there has been some relaxation in the earlier stringency, but it is as yet too soon to predict whether a continuance of this can be counted on for the rest of the busy season.

SECTION II.—THE YEAR 1919-1920.

F.—Budget Estimates of Revenue and Expenditure.

39. The task of forecasting our resources and requirements for next year is unusually perplexing. On the military side there is no experience to guide us in calculating the legacies of a great war. The pace and cost of demobilization, the future strength of the army and its reserves, the new equipment which the lessons of the war will force upon us—all these are uncertain. On the civil side our external trade is largely governed by shipping, which may or may not be available, and there is thus no estimating with any confidence for our customs revenue, our gains or loss by exchange, etc. Our internal trade will be affected by scarcity and may be seriously hit by a slump in prices: hence uncertainty about our railway earnings and other important heads of revenue. After the strain and artificial conditions of recent years it is not easy to speculate how far the rebound will go or what directions it will take, and the only thing that is certain is that we must incur a large expenditure to recover the ground which has been lost in a period of severe economy. There is, however, no cause to be pessimistic for 1919-20. A depression may come in time, but we need not anticipate that it will come so soon as next year, and there is much diffused prosperity in the country which even high prices and local scarcity cannot seriously impair. We have therefore felt justified on the revenue side in taking an optimistic view of our general prospects and we have allowed for a substantial improvement in receipts under the majority of the more important revenue heads. Before discussing these it will be convenient to examine first the needs of our spending departments and to arrive at the total revenue which will be necessary to provide for them.

40. The Army.—For next year we trust to do without the special war provision of £1·8 millions for expenditure on our own frontiers which appears in the current year's estimates; and there is a reduction of nearly £1 million in our expected outlay on Military Works, in view of the cessation of many of the special works, including accommodation, which were called for by our greatly expanded army. But these and other economies have been outpaced by the imperative demands of military efficiency in the light of the lessons taught by the war; and we have had to accept an extra charge of over £2 millions for the war bonus to British troops. Another heavy liability which we have to face is the clearing of the war stores suspense account, which has been steadily growing up in the last few years. A large part of this will be taken off our hands by the War Office; but still a substantial quantity of the stores will have to be taken over by the military authorities in India as a nucleus for the mobilization stores which experience has shown to be absolutely necessary. As a beginning of this process we have decided to provide £1 million in next year's budget. For all the many unforeseen contingencies of a year of reconstruction, we have inserted a lump provision of only £871,000. No one can assert that this is extravagant in view of the large new up-to-date equipment which will be forced upon every modern army now-a-days,—its improved armament, its requirements of more rapid transport, and in particular its air fleet. With the most cordial and helpful co-operation of His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, however, we have decided to fix the net figure in the Budget for our ordinary charges at £32½ millions as against £31¼ millions in the current year. To both of those figures have to be added the instalments of the war contribution which we offered last September. These amount to £12·7 millions in the current year and £8·7 millions in the coming year; further details being given subsequently in paragraph 52. The upshot is that for next year we have had to put our military estimates at £41·2 millions net. Although this is £2¾ millions less than in the current year, it represents of course a figure considerably in excess of what we hope will be our normal military requirements in future.

41. Without entering into wearisome details, I may mention a few of the heads under which substantial savings are expected next year. The first of these is Political, where we estimate for a reduction of £2 millions as compared with the current year. This is due mainly to the curtailment of our expenditure in South Persia and to the omission of special political expenditure which the cessation of hostilities has happily brought to an end. Another head is Refunds, where we are budgeting for over £½ million less than in 1918-19. The bulk of this is due to the omission of a large provision made this year for the refund of advances which salt traders in northern India had paid in during the period of high speculation in that commodity. We have also been able to reduce our Customs drawbacks very materially. These were specially high in the current year, as owing to shipping difficulties large consignments intended for Mesopotamia have been sent in the first instance to India and reshipped to Mesopotamia, the customs duty upon them having had to be refunded on their re-export. Another head under which we expect a saving of £½ million is Miscellaneous; the reduction here is an echo of the war, being due to the absence of the provision which had to be made this year for losses of stores at sea on the voyage between England and India.

42. A few of the heads may now be mentioned under which we expect the chief increases of expenditure next year. Of these the most prominent is Famine Relief, where the Imperial share of our extra liability will be about £450,000. It is expected that the total requirements under this head will be nearly 90 lakhs in the United Provinces and 45 lakhs in Bombay, while Bihar and Orissa will require 16 lakhs and the Central Provinces over 14 lakhs. Against this, however, we have much lower figures for remission and suspension of revenue, and our betterment under that head is very substantial, close on £1 million. Another expenditure head which is growing is Posts and Telegraphs. Here we have had to replenish stores which were depleted by military requirements, as well as to contemplate substantial improvement in pay and in postal efficiency generally. Increases in pay and wages will run through most of our spending departments, and may indeed upset estimates which we have had to frame before the full effects of high prices have been made evident.

43. Apart from these, and the Railway figures which will be discussed below, there is no startling variation from the position in the current year. Full details are as usual given in the Finance Secretary's Memorandum. The aggregate result is that we find ourselves obliged to make provision for Imperial expenditure amounting to £85,357,300. Our task is to provide that amount from our current revenues; and, as will be shown below, we are unable to do so without extra taxation. A few of the main heads of revenue may briefly be examined.

44. Railways.—The gross receipts taken in the current year's budget were, as I have previously mentioned, ₹70½ crores, against which we now expect to receive ₹76½ crores. All our experience shows a rapid and unfaltering growth of traffic, and as military requirements fall off, private demands for railway facilities will more than take their place. For next year, therefore, we propose to go up to ₹80 crores,—a figure which is regarded in the Railway Department as daringly optimistic. There will be a corresponding rise in working expenses : but the heaviest deduction will be for special renewals after the forced neglect of the past few years. Apart from the large capital programme to which I shall shortly refer, we propose to earmark no less than £6½ millions or ₹9½ crores for renewals from current revenue. It is a large sum, but the railway authorities are confident of being able to spend it profitably and it is impossible to deny either the need or the urgency for drastic renewals. We take our net railway revenue at about ₹33½ crores against about ₹10 crores in the current year.

Customs.—It may reasonably be assumed that tonnage will gradually get easier next year and that the return of peace will bring down prices. The latter movement will tend to reduce the proceeds of customs dues which are levied on an ad valorem basis ; but we count upon an inrush of commodities to replenish exhausted stocks. We are consequently budgeting for ₹20 crores against about ₹19 crores expected in the current year. This assumes that we shall adhere to the special duty on petrol which is a very reasonable addition to our revenues even in peace time. I shall subsequently introduce a small bill continuing our present Motor Spirit Duties Act, which covers only the period of the war and six months thereafter and which probably would otherwise lapse before the close of the coming year. Under the majority of the other tariff heads we have allowed for substantial increases, but we anticipate a considerable decrease in (a) the export duty on rice, owing to the large diversion of Burma rice for Indian requirements, and (b) the import duty on cotton manufactures, as a result of agricultural conditions and the present disparity between European and Indian prices.

Mint and Exchange.—The gain on exchange is taken at a little over £1 million. Though high, this figure is a serious drop from what we expect in the current year—nearly £4½ millions. There are three reasons for the decline. First, there will be a large falling off in our gross receipts from exchange in consequence of the great reduction in our anticipated recoveries from the War Office against expenditure undertaken on their behalf in India. Second, we are estimating for much smaller sales of Council Bills, while there will at the same time be a diminution of the gain on exchange which we shall realise from them. This is due, not to any expectation of departing from the present rate, but to an arrangement into which we entered with the Exchange Banks during our period of financial strain. I think it is an open secret that, in consideration of their insuring the finance of exports of national importance, the Secretary of State guaranteed the six British Exchange Banks that they would be allowed to bring back to India, at the rate at which the transactions took place, funds to the extent to which they were compelled to overbuy in that connection. Third, though we do not anticipate that our actual silver coinage will be as great as in the current year, we expect that the loss on coinage to be set off against the gain on exchange will be no less ; since a considerable portion of our silver coined in the current year was paid for by rupee credits granted to the United States Government, the rate of which is so adjusted that no formal loss arises out of these transactions.

We have also again allowed for high receipts under Mint, though here too there is some reduction owing to the fact that a somewhat smaller amount of new silver will come under coinage. The estimates as they stand include provision for seigniorage on the coinage of the balance of the American silver as well as for new purchases by the Secretary of State, also for a large amount of subsidiary coinage which we expect to undertake in view of the present extraordinary demand for small coin.

Other Heads.—We provide for increases, as the result of normal growth, under Stamps, Excise and Posts and Telegraphs, after allowing in the case of excise revenue for the prevalence of famine conditions in several provinces. Under Posts and Telegraphs there will be a falling off in the volume of military traffic, but we shall realise a full year's yield from the enhanced rates introduced in the current year. We anticipate some decline under Salt as we expect further large issues against uncleared indents in respect of which duty has already been paid.

Income-tax.—The figures here will be explained in a moment. They cover however one concession—the only fiscal concession possible in this budget—which we have felt ourselves constrained to make. On none has the present range of prices fallen more heavily than the people on low salaries who are caught in the smallest mesh of our income-tax levy. There can be no question that the ₹1,000 minimum is now a serious hardship, and we have decided to raise the taxable limit of income to ₹2,000. We estimate that we shall thereby lose 75 lakhs or £500,000; but we shall relieve no fewer than 237,000 petty assesses, out of the total number (381,000) of people who pay the tax now. Incidentally I may explain here that as income-tax revenue is shared between Imperial and Provincial, a portion of the loss would in the absence of any adjustment fall on provincial revenues. It will, however, of course be necessary for us to make good to the provinces by assignments the amount so lost, just as we took assignments from them in respect of the additional receipts due to the enhancements of taxation effected in 1916 when these would otherwise under the ordinary classification have been credited to the provinces.

45. Enough has been said to show that we are not free from difficulty with our revenue estimates, but that we have not allowed the uncertainty of the future to deter us from pitching our figures as high as prudence permits. The total result is that we get a revenue of £80,192,100 all told, or a shortage of £5,165,200 in comparison with our estimated expenditure. To fill this gap, and to give us a small surplus as a margin for the fluctuations of the year, we are asking the Council to impose a duty on Excess Profits earned in the current year. We estimate the gross yield of this duty at about £7½ millions. Against this, there will be a loss of super-tax (estimated at £1 million), since super-tax and excess profits duty will not be both assessed on the same business, and also of income-tax (to the extent of about £450,000) since a rebate will be given for the purposes of this tax in respect of the amounts paid as excess profits duty. Allowing for these losses, we place our net estimated receipts from the excess profits duty at about £6 millions, and our estimated surplus will be £868,100.

46. Revenue and Expenditure—Provincial—The provincial revenues are taken in the Budget at close upon £37 millions, and the expenditure at a little over £38½ millions. With the conclusion of the war we felt that we could not reasonably ask Local Governments any longer to refrain from drawing to a moderate extent on the large accumulated balances which most of them have now at their credit. We therefore informed them that in our opinion additional expenditure may now be reasonably incurred upon:—

- (a) the extension of education in directions where it has been specially hampered by war economies;
- (b) the development of industries;
- (c) the repair of actual damage which the financial stringency of the last three years has caused to public institutions and services, and
- (d) purposes which, though not immediately remunerative, will secure an improved and not greatly deferred return to the State or the country at large, such as capital outlay on the development of forests, agricultural experiments and the like.

It was also added that of course expenditure in connection with the relief of distress and the like in consequence of the present agricultural situation in several provinces, whether in the form of famine relief outlay or of advances, should be duly provided for and incurred in accordance with real requirements. The provinces have taken full advantage of this advice, and it will be observed that the estimates provide for a draft on provincial balances of over £1½ millions. This does not, however, represent the full extent of the proposed expansion of provincial expenditure as compared with that undertaken in the current year, as the provinces collectively are now budgeting for an increase of £3½ millions on their revised estimates of £34·8 millions.

G.—Borrowing and Ways and Means.

47. In the remarks on the Revised Estimates it was explained how in the last few years our main difficulty lay in so arranging our funds that they would be in the place where they were required. In the coming year we hope that this problem will not recur in the acute form recently experienced, and in fact the salient feature in the ways and means programme which is now laid before the Council is the large capital outlay which we propose to undertake on our railways. Though in the past there may have been grounds for the complaints made that the importance of developing our railway estate was not sufficiently appreciated, the necessity for a more progressive policy than has hitherto been adopted had been brought home to us even before the war, and I know that Sir William Meyer had this particular matter very close at heart. The disturbance due to the war made it impossible to put that policy into action, if only because of the impossibility of obtaining material; but the Government of India had, before hostilities terminated, placed in the hands of the Secretary of State a very full statement of the requirements which they wished to be met at the earliest possible date, and the intention was that these railway requirements should have the first call on the reserve of £20 millions which was set aside at home for meeting our post-war liabilities. It is now a great pleasure to me to be able to announce that we are budgeting during the coming year for a railway capital programme of no less than £17½ millions, which is, as the Council is aware, far in excess of the largest programme (£12 millions) ever previously undertaken, and also of the maximum programme contemplated by the Mackay Committee, namely £12½ millions. This sum is of course additional to the large programme outlay on renewals from revenue, £6½ millions, included in our railway revenue budget, the inclusion of which brings our total programme expenditure up to £24½ millions.

48. The statement below shows the manner in which we expect to be able to finance this expenditure and the nature of our other more important non-revenue transactions, the figures being for England and India combined :—

Outgoings.		Receipts.
	(£ Millions.)		(£ Millions.)
Discharge of treasury bills	8·0	Receipts of Indian loan	10·0
Repayment of assets of hostile firms held in deposit by Government	2·4	Withdrawal from special reserve	6·9
Capital outlay on—		Credits for issues of stores charged to suspense account	11·1
Railways	17·7	Reduction in cash balance of military disbursing officers, as the result of demobilization	2·1
Irrigation	0·4	Credits in respect of silver inclusive of American silver paid for in 1918-19 but expected to arrive in India in 1919-20	5·2
Delhi	0·3	Imperial surplus	0·9
	18·4	Net deposit into savings banks and miscellaneous transactions	4·8
Provincial deficits	1·6
Net issues of Imperial and Provincial loans	0·8
Payment to His Majesty's Government of balance of proceeds of second Indian war loan (at the higher exchange rate of 1s. 6d. per rupee)	8·9
	40·1		40·5

This programme contemplates the raising of a loan in India of R15 crores or £10 millions, apart from the using up of the balance of the Secretary of State's special reserve, while we expect that our resources will be further assisted by the release of funds at present locked up in the form of war stores as these pass into consumption. On the other-side of the account we contemplate the liquidation of a certain amount of our temporary liabilities. We consider this most important since, apart from our treasury bills, we have a very large amount of short-term liabilities maturing in the early future, as the following statement shows :—

1920 3 year War Bonds	13 millions.
1921 Ditto	17 „
1922 5 year War Bonds	8 „
Cash Certificates, say	5 „
1923 5 year War Bonds	1½ „
Loan of 1915 can be repaid at our option in 1920	3½ „
1925 7 year War Bonds	2½ „
1928 10 year War Bonds	17 „

These figures show that, apart from Treasury Bills, we shall have War Bonds to the extent of £13 millions falling due in 1920, and arrangements will then have to be made to meet these in addition to finding further capital funds in that year.

For the purposes of our estimates we have shown the reduction of our temporary liabilities in the form of a net payment of Treasury Bills. But it may in practice be found to be more convenient to devote a certain portion of the proceeds of our loan to strengthening our position in other ways; for example, if the trade demand for Councils exceeds the amount provided in our estimates, we shall require additional funds in India for meeting these. On the other hand, in that case the Secretary of State's balances will be pro tanto increased by his receipts from these additional drawings and he will thus have to draw to a less extent on the special reserve, the balance of which would then be available for capital expenditure in the following year.

49. I may add that while we have entered in our estimates a sum of ₹15 crores for the loan, this must be regarded as an estimate only, as our intention is not to place any limit on the amount of subscriptions which we are prepared to accept; any sums received in excess of this amount will enable us still further to strengthen our position. Similarly the form which the loan should take, the date on which it should be floated, and its terms generally are matters which we shall have to consider further hereafter with reference to the circumstances of the time. The usual warning is necessary with regard to the amount of Councils, namely £10·3 millions, entered in our estimates. This figure is an estimate only, and the Secretary of State reserves the right to increase or diminish the amount offered at his discretion.

50. I turn now to the position in India. As far as we can estimate it, this is likely to be somewhat as follows:—

Outgoings.		Assets.
	(£ millions.)		(£ millions.)
Military expenditure recoverable from His Majesty's Government	35·8	Proceeds of Indian loan	10·0
Remittances to East Africa recoverable from Protectorate	0·6	Credits for silver purchased in market and for balance of American silver	16·2
Council Bills	9·7	Credits for issues of stores charged to Suspense account	11·1
Net issues of Imperial and Provincial loans	0·8	Reduction in cash balances of military disbursing officers	2·1
Discharge of Treasury Bills	8·0	Excess of revenue over expenditure in India and miscellaneous items	18·0
	54·9		57·4

The figures provide for an increase in our closing balance in India, so as to work to our usual minimum working balance of about 18½ crores on March 31st, 1920.

51. A brief statement is added to show the Secretary of State's position, including the more important disbursements which he will have to make and the resources which he will have available for meeting them. It will be seen from this statement as well as from that of our position in India that we expect a substantial reduction during the year of the expenditure which we are undertaking in India on behalf of His Majesty's Government and of the consequent recoveries to be made from them in England.

Outgoings.		Assets.
	(£ millions.)		(£ millions.)
Excess of expenditure over revenue	21·7	Council Bill drawings	10·8
Railway capital outlay	18·0	Recoveries from His Majesty's Government and the East African Protectorate of disbursements in India on their behalf (at 1s. 6d. per rupee)	40·7
Payments for market purchases of silver and balance of payments for American silver	11·0	Withdrawals from Special Reserve	0·9
Payment to His Majesty's Government of balance of proceeds of Second Indian War Loan (at the higher rate of exchange of 1s. 6d. per rupee)	8·9	Miscellaneous transactions	1·9

SECTION III.—CERTAIN SPECIAL HEADS.A.—Military Services.

52. The table below shows the gross and net expenditure on military services for the coming year and the four years preceding :—

*Closed as a separate head from 1st April 1918—see paragraph 91 of Sir William Meyer's Budget speech of 1st March last.

The Legislative Council in its last September session decided that the Government of India should offer to His Majesty's Government, subject to the consent of both Houses of Parliament, an additional war contribution for the current year and each remaining year of the war. This contribution was estimated at £12,700,000 for 1918-19, at £11,700,000 for 1919-20, and at £7,700,000 for the year of demobilization, which was then assumed to be the year 1920-21. Hostilities have now ceased in all the important theatres of war, and the year 1919-20 will therefore be a year of demobilization. The additional contribution for next year is based therefore on the figure (£7,700,000) previously estimated for 1920-21. The contribution, however, included inter alia the assumption by India of the liability for certain war pensionary charges; for estimate purposes, this was taken at £500,000 annually. We now learn that His Majesty's Government have already disbursed a sum of £995,000 on account of the pensionary charges of Indian troops and their British officers alone; and as it is desirable that our liabilities in this respect should be adjusted as early as possible, we are increasing the contribution for the year 1919-20 so as to include the extra payment of £495,000 on this account. We have further increased the war pensionary contribution for 1919-20 by another £500,000, to provide for a provisional payment of this sum on account of war pensionary charges of British troops. Thus the total contribution in the current year will amount to £12,700,000 and for next year to £8,695,000. Deducting these special payments, the net expenditure in 1918-19 will, it is estimated, amount to £31,226,000, and for next year the provision will stand at £32½ million. The increase in 1918-19 over the Budget estimate of £29 million, apart from the special additional contribution, thus amounts to £2,226,000. The Budget, however, also included a reserve of £1,977,000 under the Army head to meet unforeseen expenditure. The excess over specific provision is therefore £4,203,000. Of this, about £1,000,000 has been or will be spent on military works necessitated by war conditions, including £150,000 for the establishment of an engineer base park at Lahore; £143,000 for improvement of frontier roads to make them fit for mechanical transport; £82,000 for work on the acetone factory at Nasik, and £83,000 on additional barrack supplies. The balance is made up of a number of relatively minor works, practically all of which are due to the war. As regards the excess expenditure of about £3,200,000 under the Army head, we have had to meet the cost of the Marri operations for which no Budget provision was made. Early in the financial year the strategical situation necessitated the complete mobilization of certain Divisions and Brigades on the frontier and the consequent maintenance of additional animal and mechanical transport. Higher expenditure was incurred also in connection with the provision of accommodation for additional troops allotted for the defence of the North-West Frontier. These undertakings are estimated to cost £700,000. The railway charges for military traffic have risen by £777,000. Following the scheme recently sanctioned at Home, we are granting increased pay in the form of bonus as from 1st February 1919 to British troops and British officers of the Indian Army forming the normal garrison in India and to certain Royal Indian Marine personnel. This is estimated to involve an extra outlay of £146,000 in 1918-19. Food charges, mainly on account of the rise in prices, account for an increase of £400,000; and a sum of £212,000 represents the additional outlay on travelling and contingent charges and hire of transport. The expansion of the operations of the Indian Munitions Board led to an expenditure of £85,000 above the Budget estimate; while the expenditure on medical stores in India and on Home stores for the Army have risen by £58,000 and £102,000 respectively, in addition to an outlay of £203,000 on aviation stores obtained direct from the War Office and adjusted in India.

53. The receipts for 1918-19 have improved to the extent of £180,000, principally on account of sales of dairy farm produce and of stores and provisions through the agency of the Supply and Transport Corps.

54. The Budget provision for next year, apart from the additional war contribution to the Imperial Government, amounts to £32½ million, which is £1,274,000 more than the corresponding expenditure anticipated in the current year. The Budget for 1919-20 includes a higher provision of £2,054,000 on account of increased pay to troops in the form of bonus already referred to. It also includes £1 million as an instalment towards the building up of a reserve of mobilization war stores, which the Military authorities, in view of the experience gained in the war, consider it necessary to maintain. The Budget also includes a reserve to meet unforeseen charges of £871,000. But for these increases, the provision for next year would be £2,651,000 less than the expenditure of the current year. The largest item contributing to this decrease is a lower provision of £1,810,000 under the head "War—India," to which head all expenditure in connection with the North-West Frontier operations, port defences and coastal patrol services, Aden operations, etc., is debitable. India's liability in connection with the scheme for the expansion of Ordnance factories is limited to a single payment of £250,000, which has been made in 1918-19; and no provision on this account is therefore necessary in 1919-20. The allotment for the Military Works Services for next year is nearly £1 million lower than the expected outlay in 1918-19, in which year very heavy expenditure has had to be undertaken on special works necessitated by the war. On the other hand the provision at Home for Army stores is higher by £234,000. For Marine Home stores, including completion of the two Royal Indian Marine steamers under construction at Home, an extra provision of £215,000 is required. Lastly, as it is probable that the high prices for food supplies will continue for at least another 6 months, an additional £200,000 is required in 1919-20.

55. Indian Princes and others have contributed during this year £640,000 in the way of cash contributions towards the cost of the war. The total receipts, since the commencement of the war, amount to £2,100,000. Considerable sums have again been received by His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief for the provision of Ford vans and motor ambulances, the supply of comforts to the troops overseas, etc.

56. The payment against Indian revenues, on account of normal pay and maintenance charges of the military forces despatched out of India up to the end of 1918-19, amounts approximately to £39 millions. This sum must, however, be reduced by the cost of maintaining substituted British troops (Territorial and Garrison battalions) actually serving in India, which is a charge against His Majesty's Government. Deducting this figure, the total net contribution in the way of ordinary charges towards the cost of the war in respect of Expeditionary Forces is estimated at £22·2 millions to the end of 1918-19, to which a sum of £4·2 million needs to be added in respect of the coming year. In addition, as pointed out in paragraph 52 above, we are making an additional contribution of £12,700,000 in 1918-19 and £8,695,000 in 1919-20. Outside the adjustments in respect of substituted

British troops, the additional outlay, due almost entirely to the war, which we have had to meet in excess of the normal net military expenditure of about £20 millions prior to the war, amounts to £40·7 millions to the end of the current year, and to £61·9 millions taking into account the estimated expenditure for 1919-20.

B.—Railways (Capital outlay).

57. The following statement gives the figures of Railway Capital expenditure on State-owned lines included within the Railway Programme for the coming year and the four years preceding :—

	1915-16.	1916-17.	1917-18.	1918-19, Revised.	1919-20, Budget.
	£	£	£	£	£
(1) Open lines including rolling stock .	3,864,200	1,236,500	1,595,260	4,009,500	17,191,900
(2) Lines under construction—
(a) Started in previous years .	627,100	245,700	129,200	375,300	508,100
(b) Started in current year	496,500	504,900	18,300	...
Total .	4,491,300	1,978,700	2,529,300	4,403,100	17,700,000

In the Budget for the current year provision was made for £4·2 million ; this had subsequently to be increased to £4·4 millions in order to meet the cost of certain urgent works which were chiefly required for military purposes.

58. Next year it is proposed to provide £17·7 millions ; this is the largest amount that has ever been allotted to railways in any one year. During the war the amount that could be found for the steady improvement of transportation facilities which is usually carried on from year to year has been necessarily restricted, not only for financial reasons but also by the difficulty of obtaining materials. It is unfortunate that this annual improvement in our railway facilities has had to be deferred at a time when the traffic has been so heavy. Moreover the amount of rolling stock (engines and wagons especially) which it has been possible to obtain recently has been very limited. The large arrears that have consequently accumulated have now to be made good and it is necessary to bring our railway system to the required standard as soon as possible.

59. Although hostilities have ceased, the position as regards Branch Line Company projects remains much the same as it was a year ago. The difficulties attendant on the raising of Capital continue, and new construction under Branch Line terms is still in abeyance.

60. The following figures show the capital outlay on all State lines up to the end of each year from 1915-16, and the net return obtained after deducting working expenses and interest charges :—

(Capital and profit figures in thousands of pounds.)

	1915-16.	1916-17.	1917-18.	1918-19, Revised.	1919-20, Budget.
Capital at charge at end of each year .	1,64,858	365,483	366,463	869,439	385,677
Working profit from railways excluding interest charges.	17,797	21,148	23,990	25,260	21,242
Percentage of same to capital outlay .	4·88	5·79	6·50	6·84	5·51
Final working profit after meeting interest charges.	4,075	7,482	9,880	11,193	6,904
Percentage of same to capital outlay .	1·12	2·05	2·70	3·03	1·79

The return on railway capital (excluding interest charges) was estimated in the current year's Budget at 6·19 per cent. We now estimate it at 6·84 per cent. in consequence of the increase in net railway earnings which I have already dealt with in my review of the Revised Estimate. For next year we put it at 5·51 per cent. in view of the smaller estimate of net earnings arrived at in the Budget.

61. The charges for interest in the current and ensuing years work out to 3·81 and 3·72 per cent. respectively on the capital outlay, so that the final net profit on railways is 3·03 and 1·79 per cent. respectively. These interest charges include certain annuity and sinking fund payments which really go to the discharge of debt.

C.—Irrigation (Capital outlay).

62. The financial position of our great irrigation undertakings may be gathered from the following table which brings up to date the information given in connection with previous Financial Statements. The figures are in thousands of pounds :—

63. The total length of main and branch canals and distributaries from which irrigation was done during the year 1917-18 aggregated nearly 65,500 miles, a length which will have been increased by some 700 miles before the current financial year closes. These channels irrigated last year an area of 25½ million acres out of a total culturable commanded area of about double that extent. The area irrigated during the current year is expected to fall short of that realized in 1917-18 by about a million and a quarter acres as a result of the serious deficiency in the rainfall. The operations of the recently completed triple canal system in the Punjab continue to expand. About 1,200,000 acres of crops were brought to maturity in 1917-18, and a further increase of 100,000 acres is anticipated during the present financial year.

These results are extremely satisfactory, as the system was only declared complete on the 31st March 1917.

64. Besides the canals actually in operation, the results of which are briefly alluded to above, there are 34 major works—new systems or adjuncts of existing ones—which are either under construction, awaiting sanction or being examined by the professional advisers of the Government of India and of Local Governments. It is probable that the great majority of these works will eventually be carried out; their construction will, of course, occupy a considerable period of time, and it has been roughly computed that if they are all undertaken they will extend the benefits of irrigation to an additional area of about 11 million acres a year. They are estimated to cost £32 million sterling and to produce a net revenue of nearly £2½ millions.

65. Owing partly to the continuance of financial stringency and partly to the depleted condition of our engineer cadre as a result of the transfer of a large number of the officers of the Department to military duty, no new irrigation works of any importance were sanctioned or investigated during the present year.

66. The investigation of three schemes of the first magnitude was continued and it is hoped that the projects will soon take shape. Of these, the Sukkur Barrage project in Sind provides for a weir across the Indus with two large canals taking off on the right and left banks of the river to supply water for the perennial irrigation of areas now served by various inundation canals. The estimated capital outlay amounts to ₹1,100 lakhs. The project for the Sind-Sagar Doab canal in the Punjab comprises a barrage on the Indus at Kalabagh and an extensive canal system. This scheme will provide for the irrigation of some 200,000 acres and will cost about ₹7 crores. The Bhakra Dam scheme on the Sutlej, also in the Punjab, is being designed to store water to a depth of 360 feet above the river bed and will provide a storage of 110,000 millions of cubic feet of water during the monsoon without affecting the interests either of the existing Sirhind Canal or of the proposed Sutlej Valley scheme. The cost of the project is estimated at approximately ₹10 crores. About 1¼ million acres will be irrigated and the dam, if built as now designed, will be higher than any in existence.

67. The Cauvery (Metur) Reservoir project in Madras remained under the consideration of the Government of India. The project consists of a dam at Metur on the Cauvery to store 80,000 million cubic feet of water, and of a canal 78 miles long with a connected distributary system. The works are estimated to cost 4 crores of rupees, and to yield a return of over 5 per cent. on the capital cost: they provide for the complete control of the present fluctuating supplies to the Cauvery delta system and an area of 371,000 acres of new irrigation is also anticipated.

68. The proposed Sarda Canal for Oudh, which is also under the consideration of the Government of India, will, if constructed, rank among the largest irrigation works in the world. The gross area commanded is over 8 million acres, of which nearly 2 million acres will be irrigated annually. The net revenue anticipated will be nearly ₹59½ lakhs, which represents a return of 9.05 per cent. on the capital outlay of about ₹6½ crores. The Sarda Kichha feeder, for which a separate estimate has been prepared, forms part of this irrigation scheme. The combined project is designed to irrigate nearly 2¼ million acres and is expected to yield a return of 8½ per cent. on a total capital outlay of ₹857 lakhs.

69. The Sutlej Valley project was referred to a conference at which representatives of the Bahawalpur and the Bikanir Durbars met those of the Governments of India and the Punjab, with the result that an agreement was reached on the main outstanding points of principle connected with the apportionment of the available supplies of the Sutlej river between the two States mentioned; it is hoped that an arrangement acceptable to all the parties concerned will now be arrived at. This project is the largest at present under consideration, being designed to irrigate more than three million acres at a capital cost of about £6½ million sterling.

70. Satisfactory progress is being made with irrigation on the Upper Swat river canal which was completed last year and still more favourable results will, it is hoped, be realized now that more settled conditions have set in on the north-west frontier. The Tendula project in the Central Provinces, the Ghaggar Canal in the United Provinces and the Pravara Right Bank Canal in the Bombay-Deccan have also been opened for irrigation.

D.—New Delhi.

71. The expenditure during the current year under this head is expected to amount to ₹43 lakhs as compared with a budget provision of ₹40 lakhs. In accordance with the communiqué issued in June 1918 work was strictly confined to the erection of such buildings as were estimated to be required for occupation by troops and the Government of India, together with a portion of the work required to bring the central buildings to the level of the top of the basements, i.e., the level at which work could be stopped with the least ultimate loss, and the provision of the engineering services and works connoted by that programme. When the armistice was signed conditions were materially changed, and in order to prevent an untimely dispersal of labour which would have been particularly unfortunate when serious drought had caused a dearth of employment in the fields, a further sum of ₹3 lakhs was asked for and granted.

72. The grant for the coming year has been fixed at ₹45 lakhs, and it is hoped that work will now proceed as expeditiously as funds and the obtaining of materials will permit. The recurring expenses of the present makeshifts are adding appreciably to the cost of the new official capital of India, and furnish a powerful reason for pushing on the permanent works with all reasonable speed.

SECTION IV.—THE OUTLOOK.

73. The brief review of two very exceptional years which I have now attempted suggests matter for serious thought regarding our financial future. All the lessons of history teach us that, after the feverish activity of war time in a country which has been assisting in, though not the scene of, hostilities, reaction inevitably ensues. The prosperity which is built up on the production of the perishable munitions of war stands on foundations of sand and must soon collapse. The vast destruction of material wealth in the world, however its effects may be disguised during the busy period of reconstruction, must ultimately bring depression in its train, and the recovery back to normal conditions is slow and arduous. Large issues of war loans mean increased national expenditure of an unproductive type, and thus entail unprofitable taxation. The creation of money and credit, especially credit which takes the form of paper money, is a pleasant process while it lasts, but carries an inevitable sting; for every excess of paper currency has to be liquidated, and the value of money has to be reduced into accord with the needs of normal business. High prices, fostered by the curtailment of productive output, and not uninfluenced by the expanded currency, force up wages; and when prices fall again, as fall they must, capital suffers, wages have to be reduced and labour complications arise. The whole cycle of economical evils which follow upon war is a commonplace with students and needs no further emphasis. Let us see how India is prepared for the troublesome period through which the whole world will have to pass sooner or later.

74. The first obvious consideration is that we must get our currency habits back on to a sounder basis. It is a startling fact that between April 1915 and the present time nearly 120 crores of rupees have been added to the circulation. To provide India with this amount it has been necessary, besides using up the world's current production of silver, to deplete its accumulated stocks. Without the assistance of the Government of the United States, we should not have been able to satisfy the appetite of India for metallic currency. To anyone, who gives the subject a moment's thought, two conclusions are irresistible. In the first place, the huge sums which it has been necessary for India to pay for the purchases of silver bring home to us the wasteful and extravagant nature of what we have been doing. In the second place, a continuance of demand for metallic currency on this scale must react violently on our whole currency and exchange policy. On the question of extravagance, I need only quote here the remarks which Your Excellency made in this connection at the session of this Council in September last :

‘ But let me again emphasise how unprofitable to India is this lavish outpouring of metallic currency. The purchase of the silver alone means that India's money is being spent abroad to unfruitful purpose. Should the present rates of absorption continue to the end of the year, more than 100 crores of India's money will have been squandered within three short years. Had it been invested, the interest would have strengthened our revenues, and could have been spent to India's material advantage. Everybody therefore who insists on payments in metal instead of in notes is directly hampering India's interests. We all know the parable of the servant who, entrusted by his master with a talent of silver, buried it in the ground instead of putting it to profitable use. He was rightly treated as an unprofitable servant. The moral of the old parable holds good to-day. From time immemorial India has been held up to reproach as the grave of the precious metals. If she is to take her proper place among the progressive nations of the world, she must in her own interests do as Japan and other civilized nations do—put her hitherto immobile wealth to profitable uses.' •

As regards the second point, namely, the effect on our general arrangements, it is probable that the world will be unable to continue to supply India for an indefinite period with silver on the present scale, coupled with the much more moderate demands of other countries. It must be remembered in this connection that the Pittman Act contemplates the restoration in the moderately early future to the United States reserve of the silver taken therefrom; this alone, apart from other demands, will absorb the production of the American mines for several years. With the re-establishment of normal conditions the Indian demand may conceivably subside of itself to more reasonable proportions; but if this does not prove to be the case, I would ask Hon'ble Members to recognise the problem that will face us. If the absorption of rupees were to continue at the rate of the past three years, the time must ultimately come when it would be physically impossible to purchase sufficient silver to replace them, and in that event our internal currency policy would have to be fundamentally recast. Or, if by superhuman efforts, and by outbidding all other purchasers, we were lucky enough to secure the requisite amount of silver, it is more than likely that our operations would force up the price to some giddy height, and would throw the whole of our exchange policy into the melting pot. This particular side of the problem is now being carefully examined with a view to defining our exchange and silver policy; and I need say no more upon it at present than that it brings out one of the uncomfortable consequences of war for which we are already suffering. War and its rumours revived in a highly exaggerated form the ancient Indian custom of hoarding metallic currency which we had hoped we were slowly overcoming; and until recovery in this respect sets in, our difficulties must continue acute.

75. The second task before us is some contraction of the paper currency. Four years ago the effective circulation of our notes was under 60 crores; to-day it is close on 150 crores. It would hardly seem consistent to deplore these figures after extolling the superiority of paper over metal currency. It is also true that we have long laboured to popularize our notes. Moreover it is comforting to know that the metallic backing of our paper circulation is very much stronger to-day than it was in the critical months of last year. Nevertheless, as we all know, many friendly critics have been disturbed by the series of Ordinances which provided for the rapid increase of our currency investment; and none of us can pretend to any affection for that form of investment into which our necessities have recently forced us; I mean, the purchase of our own Treasury Bills. This particular method of obtaining funds is easy enough, but obviously cannot be used except in emergency and with the greatest caution. Although practically every belligerent country has had to finance itself in some measure by an abnormal recourse to the printing press, warnings are now being heard on all sides about its serious consequences. Here in India, if our responsibilities for meeting war expenditure forced us to err in this direction, we certainly have sinned against the light to a very much smaller extent than other countries. The time however is now coming when we shall no longer be able to plead, as an excuse for borrowing from our Currency Reserve, the exigencies of war; and we ought to try to retire at least that portion of our paper which is represented by our own Treasury Bills. Some of us would probably like to go further and reduce the outstanding note circulation until we hear no more of forced discounts in the countryside and their hardships on the people; but it is not easy to see how this adjustment can be effected until silver comes out of hoards and resumes its duty as a circulating medium.

76. The third and most imminent phase of the problem is the redemption of our temporary war obligations. An earlier passage in this Statement has shown the amount of short-term war bonds that are hanging over our heads. Cash Certificates and Treasury Bills must be added to these floating liabilities. The clearance of our war stores suspense account is a minor nightmare of a somewhat similar character; it probably means a liability of £6 millions at the end of next year, which we must meet by transfer at the earliest possible occasion to our revenue account. If we cannot fund these short obligations on reasonable terms—and for the purposes of government in India a 6 per cent. rate of interest cannot be regarded as reasonable—we shall have to redeem them as they mature. Simultaneously however with finding the necessary sums for this operation we shall, during the years over which it is spread, have irresistible claims upon us to raise capital for internal development, railways, industries, forests and the like. And again, during the same period we shall have to launch into very heavy expenditure for the education and well-being of the people, without which our political progress would be largely nugatory. The coming burden therefore upon our revenue resources cannot be envisaged without considerable anxiety.

77. In saying all this I have no desire to pose as a pessimist or alarmist. Far from being a pessimist, I believe that India's control over raw materials for which the whole outside world will be contending, places her in a position of exceptional strength and will exempt her from many of the discomforts and sufferings that the period of reaction will entail upon other countries. It is wise however to face the facts. We have heavy liabilities hanging over us in several directions; debt of an unproductive character which we ought to dispose of in order to facilitate a remunerative borrowing programme in the near future; a currency position which requires careful handling and at least some withdrawal of our recent emergency issues of paper; and a general consolidation of our position with a view to the development of our national intelligence and earning power. If this teaches us anything, it is that our watchword must be rigid economy, both in the Government and in the lives of individual citizens. We shall want a relatively high scale of taxation to get rid of our superfluous obligations. If the taxes are to be paid, the people must save; unless the taxes are to be oppressive, the Government must economize. You may think that economy is a threadbare motto in our Financial Statements; but I am convinced that, coupled with courageous outlay on the essentials of progress, a strict economy in all non-essentials will in the near future be more necessary than it has ever been.

78. In conclusion I am sure that the Council will concur with me in expressing our obligations to the staff of the Finance Department for their unceasing labour during a particularly trying year. The toil has been shared by all grades of employés in the provincial account offices, currency offices and Mints. Both our Mint Masters have shown great resource and endurance. Messrs. Gubbay and Cook have directed currency operations with skill and vigilance. Among our Accountants-General and officers of similar status it is invidious to discriminate; but thanks are specially due to Messrs. Alder, Carson and Philippe. At headquarters Mr. Howard assisted by Mr. A. V. V. Aiyar on the civil side, and Sir Godfrey Fell and Mr. B. N. Mitra on the military side have had an extraordinarily heavy task, admirably performed. I am specially indebted to Messrs. Howard and Cook for the large share they have taken in preparing this Statement.

NOTICE.

The 11th November 1918.

On and after 23rd November and until further notice, Parts I, IV, V and VI of the Gazette of India and the Weather and Crop Report will be published in Delhi. Parts II and III will continue to be published in Calcutta. All notifications and other matter intended for publication in those Parts should be addressed to the Publisher at Delhi and Calcutta, respectively.

Attention is invited to the following Circular Memorandum of the Government of India, Home Department, of August 1901:—

"It has been brought to the notice of this Department that matter for the Gazette of India is sometimes sent to the Press late on Friday evenings for publication in the next day's Gazette and that this involves considerable inconvenience to the Press and expense to Government. In the Circular Memorandum of this Department, No. 777-79, dated 9th February 1870, the Government of India directed that all notifications or other matter intended for insertion in the Gazette of India should be delivered at the Press not later than 2 p.m. on Friday, and that any papers sent thereafter must be certified to be extremely urgent in order to ensure their appearance in the next day's Gazette. The undersigned is directed to request that these orders may be more strictly observed in future, and that Departments will refrain from sending to the Press as extremely urgent any papers which can without harm or inconvenience be held over for the next Gazette."

J. P. HEWETT,

Secretary to the Government of India."

NOTICES.

THE PATENT OFFICE, 1, COUNCIL HOUSE STREET, CALCUTTA.

Public room, open 11 a.m. to 4 p.m.; Saturdays, 11 a.m. to 1 p.m.

1. All communications relating to applications for patents and for registration of designs under the Indian Patents and Designs Act (II of 1911), or in continuation of applications under the Inventions and Designs Act (V of 1888) must be made in English and addressed to the Controller of Patents and Designs, 1, Council House Street, Calcutta. Documents sent by post should be carefully packed and a full address given in all communications.

2. Directions for the guidance of inventors and others are given in the Patent Office Handbook (price one rupee) which contains the Indian Patents and Designs Act, 1911, the Indian Patents and Designs Rules, 1912, the Indian Patents and Designs (Temporary Rules) Act, 1915, the Indian Patents and Designs (Temporary) Rules, 1916, together with current regulations and instructions. These should be consulted before an application is made to the Controller.

3. Advice. The Patent Office cannot undertake (1) to give opinions on the interpretation of Patent Law, or on the advisability of protecting inventions and designs or on their infringement; (2) to make searches in respect of information available in the public room; (3) to recommend any particular agent; or (4) to assist in the disposal of inventions. Models are not required unless specially asked for. Drawings must be on tracing cloth and the Rules and Instructions for the preparation of drawings as given in the Handbook should be strictly followed. A provisional patent cannot be secured under the Indian Patents and Designs Act, 1911.

4. Applicants are warned that the Indian Patents and Designs Act, 1911, is in force in British India only, and patents granted under it do not extend to the United Kingdom or any of the British possessions. The International Convention for the Protection of Industrial Property does not include India. For information regarding patents in countries other than India application should be made to the patent offices in the countries concerned.

5. Fees are payable in cash and must be received in the Patent Office within the time allowed by the Acts. When cheques are offered in payment of fees, it must be clearly understood that the office cannot hold itself responsible for any delay that may occur in the collection of cash on the cheques; any cheque not payable in Calcutta is subject to commission for which due allowance should be made. In cases where it is not possible to have the fees handed in at the Patent Office, it is preferable to send them by money-order or postal order payable at Calcutta to the Controller of Patents and Designs, and to advise him that they have been so sent. Stamps will not be received in payment of fees.

6. Trade and property marks and names are not registered and medicines are not patented under the Indian Patents and Designs Act. There is no provision of Law in British India for their registration. Neither does this Act deal with pictures, photographs, etc., for which copyright is obtainable under the Indian Copyright Act, 1914.

7. Printed Specifications of applications, which have been accepted, are published within about three weeks after acceptance has been notified in the Gazette of India. These specifications can be purchased at the Patent Office at a uniform price of 8 annas per copy; and may be seen free of charge, together with other publications of the Patent Office, at the following places:—

LAND ACQUISITION BRANCH.

NOTIFICATION.

The 25th February 1919.

No. 1909-L-A.—The following agreement is published under section 42 of the Land Acquisition Act, I of 1894, for general information.

M. C. McALPIN,

Secretary to the Government of Bengal.

MEMORANDUM OF AGREEMENT made this 25th day of February one thousand nine hundred and nineteen, BETWEEN MARSHALL SONS AND COMPANY LIMITED of Gainsborough England a Company (registered under the English Companies Act) and having its registered office at Gainsborough aforesaid and a Branch Office at No. 99, Clive Street in the town of Calcutta (hereinafter called "the Company") of the one part and THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA IN COUNCIL (hereinafter called "the Secretary of State") of the other part WHEREAS for the purpose of the manufacture of tea machinery and its adjuncts in India the Company has applied to the Government of Bengal for the acquisition under the provisions of the Land Acquisition Act, 1894, of the piece or parcel of land containing 29.752 acres or thereabout situate in the village of Agarpara in the district of the Twenty-four Parganas and more particularly described in the Schedule hereto and delineated in the plan* hereunto annexed AND WHEREAS the said Government of Bengal, being satisfied by an enquiry held under section 40 of the said Act that the proposed acquisition is needed for the aforesaid purpose and that the said work is likely to prove useful to the public, has consented to acquire on behalf of the Company the piece or parcel of land hereinbefore described AND WHEREAS the said Government of Bengal has required the Company under the provisions of section 41 of the abovementioned Act to enter into the Agreement with the Secretary of State herein-after contained. NOW THIS INDENTURE WITNESSETH that it is HEREBY AGREED AND DECLARED as follows:—

1. On demand the Company shall and will pay to the said Government of Bengal all and every compensation in respect of the said land tendered, paid or awarded or to be tendered, paid or awarded by the Collector under the Land Acquisition Act, 1894, or by the Court to which a reference under Part III of the said Act may be made, or by the Court or Courts to which an appeal from the award of the said Court may be preferred and all costs, charges and expenses of the proceedings in the aforesaid Courts or otherwise incidental to the proposed acquisition or payable in respect thereof under the provisions of the said Act.
2. On demand made by the said Collector the obligation of the Company under the last preceding clause not being thereby lifted the Company shall and will deposit with the said Collector such sum or sums of money as in his discretion the said Collector may in anticipation estimate to be necessary for the purposes mentioned in the last preceding clause.
3. On payment by the Company of all demands under the foregoing first clause, or in the discretion of the said Government of Bengal (on deposit by the Company of all estimated amounts as provided in the second clause) but not before possession shall have been taken under the provisions of the abovementioned Act, the Secretary of State shall make over possession of the said land to the Company and shall execute and do all such acts and deeds as may be necessary and proper for effectually vesting the same in the Company.
4. The said land shall be held by the Company for the purpose of such manufacture as is hereinbefore mentioned and without the sanction in writing of the said Government of Bengal first had and obtained for no other purpose whatsoever.
5. The necessary buildings and plant for the said manufacture of tea machinery shall be completed (and fully equipped in all respects ready for use) within three years from the date on which possession of the said land shall have been given to the Company.

* Not published herewith, but may be inspected in the office of the Special Land Acquisition Deputy Collector, Alipore, 24-Parganas.

6. Should the said buildings and plant not be completed (and fully equipped in all respects ready for use) within the period stated in the last preceding clause or within such further period as in its discretion may be prescribed or allowed by the said Government of Bengal or should the said land at any time thereafter cease for a period of twelve consecutive months to be held and used or cease to be required for the purpose or purposes provided for in the foregoing fourth clause then and in any such case, the said Government may summarily re-enter upon and take possession of the said land, and thereupon the interest of the Company in the said land shall absolutely cease and determine.
7. On taking such possession the said Government may sell or otherwise deal with the said land as it may think proper. Should the said Government sell the said land the said Government after deducting the expenses incurred in connection with the said taking of possession and with such sale shall pay the proceeds to the Company. Should the said Government on taking possession decide not to sell the land it shall repay to the Company all sums received from the Company in respect of all and every compensation as provided in the foregoing first clause (less the statutory allowance of 15 per cent.) but will not repay any sums paid and received on account of costs, charges and expenses.
8. The public shall be entitled to use the said land on the following terms :—
The public shall have all reasonable access to that portion of the said land and buildings on or in which the tea machinery manufactured is exposed for sale and reasonable liberty to inspect such manufactured machinery free of charge and to purchase the same at such prices as may hereafter be fixed by the Company.
9. The Company shall be at liberty to transfer all or any of their rights under this agreement to a limited liability Company in India now in the course of promotion to take over the Company's existing interests in India and to be promoted under the name of Marshall Sons & Co., India, Ltd., when such promotion has been completed provided always that such Company shall not be a "foreign controlled company" as defined in the Government of India Notification No. 11917, dated 6th October 1917, and the Company shall therefore be deemed to be acquiring the said land as Trustees for the said Marshall Sons & Co. India, Ltd., who shall take such land subject to all the liabilities which otherwise would attach to and be binding on the Company.
10. Should any dispute or difference arise touching or concerning the subject matter of this agreement or any covenant clause or thing herein contained the same shall be referred to the said Government of Bengal and the opinion and decision of the said Government upon such dispute or difference shall be final and conclusive and binding on the parties hereto.

THE SCHEDULE ABOVE REFERRED TO.

All that piece or parcel of land measuring more or less, 29·752 acres and situate in the village of Agarpara in the district of 24-Parganas, registration district 24-Parganas, sub-district Barrackpore, and which land is divided into two plots by a branch line or siding of the Eastern Bengal Railway and one of which plots of land is bounded as follows :—

Plot No. 1.—On the north by the pucca road, on the east by the pucca road and the land of Dokhina, Rajan Mookerjee and Eastern Bengal Railway land, on the south by the Eastern Bengal Railway land, on the west by the Barrackpore Trunk Road and Eastern Bengal Railway land, and the other of which plots is bounded as follows :—

RAILWAY DEPARTMENT.

(RAILWAY BOARD.)

NOTIFICATIONS.

Delhi, the 5th March 1919.

No. 3-T.—18.—In exercise of the powers conferred by the Notification of the Government of India in the Department of Commerce and Industry, No. 801, dated the 24th March 1905, and in pursuance of section 47, sub-section (3) of the Indian Railways Act, 1890 (IX of 1890), as in force in British India, the Railway Board sanction the following rules made by the Managing Agents, Burdwan-Katwa, Ahmedpur-Katwa, Bankura-Damoodar River, Kalighat-Falta and Jessore-Jhenidah Railway Companies, Limited, under sub-section (1), clauses (f) and (g) of the said section, for and to be applicable to the Burdwan-Katwa, Ahmedpur-Katwa, Bankura-Damoodar River, Kalighat-Falta and Jessore-Jhenidah Railways situate in British India, for regulating the terms and conditions on which the Railway Administrations will warehouse or retain goods at any station or depôt on the Burdwan-Katwa, Ahmedpur-Katwa, Bankura-Damoodar River, Kalighat-Falta and Jessore-Jhenidah Railways on behalf of the consignee or owner, and for regulating the use of rolling stock, engines and trains on the said railways by the public.

THE BURDWAN-KATWA, AHMEDPUR-KATWA, BANKURA-DAMOODAR RIVER, KALIGHAT-FALTA AND JESSORE-JHENIDAH RAILWAYS.

I.—RULES FOR THE WAREHOUSING AND RETENTION OF GOODS.

Wharfage.

1. Wharfage should be calculated—

- (a) when freight is levied on weight—upon such weight;
- (b) where freight is levied on the vehicle in or on which the goods are carried—upon the carrying capacity of such vehicle.

Circumstances.	Time allowed free.	Commodity.	Rate per maund or part of a maund per day or part of a day in excess of the free time.	REMARKS.
On goods for despatch waiting to be consigned, i.e., consignments brought to station but consignment notes not received.	Up to closing time (i.e., at 18 hours) of the day on which such goods are brought to the station.	All goods .	1 anna . . .	Goods will in all cases be at Owner's Risk until they shall have been accepted, booked and a printed receipt in the prescribed form has been granted duly signed by an authorised railway servant.
On goods available for delivery, i.e., consignments not removed.	From time of arrival till closing time, i.e., 18 hours of the day following that on which consignments are made available for delivery.	Ditto .	1 anna . . .	The goods shall be warehoused either under cover or in the open as space may be available.

Luggage and Parcels.

2. (a) Responsibility of Railway Administrations for articles intended to be booked as parcels or luggage—

The Railway Administrations are not responsible for articles of any description intended to be booked as parcels or luggage for conveyance by mixed or passenger trains, unless they shall have been accepted, booked and a printed receipt in the prescribed form has been granted duly signed by an authorised railway servant.

(b) On luggage and parcels available for delivery.

For unclaimed booked luggage and parcels the following warehouse charge will be made if they are not removed from railway premises within 48 hours from midnight of the day of arrival :—

Rate per maund or part of a maund for 24 hours or part of 24 hours.				Minimum charge per package.
Rs.	A.	P.		Rs.	A.	P.
0	2	0		0	2	0

On Carriages, Motor Cars, Palanquins, Howdahs and Tanjans.

3. (a) Carriages, motor cars, palanquins, howdahs and tanjans left at stations awaiting despatch order from consignor will, after the expiration of 24 hours from the time they are brought to the station, be subject to a wharfage charge of Rs. 2 per carriage or motor car and Re. 1 per palanquin, howdah or tanjan for each subsequent day or part thereof. Until a railway receipt is granted the railway company do not acknowledge any responsibility in respect to such carriages, motor cars, palanquins, howdahs or tanjans which must be at owner's risk.

(b) Similar charges will be levied on all carriages, motor cars, palanquins, howdahs and tanjans left at stations awaiting removal by consignee after the expiration of 24 hours from the time they are available for delivery.

On Birds, Poultry and Animals generally.

4. For birds, poultry and animals generally, charges may be made as follows after the expiry of 6 hours from the time they are available for delivery :—

Animals—One anna per animal per hour or part of an hour.

Poultry—One anna per head per hour or part of an hour.

Birds in baskets or crates, etc.—One anna per cubic foot or part of a cubic foot per hour or part of an hour.

These charges to be in addition to any expenses entailed in feeding the birds, poultry or animals, etc.

Under any circumstances, live animals should be removed from the Railway premises within 24 hours, from the time of their arrival at destination, failing which they may be disposed of under section 56, clause 2, Railway Act IX of 1890.

Notice of Arrival.

5. The Burdwan-Katwa, the Ahmedpur Katwa, the Bankura-Damoodar River, the Kalighat-Falta and the Jessore-Jhenidah Railway Companies do not undertake to send notice of arrival of goods, luggage, parcels, etc., to consignees, and the absence of such notice will not entitle consignees to claim exemption from wharfage or demurrage or storage charges if goods, luggage, parcels, etc., are not removed within the time allowed. Endeavours will, however, be made at receiving stations to advise consignees, when practicable, of the arrival of their goods and parcels. The cost of advices sent by post will be borne by the Company.

Treatment and Disposal of Unclaimed Goods and Parcels.

6. (a) Subject to the exception mentioned in clause (e) below, unclaimed goods, parcels and luggage, etc., are kept on hand at the station to which booked for a period of not less than one month, during which time the notice prescribed in section 56, sub-section (1), of the Indian Railways Act (IX of 1890), will be served upon the person entitled thereto.

(b) If not taken delivery of within a period of not less than ~~one~~ month after receipt at the station to which invoiced or way-billed, unclaimed goods, parcels, luggage, etc., are sent to the Unclaimed Goods or Lost Property Office and dealt with as laid down in clause (f) below.

(c) Unclaimed articles are liable to wharfage and demurrage charges hereinbefore referred to, as well as to all freight and special expenditure incurred by the Railway on account of their custody and disposal.

(d) When articles such as arms, ammunition, explosives, intoxicating liquors, opium and its preparations, and hemp drugs, the sale of which by unlicensed persons is prohibited by law, are left unclaimed in the possession of the Railway, they will be made over to the police or excise authorities for disposal under the laws affecting the article. When not of a dangerous, perishable or offensive character, they will, however, be retained in the possession of the Railway for the same period as that prescribed for other unclaimed articles.

This rule in so far as it relates to explosives is supplemental to, and not in modification of, the rules made under the Indian Explosives Act.

(e) Perishable articles unclaimed or not taken delivery of, will be disposed of by auction at owner's risk and expense by the Station Master of the Station at which they may be left after the expiry of 24 hours or earlier, if they are or are likely to become, offensive.

(f) Public sales by auction are held from time to time of all unclaimed or lost property which has remained in the possession of the Railway over six months. At least fifteen days' previous notice of each auction will be given by advertisement in a newspaper or by means of notices publicly exhibited at all stations on the Railway concerned.

(g) Any surplus proceeds arising out of sales of lost property or unclaimed consignments after payment of all charges and expenses due to the Railway will be paid to the person or persons thereto entitled.

Lost Property.

7. (a) Lost property found in railway vehicles or on railway premises will, subject to the exception mentioned in sub-clause 6 (e) above, be sent to the Lost Property Office and will be dealt with in the same manner as unclaimed booked articles.

(b) A fee of two annas for each article or package will be charged in addition to a storage charge of annas four per month or portion of a month during which it has remained in the possession of the Railway Company as Lost Property.

Left Luggage Offices or Cloak Rooms.

8. (a) Passengers may leave small parcels or packages in the cloak rooms at such stations as may be specified from time to time by the Railway Administrations.

(b) A charge of two annas per maund or part of a maund, with a minimum charge per package as for one maund, will be levied for each 24 hours or part of 24 hours during which the parcel or package remains in a cloak room.

(c) The responsibility of the Railway Administrations for articles left in a cloak room shall be that of a bailee under sections 151, 152 and 161 of the Indian Contract Act, 1872 (IX of 1872).

(d) A receipt ticket shall be given to any person depositing parcels and packages for custody in a cloak room and delivery will be made to any person presenting such receipt ticket, after which all responsibility of the Railway

Administrations in respect of such parcels or packages shall absolutely cease and determine. The person presenting the ticket must sign his name on the ticket and enter the date. An Indemnity Bond should be executed by the owner in all cases of loss of receipt tickets.

(e) Articles deposited in cloak rooms which are unclaimed may, after a period of one month, be transferred to the Lost Property Office and dealt with as unclaimed property.

II.—RULES FOR REGULATING THE USE OF ROLLING STOCK, ENGINES AND TRAINS GENERALLY.

9. Demurrage.

Circumstances.	Time allowed free.	Rate per ton or part of a ton of carrying capacity per hour or part of an hour in excess of the free time.	REMARKS.
On vehicles ordered and waiting to be loaded by senders or detained for consignment note or otherwise, owing to default of or at the request of the sender.	9 hours of day-light from the time at which the vehicles are placed in position.	1 anna, subject to a minimum of 8 annas per hour per vehicle.
On loaded vehicles waiting to be discharged by owners.	9 hours of day-light from the time of being placed in position for unloading.	1 anna, subject to a minimum of 8 annas per hour per vehicle	The Railway Administrations may at their option unload the vehicle and charge the consignee for doing so and charge wharfage on the contents under rule I.
IN PRIVATE SIDINGS.
On vehicles waiting to be loaded at a private siding.	9 hours of day-light from the time at which the vehicles are placed within the limits of such a siding.	1 anna.
On loaded vehicles waiting to be discharged in a private siding.	9 hours of day-light from the time at which the vehicles are shunted within the limits of such a siding.	1 anna.

NOTE.—Day-light hours are reckoned as from 6 to 18 o'clock.

Demurrage will be charged for every hour, day or night, in excess of the free time.

Demurrage Charge on Reserved Carriages.

10. (a) When a carriage is ordered but not used by the train for which ordered, demurrage at the following rates may be charged until intimation is received that the carriage is not required :—

Description of carriages.	Rs.	A.	P.	Charges.
Four wheelers	0	8	0	per hour or part of an hour per vehicle.
Six wheelers	0	11	0	ditto ditto.
Bogies	1	0	0	ditto ditto.
Subject to a minimum charge of	5	0	0	for all three types of vehicles.

(b) When for the convenience of passengers, reserved carriages are detained at intermediate stations or at destination station, demurrage may be charged as shown in sub-clause (a) above, from the scheduled departure time of the train bringing in the carriage.

Demurrage Charge on Special Trains and Engines.

11. (a) Demurrage may be charged for public special trains when they do not start at the time ordered, at the rate of 8 annas for each four-wheeled vehicle per hour and Rs. 10 per hour for the engines. Fractions of an hour are to be reckoned as one hour and each bogie vehicle is to be counted as two ordinary vehicles. Demurrage may also be charged for stoppage ~~en route~~ or for detentions at destination station at the same rate as shewn in the foregoing sub-clause 10 (a) and at Rs. 10 per hour for the engine.

(b) In the case of a special train being countermanded, the charges laid down in sub-clause (a) above may be charged.

III.—CALCULATION OF CHARGES.

12. In calculating wharfage and demurrage charges, fractions of one anna less than six pies shall be dropped and six pies and over shall be charged as one anna. When the total amount of demurrage or wharfage due on any consignment is less than two annas, it shall be foregone.

IV.—GENERAL.

Partial Delivery of Consignments.

13. (a) A consignee must take delivery of goods, luggage, parcels, etc., forming part of a consignment whenever they are available for delivery, notwithstanding that the remaining goods, luggage, parcels, etc., are short or damaged or have not arrived at their destination or are otherwise not available for delivery; and if the consignee does not take delivery of such goods, luggage, parcels, etc., forming part of a consignment as are available for delivery, they will be subject to wharfage charges if not removed within the time allowed for removal.

(b) In the event of consignments requiring to be loaded or unloaded by owners becoming liable to both demurrage and wharfage charges, the Railway Administrations may levy both demurrage and wharfage charges for such periods as the consignments would be liable to such charges under these rules.

(c) If and for so long as the state of the traffic or any sudden emergency makes it necessary and after advertisement in the local newspapers or by means of notices publicly exhibited at all stations on the Railway concerned, the rate of demurrage or wharfage may be increased and the free time may be curtailed.

(d) Explosives or dangerous goods must be removed by the consignee from the receiving station during the 12 hours of day-light after arrival; if this condition is not strictly complied with, the Railway Administrations may return the consignment to the consignor at his risk and expense.

(e) The Railway Administrations shall have the same lien on goods, luggage, parcels, etc., for demurrage, wharfage, and, if incurred, for unloading, as for freight, and these charges must, unless under special arrangements a running account is kept, be paid before the consignments are removed.

(f) Where the free time allowed in the previous rules includes either Sunday, Christmas Day or Good Friday, such days shall not be treated as dies non and shall be taken into account the same as any other day.

(g) Should the wharfage or storage on actual weight exceed the demurrage charge at the wagon rate for the full time, the latter rate will be charged.

No. 480-E-19.—On return from military duty, Lieutenant-Colonel E. Barnardiston, R.E., Superintending Engineer, 2nd class s.p.t., State Railways, is appointed to officiate as Senior Government Inspector of Railways, Circle No. 1.

No. 480-E-1-19.—With reference to Notification No. 480-E-19, dated 5th March 1919, Mr. W. A. C. Sisson, Superintending Engineer, 3rd class s.p.t., is placed on special duty in the office of the Senior Government Inspector of Railways, Circle No. 1, until further orders.

The 6th March 1919.

No. 3-T.—18.—In exercise of the powers conferred by the Notification of the Government of India in the Department of Commerce and Industry, No. 801, dated the 24th March 1905, and in pursuance of section 47, sub-section (3) of the Indian Railways Act, 1890 (IX of 1890), as in force in British India, the Railway Board sanction the following rules made by the Managing Agents, Howrah-Amta, Howrah-Sheakhala, Baraset-Basirhat and Bukhtiarpur-Bihar Light Railway Companies, Limited, under sub-section (1), clauses (f) and (g) of the said section, for and to be applicable to the Howrah-Amta, Howrah-Sheakhala, Baraset-Basirhat and Bukhtiarpur-Bihar Light Railway Systems situate in British India for regulating the terms and conditions on which the Railway Administrations will warehouse or retain goods at any station or depôt on the Howrah-Amta, Howrah-Sheakhala, Baraset-Basirhat and Bukhtiarpur-Bihar Light Railways, on behalf of the consignee or owner, and for regulating the use of rolling stock, engines and trains on the said railways by the public.

HOWRAH-AMTA, HOWRAH-SHEAKHALA, BARASET-BASIRHAT AND BUKHTIARPUR-BIHAR LIGHT RAILWAYS.

I.—RULES FOR THE WAREHOUSING AND RETENTION OF GOODS.

Wharfage.

1. Wharfage should be calculated—

- (1) where freight is levied on weight—upon such weight ;
- (2) where freight is levied on the vehicle in or on which the goods are carried—upon the carrying capacity of such vehicle.

Circumstances.	Time allowed free.	Commodities.	Rate per maund or part of a maund per day or part of a day in excess of the free time.	REMARKS.
On goods for despatch waiting to be consigned, i.e., consignments brought to station but consignment notes not received.	Closing time of the day.	(1) For loose cotton, wet hides and skins, fish, jute, hemp and flax. (2) For other goods.	6 pies . . . 3 pies.	Goods will in all cases be at owner's risk until a receipt in the prescribed form has been granted duly signed by an authorised Railway servant.
On goods available for delivery. Consignments, not removed.	From time of arrival till closing time of the day following that on which consignments are made available for delivery.	(1) For loose cotton, wet hides and skins, fish, jute, hemp and flax. (2) For other goods.	6 pies . . . 3 pies.	The goods shall be warehoused either under cover or in the open as space may be available.

2. A consignee must take delivery of goods forming part of a consignment whenever they are available for delivery, notwithstanding that the remaining goods are short or damaged or have not arrived at destination or otherwise not available for delivery ; and if the consignee does not take delivery of such goods forming part of a consignment as are available for delivery, they will be subject to wharfage charges if not removed within the time allowed for removal.

On Luggage and Parcels Available for Delivery.

3. For unclaimed booked luggage and parcels, the following warehouse charge will be made if they are not removed from Railway premises within 48 hours from midnight of the day of arrival.

Rate per maund or part of a maund for 24 hours or part of 24 hours :—	Minimum charge per package.
Rs. A. P.	Rs. A. P.
0 2 0	0 2 0

On Carriages, Motor Cars and Palanquins.

4. (a) Carriages, motor cars, and palanquins left on the Company's premises over the Howrah-Amta, Howrah-Sheakhala, Baraset-Basirhat and Bukhtiarpur-Bihar Light Railways, awaiting removal by consignee, will, after the expiration of 24 hours from the time they are available for delivery, be subject to a wharfage charge of Rs. 2-0-0 per carriage or motor car, and Re. 1-0-0 per palanquin, for each subsequent day or part thereof.

(b) A similar charge will be levied on all carriages, motor cars and palanquins left on the Company's premises awaiting despatch order from consignor after the expiration of 24 hours from the time they are brought to the station, but until a Railway receipt is granted the Railways do not acknowledge any responsibility in respect to such carriages, motor cars or palanquins, which must be at owner's risk.

On Birds, Poultry and Animals.

5. For birds, poultry, and animals charges may be made as follows :—

After the expiry of 6 hours from the time they are available for delivery—

Animals.—One anna per animal per hour or part of an hour.

Poultry.—One anna per head per hour or part of an hour.

Birds in baskets or crates, etc.—One anna per cubic foot, or part of a cubic foot, per hour or part of an hour.

These charges to be in addition to any expenses entailed in feeding the birds, animals, etc.

Under any circumstances, live animals should be removed from the railway premises within 24 hours from the time of their arrival at destination, failing which they may be disposed of under section 56, clause 2, Railway Act IX of 1890.

Notice of Arrival.

6. The Howrah-Amta, Howrah-Sheakhala, Bukhtiarpur-Bihar and Baraset-Basirhat Light Railways do not undertake to send notice of arrival of goods and parcels to consignees ; and the absence of such notice will not entitle consignees to claim exemption from wharfage or demurrage or storage charges if goods and parcels are not removed within the time allowed. Endeavours will, however, be made at the receiving stations to advise consignees when practicable of the arrival of their goods and parcels. The cost of advices sent by post will be borne by the Company.

Treatment and Disposal of Unclaimed Goods and Parcels.

7. (a) Subject to the exception mentioned in Rule (e) below, unclaimed goods (parcels and luggage) are kept on hand at the station to which booked for a period of not less than one month, during which time the notice prescribed in section 56, sub-section (1) of the Indian Railways Act (IX of 1890), will be issued if the owner of the goods or person entitled thereto is known.

(b) If not taken delivery of within a period of not less than one month after receipt at the station to which invoiced or way-billed, unclaimed goods, luggage and parcels will be sent to the Unclaimed Goods or Lost Property Office and dealt with as laid down in rule (f) below.

(c) Unclaimed articles will be liable to the wharfage and demurrage charges hereinbefore referred to, as well as to all freight and special expenditure incurred by the Railway on account of their custody and disposal.

(d) Where articles such as arms, ammunition, explosives, intoxicating liquors, opium and its preparations, and hemp drugs, the sale of which by unlicensed persons is prohibited by law, are left unclaimed in the possession of the Railways, they will be made over to the Police or Excise authorities for disposal under the laws affecting the article. When not of a dangerous, perishable or offensive character, they will, however, be retained in the possession of the Railway for the same period as that prescribed for other unclaimed articles.

This rule in so far as it relates to explosives is supplemental to, and not in modification of, the rules made under the Indian Explosives Act.

(e) Perishable articles unclaimed or not taken delivery of, will be disposed of by auction at owner's risk and expense by the Station Master of the station at which they may be left after the expiry of 24 hours, or earlier, if they are, or are likely to become, offensive.

(f) Public sales by auction will be held every quarter of the year of all unclaimed or lost property which has remained in the possession of the Railway over six months. At least 15 days' previous notice of each auction will be given by advertisement in a newspaper.

(g) Any surplus proceeds arising out of sale of lost property or unclaimed consignments after payment of all charges and expenses due to the Railway, will be paid to the person or persons thereto entitled.

Lost Property.

8. (a) Lost property found in Railway vehicles or on Railway premises will, subject to the exception mentioned in paragraph (e) above, be sent to the Lost Property Office after 48 hours, and will be dealt with in the same manner as unclaimed booked goods.

(b) Application for the recovery of lost property should be made to the nearest Station Master or the Traffic Inspector, Kadamtala, Sham Bazar, or Bukhtiarpur, as the case may be, and also to the Traffic Superintendent, 6 and 7, Clive Street, Calcutta, marked on the outside cover "Lost Property."

(c) A storage charge of annas four for each article or package will be recovered per month or portion of a month during which it has remained in the possession of the Railway Company as Lost Property.

Left Luggage Offices or Cloak Rooms.

9. (a) Luggage may be placed for temporary custody in charge of the Station Masters at certain stations.

(b) A left luggage ticket will be given to any person depositing luggage or parcels for custody in a cloak room; and delivery will be made to any person presenting such receipt ticket, after which all responsibility of the Railway Administrations in respect of such luggage or parcels shall absolutely cease and determine. The person presenting the ticket must sign his name on the ticket and enter the date. An Indemnity Bond should be executed by the owner in all cases of loss of left luggage receipts.

(c) Before a left luggage ticket is given, the luggage ticket issued at the forwarding station in the case of luggage received by Railway, must be collected.

(d) A charge of two annas per package will be levied for each 24 hours or part of 24 hours, during which the luggage or parcels remains in a cloak room.

For the purpose of this rule, Sundays, Good Friday and Christmas Day are not considered dies non. The charge will be calculated from the time the package is deposited in the cloak room. This time will be marked on the left luggage ticket just below the date.

(e) The responsibility of the Railway Administrations for articles left in a cloak room shall be that of a bailee under sections 151, 152 and 161 of the Indian Contract Act, 1872 (IX of 1872).

Articles deposited in a cloak room, which are unclaimed, will, after a period of one month, be transferred to the Lost Property Office and be dealt with as prescribed in rules for unclaimed packages.

II.—RULES FOR REGULATING THE USE OF ROLLING STOCK, ENGINES AND TRAINS.

10. Demurrage.

Circumstances.	Time allowed free.	Rate per ton or part of a ton of carrying capacity per hour or part of an hour in excess of free time.	REMARKS.
In Railway premises.—On vehicles ordered and waiting to be loaded by senders, or detained for consignment note or otherwise owing to default of or at the request of the sender.	6 hours of day-light from the time at which the vehicles are placed in position.	1 anna.
On loaded vehicles waiting to be discharged by owners.	6 hours of day-light from the time at which the vehicles are placed in position for unloading.	Same rate as above .	The Railway Administration will at its option unload the vehicles and charge the consignee for doing so and will also charge wharfage on the contents under rule I. The Railway Companies reserve the right of unloading owner's load at destination immediately on arrival or within 9 hours of day-light after arrival. In such cases, the cost of unloading will be borne by the Railway.

NOTE.—Day-light hours are reckoned as from 6 to 18 o'clock. Demurrage will be charged for every hour, day or night, in excess of the free time.

Demurrage Charge on Reserved Carriages.

11. When, for the convenience of passengers, reserved carriages are detained at intermediate stations, a charge of 4 annas per carriage per hour or part of an hour will be made, but the charge will only be collected when orders to this effect are specially issued.

The same charge applies for detention to carriages ordered by intending passengers and not used from the time the vehicle is available till the time when intimation is received that it is not required.

In the case of bogie vehicles, double rates are chargeable.

Demurrage Charge for Engine.

12. A demurrage charge of Rs. 8 per hour or part of an hour on account of engine hire will be made for the extra hours if an engine of a public special train is detained en route at the party's request.

III.—CALCULATION OF CHARGES.

13. In calculating wharfage and demurrage charges, fractions of an anna less than six pies shall be dropped and six pies and over shall be charged as one anna. Where the total amount of demurrage or wharfage due on any consignment is less than two annas it shall be foregone.

IV.—GENERAL.

14. (a) In the event of goods requiring to be loaded or unloaded by owners becoming liable to both demurrage and wharfage charges, the Railway Administrations may levy both demurrage and wharfage charges for such periods as the goods would be liable to such charges under these rules.

(b) If and for so long as the state of the traffic or any sudden emergency makes it necessary and after advertisement in the local newspapers, the rate of demurrage or wharfage may be increased and the free time may be curtailed.

(c) Sundays, Christmas Day and Good Friday will be reckoned in charging demurrage on all wagons made available for unloading on those days and stations will also be opened for unloading of wagons on those days so that merchants receiving wagons to their addresses which they are required to unload may do so.

This does not apply in the case of wharfage, in which connection the above days will be treated as dies non as hitherto.

(d) Explosives or dangerous goods must be removed by the consignee from the receiving station during the 12 hours of day-light after arrival; if this condition is not strictly complied with, the Railway Administrations may return the consignment to the consignor at his risk and expense.

(e) Should the wharfage or storage on actual weight exceed the demurrage charge at the wagon rate for the full time, the latter rate will be charged.

(f) The Railway Administrations have the same lien on goods for demurrage and wharfage, and, if incurred, for unloading as for freight; and these charges must be paid before the goods are removed.

No. 506-E.-19.—Mr. R. H. Aserappa, Executive Engineer, Eastern Bengal Railway, is appointed to officiate as Junior Government Inspector of Railways, Circle No. 1, with effect from the 20th February 1919 and until further orders.

Bills introduced in the Indian Legislative Council, Reports of Select Committees presented to the Council and Bills published under Rule 23.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

The following Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to make provision in special circumstances to supplement the ordinary criminal law and for the exercise of emergency powers by Government was presented to the Indian Legislative Council on the 1st March, 1919 :—

We, the undersigned, Members of the Select Committee to which the Bill to make provision in special circumstances to supplement the ordinary criminal law and for the exercise of emergency powers by Government was referred, have considered the Bill and have now the honour to submit this our Report, with the Bill as amended by us annexed thereto.

2. Before we proceed to set out the modifications of detail which we have made in the Bill, we may state at once that we do not propose to refer to the numerous amendments which were suggested in the Bill in so far as they were destructive of the general principles of the Bill. Amendments of this kind should be brought forward in Council which is the appropriate arena for their discussion.

3. An apprehension that has been widely expressed in connection with the Bill under our consideration is, that its provisions if they became law might be used or rather abused for the purpose of suppressing legitimate political activities. The Hon'ble Member in charge of the Bill has on several occasions repudiated any such intention in unequivocal terms. We, however, consider that, in order to avoid the possibility of such a view being reasonably entertained, the Bill itself should bear clearly impressed on its face the refutation of such a suggestion. With this object before us, therefore, we have made several amendments to make it clear that, as the long title states, the Bill is a Bill to cope with anarchical and revolutionary crime. These amendments will be found in the long title, the preamble, the short title, clause 8, clause 20 and clause 32, in all of which provisions, with what might possibly be considered excessive caution, we have reiterated words which, in our opinion, place the object and scope of the Bill beyond all doubt.

4. The Bill, as originally drawn, purported to make a permanent addition to the Statute-book. The decision which was announced in Council that it would be limited in duration to a period of three years from the termination of the war, which we have given effect to by the new sub-clause (3) of clause 1, has enabled us to revise certain other provisions of the Bill, notably the important clause 26. The duration of the Bill, moreover, supplies an automatic limitation in regard to the operation of certain of its provisions, a question which otherwise might have called for our anxious consideration.

5. We will now refer to the detailed amendments which we have made in the Bill in so far as they have not already been disposed of by the foregoing remarks.

6. We have omitted the definition of "offence against the State" in clause 2, as the term only occurred in clause 20, and for the reason which we give in dealing with that clause has now disappeared from the Bill.

7. Clause 3.—We have assimilated the language of this clause with that of clause 32, as we think these clauses should correspond as closely as may be in the nature of the declaration they require.

8. Clause 4.—It seems to us desirable that once an accused has been committed for trial, no order should be made under this section, and we have accordingly inserted the words "or the Court of Sessions" so as to exclude cases where commitments have been made as well to that class of Court as to the High Court. In this respect we follow the precedent of the Criminal Law Amendment Act of 1908. We think further that the accused is entitled to have notice of the particulars which the prosecution intend to prove against him, and we have amended the wording of sub-clause (3) to give effect to this view.

9. Clause 6.—The new proviso to this clause, which replaces that in the Bill as referred to us, must be regarded as a compromise between conflicting influences. On the one hand, we recognise that the importance of a local trial may in particular circumstances only be fully realised by the executive Government; on the other hand, we are averse to invoking the authority of the Governor General in Council in such a matter. The provision we suggest seems to us a reasonable via media.

10. Clause 8.—We have slightly amended this clause so as to require the prosecutor to open his case, thus following the lines of section 286 of the Code of Criminal Procedure.

11. Clause 9.—In deference to the wishes of some Members of the Committee, we have extended the period of adjournment, which is provided for by this clause, from ten to fourteen days.

12. Clause 10.—We think it desirable that a full record of the evidence should be made, but not that it should necessarily be recorded by the Court itself. The amendments made in this clause are intended to give effect to this view.

13. Clause 12.—We have amended the provisions of this clause to bring it more closely into line with the provisions of 61 and 62 Victoria, c. 86, and have included in the clause the provisions of that Act prohibiting comments by the prosecution on the failure of an accused to give evidence, and providing that if he does give evidence he shall do so from the witness-box. These provisions are probably of considerably less importance in a trial such as that which will be held under the Bill by three High Court Judges, but as their insertion is urged on us by some Members of the Committee we have deferred to their views.

14. Clause 14.—We have been pressed to amend clause 14 on the lines of section 1 (4) of the Irish Act of 1882 (45 and 46 Vict., c. 25), but after considering the matter carefully, we feel that there is no reason to depart from the proposal in the Bill, which is indeed on the same lines as the corresponding provision in the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1908.

15. Clause 15.—We think this clause as it stood in the Bill went too far, and we would only allow a conviction under it in respect of an offence against any provision of the law which is referred to in the Schedule.

16. Clause 19.—We have made the intention of the rule-making power in item 1 of this clause clearer by the insertion of the words "to complete the Court," and we have enabled rules to be made to provide for the intermediate custody of the accused.

17. Clause 20.—With the introduction of a definite reference to anarchical and revolutionary crime in this clause, it seems to us to follow that the term "Scheduled offences" must be substituted for the words "offences against the State" which formerly appeared in this clause. A comparison between the language of clause 20 and of clause 32 as they now stand will show the progressive degrees of emergency which will justify the application, respectively, of Part II and Part III of the Bill.

18. Clause 21.—We have limited the purposes for which security can be taken under this clause to the very definite cases which we now set out in the Bill. A bond to be of good behaviour would, on the analogy of section 121 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, have covered the case of any offence punishable with imprisonment, and we do not think that it is necessary to go as far as that. We have also made a small amendment at the end of this clause to shew that reports to the police are to be made at the nearest police-station.

19. Clause 23.—We have modified the language of this clause to make it clear that unnecessary force is not covered by the terms of the clause.

20. Clause 25.—This important clause received our most careful consideration. The procedure it contemplates is a fundamental basis of the recommendations of the Rowlett Committee, and any material change in the nature of the investigating authority would completely destroy the efficacy of the procedure it contemplates. We think, however, that the following modifications may be made without unduly affecting the procedure. In the first place, we think that the Government should set out all material facts in its possession whether in favour of or against the accused, and we have therefore substituted for the words “in support of its action” at the end of sub-clause (1) the words “relevant to the inquiry.” We have made a slight but very important change at the end of sub-clause (2) where we require that the investigating authority shall make such further investigation, if any, as appears to such authority to be relevant and reasonable. The only ground therefore for refusing to inquire into matters which the person whose case is under investigation desires to adduce would be that such inquiry did not appear to the investigating authority to be relevant and reasonable. This is an important change in the substance of this sub-clause. We have been compelled to reject various proposals affecting the provisos to sub-clause (2). We recognise the force and ability with which some of them were pressed, but to give effect to the amendments would be to destroy the whole procedure under this part of the Bill. We have inserted a new sub-clause (4) with the object of penalizing false statements to the investigating authority when made by persons other than the person whose case is under investigation. It was suggested to us that conclusions might be held to include the reasons for conclusions. This is clearly not the intention of the Bill, and it seems to us most undesirable that any such argument should be left open. We have, therefore, added the words “and may if it thinks fit adduce reasons in support thereof” to sub-clause (4) [now sub-clause (5)]. These words may be considered otiose, but for the reasons we have alluded to above, we recommend their insertion.

21. Clause 26.—We have amended sub-clause (1) so as to make it clear that the conclusions of the investigating authority shall be set out in the form in which they are reported by that authority. We have recast the provisions of this clause after sub-clause (2) down to the end of the clause. Our new sub-clauses provide that no order shall continue in force for a total period of more than two years as against three years in the Bill as published. It will be seen from our new sub-clause (4) that where an order is made again on the expiry of the first order, the Local Government must refer any representation on behalf of the person to whom it relates to the investigating authority and consider the report of that authority.

22. Clause 27.—We have made a small amendment here to make it clear that the penalty provided by this clause shall only be enforced on conviction by a Magistrate.

23. Clause 29.—We have amended sub-clause (1) of this clause so as to prevent any appointment of ad hoc investigating authorities. We are aware that this was not the intention of the Bill, but we think it is desirable that that should be apparent on the face of the clause.

24. Clause 30.—We have slightly expanded the provision as to Visiting Committees, and have required that rules made for their guidance should be published in the Gazette.

25. We have made a small addition in clause 31, which needs no explanation.

26. Clause 33.—We think it is desirable, and we have made it clear by an appropriate amendment, that no person confined under this Part should be confined in a place where convicted prisoners are confined. This is clearly the intention of the framers of the Rowlett Report, and it is a matter which, we think, should receive statutory recognition.

27. Clause 34.—In deference to the views of some Members of the Committee, we have reduced the normal term of detention in custody under the provisions of this clause to seven days.

28. Clauses 38 and 39.—Exception was taken to the provision in the Bill referred to us which provided that no reference to the investigating authority should be necessary where these powers were employed. We recognise, however, that there is force in the contention which was put before us by the Member in charge of the Bill, who pointed out that in most cases investigation of a very careful nature had recently taken place in regard to these persons. We think the compromise provided by our new proviso to both these clauses should meet all reasonable requirements.

29. Clause 40.—We think that the period of thirty days contemplated by the proviso to sub-clause (3) of this clause is unnecessarily long, and we have reduced it to twenty-one days.

30. The Schedule.—We were much pressed to exclude offences under 124 (a) from item 1 of the Schedule, and in deference to the wishes expressed by the non-official Members we have removed offences against this section from item 1 and inserted them in item 2 (a) of the same Schedule, which will supply the safeguard provided by that item in regard to the offences included therein. As a matter of drafting we have removed those offences which are themselves attempts from the list of offences in item 2 (a), as we think they are sufficiently provided for by item 3 of the Schedule.

31. It will be observed that all the amendments that we have made in the Bill are amendments in favour of the subject, and that, on the other hand, the main scheme of the Bill has not been materially altered. In these circumstances, the majority of the Committee do not recommend re-publication of the Bill.

Minute of Dissent.

We recognise that the Bill, as altered by the Select Committee, is not open to two objections to which it was open in its original form. Its duration has been limited to three years, and by words put into the preamble and certain clauses its application has been restricted to offences connected with anarchical and revolutionary movements. Several minor improvements have likewise been made. Still we disapprove of the policy and principles of the Bill and must reserve our right to oppose it altogether. Without prejudice to this right we proceed to make some observations and suggestions with reference to the provisions.

Clause 12.—We are not satisfied that it is desirable to introduce in this country the principle of giving an accused person the option of offering himself to be examined as a witness. One of us, Mian Muhammad Shafi, however, thinks it an advantage and approves of its introduction. But we are all agreed that, if it is introduced, a safeguard should be provided in addition to the one embodied in sub-clause (3). It should be something to this effect: "Nor shall the court make any inference adverse to the accused from such failure on his part."

Clause 14.—We cannot agree that, in the case of a difference of opinion among the judges, the opinion of the majority should prevail so as to result in a conviction. Following the example of the Irish Crimes Act, we would make conviction dependent on the unanimous opinion of the judges.

Clause 15.—It appears to us necessary to take care that the special procedure of this part of the Bill is not used for the trial of scheduled offences generally. We would insert a proviso to clause 15 somewhat as follows: "Provided that, when the court convicts a person, whether of the offence with which he was charged or of another, it shall record a finding that such offence is connected with an anarchical or revolutionary movement."

Clause 17.—This clause takes away the right of appeal to a High Court. We think it should be provided, on the contrary, that, on the analogy of the Irish Crimes Act, an appeal would lie in such cases to a full bench of the High Court consisting of not less than five judges.

Clause 21.—It is part of our general objection to the Bill that no restrictions should be imposed on the personal liberty of a citizen except as the result of a conviction in a court of law. Excepting Part I, the rest of the Bill gives sanction to such restrictions by mere executive order. Assuming, however, that it is necessary to give the executive government such extraordinary power, we indicate below certain points on which we differ from the majority report.

We suggest that, before passing an interim order under clause 21 against any person, the Local Government should be required to place all the materials relating to his case before a judicial officer not below the rank of a district and sessions judge and take his opinion thereon.

Clause 25.—Sub-clause (2) makes it obligatory on the investigating authority to hold the inquiry in camera. We think it sufficient to provide for the inquiry being in camera if and when the investigating authority thinks it necessary.

We would provide that this authority shall not only hear any explanation, but take any evidence that the person in question may have to offer.

The last proviso to this sub-clause (2) denies the person in question the right of appearing or being represented by pleader. We are, on the contrary, of opinion that such right should be expressly conceded.

Sub-clause (3) says that the investigating authority shall not be bound to observe the rules of the law of evidence. We would provide instead that such authority shall be bound, as far as possible, to observe those rules.

Clause 26.—We do not consider it sufficient protection that a person against whom restrictive orders are renewed should be allowed after such renewal to make a representation to be placed before the investigating authority, as is provided in sub-clause (4). We are of opinion that no orders under clause 21 should be extended for a further period without the case being referred to the investigating authority a second time and the person in question being allowed, more or less in accordance with the procedure under clause 25, an opportunity of being heard.

Clause 29.—We consider that the investigating authority should consist of two persons who have held judicial office not inferior to that of a district and sessions judge and one non-official Indian.

Clause 33.—We recommend that, before orders are passed against any person under this clause, the same procedure be adopted as we have recommended under clause 21; i.e., the materials of the case should be referred for opinion to a judicial officer not below the rank of a district and sessions judge.

Clause 36.—We would of course modify the procedure under this clause on the same lines as the procedure under clauses 25 and 26.

In conclusion we strongly recommend that, in view of the substantial changes suggested above and in view of the fact that the Bill embodies principles wholly at variance with the principles of the ordinary criminal law, the Bill be republished and referred for opinion to the Local Governments and the High Courts and important public bodies and individuals.

Minute of Dissent.

When the Bill was first introduced it was contemplated by Government to lay down a permanent legislation in the country which, it was feared, would to a great extent restrict the liberty of the people. On the opposition of the peoples' representatives in the Imperial Legislative Council, Government subsequently declared the intention to introduce it only as a temporary measure and thus a considerable portion of its harmful nature was reduced.

The Bill as it has now emerged out of the Select Committee is a decided improvement on the one originally introduced in the Council. In the original draft of the Bill the Preamble was in general terms, but by the addition of the words "for the purpose of dealing with anarchical and revolutionary movements" in the Preamble of the Bill as amended by the Select Committee its scope has been much limited. Several other improvements have likewise been made and they, coupled with the words added in the Preamble mentioned above, have greatly removed its objectionable character.

I am however to dissent on the following points from the majority report:—

12. (3) Some words to the following effect should be added to the sub-clause 'nor shall the Court make any inference adverse to the accused from such failure on his part.'

29. (2) Of the three persons constituting the investigating authority two should be persons who have held judicial office not inferior to that of a District and Sessions Judge.

Now as the Bill has given rise to considerable nervous agitation in the country and opposition meetings are being held in every quarter and as certain vital changes have been introduced in it by the amendments made by the Select Committee whereby its objectionable character has been much reduced if not removed almost, it will be proper for Government to publish the Bill again in the official gazettes.

BILL No. 2 OF 1919.

[BILL AS AMENDED BY THE SELECT COMMITTEE.]

[Words printed in italics indicate the amendments suggested by the Select Committee.]

A Bill to cope with anarchical and revolutionary crime.

WHEREAS it is expedient to make provision that the ordinary criminal law should be supplemented and emergency powers should be exercisable by the Government for the purpose of dealing with anarchical and revolutionary movements;

And whereas the previous approval of the Secretary of State in Council has been accorded to the making of this law; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

1. (1) This Act may be called the Anarchical and Revolutionary Crimes Act, 191;

(2) It extends to the whole of British India; and

(3) It shall continue in force for three years from the date of the termination of the present war.

2. (1) In this Act, unless there is anything repugnant in the subject or context,—

‘Chief Justice’ means the Judge of highest rank in a High Court;

‘The Code’ means the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898,

‘High Court’ means the highest Court of criminal appeal or revision for any local area;

‘Scheduled offence’ means any offence specified in the Schedule.

(2) All words and expressions used in this Act and defined in the Code, and not hereinbefore defined, shall be deemed to have the meanings respectively attributed to them in the Code.

PART I.

3. If the Governor General in Council is satisfied that, in the whole or any part of British India, anarchical or revolutionary movements are being promoted, and that scheduled offences in connection with such movements are prevalent to such an extent that it is expedient in the interests of the public safety to provide for the speedy trial of such offences, he may, by notification in the Gazette of India, make a declaration to that effect, and thereupon the provisions of this Part shall come into force in the area specified in the notification.

4. (1) Where the Local Government is of opinion that the trial of any person accused of a scheduled offence should be held in accordance with the provisions of this Part, it may order any officer of Government to prefer a written information to the Chief Justice against such person.

(2) No order under sub-section (1) shall be made in respect of, or be deemed to include, any person who has been committed under the Code for trial before a High Court, or a Court of Session but, save as aforesaid, an order under that sub-section may be made in respect of any scheduled offence whether such offence was committed before or after the issue of the notification under section 3.

(3) The information shall state the offence charged and so far as known the name, place of residence, and occupation of the accused, and the time and place when and where the offence is alleged to have been committed and all particulars within the knowledge of the prosecution of what is intended to be proved against the accused.

(4) The Chief Justice may by order require any information to be amended so as to supply further particulars of the offence charged to the accused, and shall direct a copy of the information or the amended information, as the case may be, to be served upon the accused in such manner as the Chief Justice may direct.

5. Upon such service being effected, and on application duly made to him, the Chief Justice shall nominate three of the High Court Judges (hereinafter referred to as the Court) for the trial of the information, and shall fix a date for the commencement of the trial:

Provided that, when the total number of Judges of the High Court does not exceed three, the Chief Justice shall nominate not more than two such Judges, and shall complete the Court by the nomination of one or, if necessary, two persons of either of the following classes, namely:—

(a) persons who have served as permanent Judges of the High Court; or

(b) with the consent of the Chief Justice of another High Court, persons who are Judges of that High Court.

6. The Court may sit for the whole or any part of a trial at such place or places in the province as it may consider desirable:

Provided that if the Advocate-General certifies to the Court that it is in his opinion necessary in the interests of justice that the whole or any part of a trial shall be held at some place other than the usual place of sitting of the High Court, the Court shall, after hearing the accused, make an order to that effect, unless for reasons to be recorded in writing it thinks fit to make any other order. It shall not be necessary for the certificate of the Advocate-General to be supported by any affidavit, nor shall he be required to state the grounds upon which such certificate was given.

7. The provisions of the Code shall apply to Application of Code of Criminal Procedure proceedings under this Part, in so far as they are not subject to this Part. inconsistent with the provisions therein contained, and such proceedings shall be deemed to be proceedings under the Code, and the Court shall have all the powers conferred by the Code on a Court of Session exercising original jurisdiction.

8. (1) The trial shall be commenced by the Trial. reading of the information, and thereafter the prosecutor shall state shortly by what evidence he expects to prove the guilt of the accused.

(2) The Court shall then, subject to the provisions of this Part, in trying the accused, follow the procedure prescribed by the Code for the trial of warrant cases by Magistrates.

9. If a charge is framed, the accused shall be entitled to ask for an Adjournment. adjournment for fourteen days, or any less period that he may specify, and the Court shall comply with his request, but subject to the adjournment provided for by this section, the Court shall not be bound to adjourn any trial for any purpose, unless such adjournment is in its opinion necessary in the interests of justice.

10. The Court shall cause the evidence of each witness who is examined to be recorded in full in such manner as the Court may direct. Record of evidence.

11. The Court, if it is of opinion that such a Prohibition or restriction of publication of reports of trial. course is necessary in the public interest or for the protection of a witness, may prohibit or restrict in such way as it may direct the publication or disclosure of its proceedings or any part of its proceedings.

12. (1) No questions shall be put by the Court to the accused in the course of a trial under this Part until the close of the case for the prosecution. Thereafter, and before the accused enters on his defence, the Court shall inform the accused that he is entitled if he so desires to give evidence on oath on his own behalf, and shall at the same time inform him that if he does so, he will be liable to cross-examination. Unless the accused then states that he desires to give evidence on oath, the Court may at any time thereafter question the accused generally on the case in accordance with the provisions of section 342 of the Code. Examination of accused.

(2) If when so called upon, the accused states that he desires to give evidence on oath, the Court shall not at any subsequent stage put any question to him :

Provided that if the accused does not so give evidence, then, after the witnesses for the defence have been examined, the Court may question the accused generally on the case in accordance with the provisions of the said section.

(3) The failure of the accused to give evidence on oath shall not be made the subject of any comment by the prosecution.

(4) If the accused gives evidence on oath, the following rules shall be observed, namely :—

(a) He may be asked any question in cross-examination notwithstanding that it would tend to criminate him as to the offence charged.

(b) He shall not be asked, and if asked shall not be required to answer, any question tending to show that he has committed or been convicted of, or has been charged with, any offence other than that with which he is then charged, or has a bad character, unless—

(i) proof that he has committed or been convicted of such other offence is admissible evidence to show that he is guilty of the offence with which he is then charged, or

(ii) witnesses for the prosecution have been cross-examined with a view to establish his own good character, or he has given evidence of his good character, or the nature or the conduct of the defence is such as to involve imputations on the character of the witnesses for the prosecution, or

(iii) he has given evidence against any other person charged with the same offence.

(c) Unless otherwise ordered by the Court, he shall give his evidence from the witness-box or other place from which the other witnesses give their evidence.

13. If the accused or any one of the accused calls and examines any witness, the right of final reply shall lie with the prosecution, but in all other cases with the accused :

Provided that the examination of an accused as a witness shall not of itself confer the right of final reply on the prosecution.

14. In the event of any difference of opinion between the members of the Court, the opinion of the majority shall prevail. Differences of opinion.

15. If at any trial under this Part it is proved that the accused has committed an offence against any provision of the law which is referred to in the Schedule, the Court may convict the accused of that offence although he was not charged with it. Conviction for offence referred to in schedule.

16. The Court may pass upon any person convicted by it any sentence authorised by law for the punishment of the offence of which such person is convicted, and no order of confirmation shall be necessary in the case of any sentence passed by it. Sentence.

17. The judgment of the Court shall be final and conclusive and, notwithstanding the provisions of the Code or of any other law for the time being in force, or of anything having the force of law by whatsoever authority made or done, there shall be no appeal from any order or sentence of the Court, and no High Court shall have authority to revise any such order or sentence or to transfer any case from such Court, or to make any order under section 491 of the Code or have any jurisdiction of any kind in respect of any proceedings under this Part : Exclusion of interference of other criminal Courts.

Provided that nothing in this section shall be deemed to affect the powers of the Governor General in Council or of the Local Government to make orders under section 401 or 402 of the Code in respect of any person sentenced by the Court.

18. (1) Notwithstanding anything to the contrary contained in the Indian Evidence Act, 1872, where—Special rules of evidence.

I of 1872

(a) the statement of any person has been recorded by a Magistrate, and such statement has been read over and explained to the person making it and has been signed by him, or

(b) the statement of any person has been recorded by the Court, but such person has not been cross-examined, such statement may be admitted in evidence by the Court if the person making the same is dead or cannot be found or is incapable of giving evidence, and it is established to the satisfaction of the Court that such death, disappearance or incapacity has been caused in the interests of the accused.

(2) Depositions recorded under section 512 of the Code may, in the circumstances specified in that section, be given in evidence at the trial of an accused under this Part.

19. The Chief Justice may from time to time make rules providing for—

(1) the appointment and powers of a President of the Court, and the procedure to be adopted to complete the Court in the event of any Judge of the Court being prevented from attending throughout the trial of an accused; and

(2) any matters (including the intermediate custody of the accused) which appear to him necessary for carrying into effect or supplementing the provisions of this Part preliminary or ancillary to trials.

PART II.

20. If the Governor General in Council is satisfied that anarchical or revolutionary movements which are, in his opinion, likely to lead to the commission of scheduled offences are being extensively promoted in the whole or any part of British India, he may, by notification in the Gazette of India, make a declaration to that effect, and thereupon the provisions of this Part shall come into force in the area specified in the notification.

21. (1) Where, in the opinion of the Local Government, there are reasonable grounds for believing that any person is or has been actively concerned in such area in any movement of the nature referred to in section 20, the Local Government may, by order in writing containing a declaration to that effect, give all or any of the following directions, namely: that such person—

(a) shall, within such period as may be specified in the order, execute a bond with or without sureties undertaking, for such period not exceeding one year as may be so specified, that he will not commit, or attempt or conspire to commit, or abet the commission of, any offence against any provision of the law which is referred to in the Schedule;

(b) shall notify his residence and any change of residence to such authority as may be so specified;

(c) shall remain or reside in any area in British India so specified; provided that, if the area so specified is outside the province, the concurrence of the Local Government of that area to the making of the order shall first have been obtained;

(d) shall abstain from any act so specified which, in the opinion of the Local Government, is calculated to disturb the public peace or is prejudicial to the public safety; and

(e) shall report himself to the officer in charge of the police-station nearest to his residence at such periods as may be so specified.

(2) Any order under clauses (b) to (e) may also be made to take effect upon default by the person concerned in complying with an order under clause (a).

22. An order made under section 21 shall be served on the person in respect of whom it is made in the manner provided in the Code for service of summons, and upon such service such person shall be deemed to have due notice thereof.

23. The Local Government and every officer of Government to whom a copy of any order made under section 21 may be directed by, or under the general or special authority of, the Local Government, may use all means necessary to enforce compliance with the same.

24. An order made under section 21 shall only continue in force for a period of one month, unless it is extended by the Local Government as hereinafter provided in this Part.

25. (1) When the Local Government makes an order under section 21, such Government shall, as soon as may be, forward to the investigating authority to be constituted under this Act a concise statement in writing setting forth plainly the grounds on which the Government considered it necessary that the order should be made, and shall lay before the investigating authority all material facts and circumstances in its possession relevant to the inquiry.

(2) The investigating authority shall then hold an inquiry en camera for the purpose of ascertaining what, in its opinion, having regard to the facts and circumstances adduced by the Government, appears against the person in respect of whom the order has been made. Such authority shall in every case allow the person in question a reasonable opportunity of appearing before it at some stage in its proceedings and shall, if he so appears, explain to him the nature of the charge made against him and shall hear any explanation he may have to offer, and shall make such further investigation (if any) as appears to such authority to be relevant and reasonable :

Provided that the investigating authority shall not disclose to the person whose case is before it any fact the communication of which might endanger the public safety or the safety of any individual :

Provided further that nothing in this sub-section shall be deemed to entitle the person in question to appear or to be represented before the investigating authority by pleader, nor shall the Local Government be so entitled.

(3) Subject to the provisions of sub-section (2) the inquiry shall be conducted in such manner as the investigating authority considers best suited to elicit the facts of the case; and in making the inquiry, such authority shall not be bound to observe the rules of the law of evidence.

(4) Any statement made to an investigating authority by any person other than the person whose case is under investigation shall be deemed to be information given to a public servant within the meaning of section 182 of the Indian Penal Code.

(5) On the completion of the inquiry, the investigating authority shall report in writing to the Local Government the conclusions at which it has arrived, and may, if it thinks fit, adduce reasons in support thereof.

(6) If the investigating authority has not completed the inquiry within the period for which the duration of the order is limited by section 24, such authority may recommend to the Local Government that the period of duration of the order shall be extended for such period as it may consider necessary, and on such a recommendation, the Local Government may extend the duration of the order accordingly.

26. (1) On receipt of the report of the investigating authority, the Local Government may discharge the order made under section 21, or may make any order which is authorised by that section :

Provided that—

(a) any order so made shall recite the conclusions of the investigating authority as reported by that authority; and

(b) a copy of such order shall be furnished to the person in respect of whom it is made.

(2) No order made under sub-section (1) shall continue in force for more than one year from the date on which it was made.

(3) On the expiry of an order made under sub-section (1), the Local Government may, if it is satisfied that such a course is necessary in the interests of the public safety, again make in respect of the person to whom such order related any order which is authorised by section 21 :

Provided that no order made under this sub-section shall continue in force for more than a year from the date on which it was made.

(4) Where an order is made under sub-section (3), a copy of the order shall be furnished to the person in respect of whom it is made, who may submit to the Local Government a representation on his own behalf in regard to any such order.

Any such representation shall be forwarded by the Local Government to the investigating authority for investigation and report, and the investigating authority shall report thereon, and the Local Government shall consider the report of such authority.

(5) Any order made under this section may at any time be discharged or may be altered by the substitution of any other order authorised by section 21 :

Provided that no such alteration shall have the effect of prolonging the period for which such order would have been in force.

(6) The provisions of section 23 shall apply to the enforcement of orders made under this section.

2. If any person fails to comply with, or attempts to evade, any order (other than an order to furnish security) made under the provisions of section 21 or section 26, he shall on conviction by a Magistrate be punishable with imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both.

28. The provisions of section 514 of the Code shall apply to bonds executed under the provisions of this Part, with this modification that the powers conferred by that section on the Court shall be exercisable by any District Magistrate or Chief Presidency Magistrate, on application made on behalf of the Local Government.

29. (1) As soon as may be after a notification has been issued bringing this Part into force, the Local Government shall appoint one or more investigating authorities for the purposes of this Part and may appoint additional investigating authorities when necessary.

(2) Every investigating authority shall be appointed by order in writing, and shall consist of three persons, of whom one shall be a person having held judicial office not inferior to that of a District and Sessions Judge, and one shall be a person not in the service of the Crown in India.

(3) The Local Government may by like order appoint persons to fill casual vacancies occurring by reason of death, resignation of office or otherwise on any investigating authority, but in so doing shall observe the provisions of sub-section (2).

30. (1) The Local Government shall by order in writing appoint such persons as it thinks fit to be Visiting Committees to report upon the welfare and treatment of persons under restraint under this Part, and shall by rules prescribe the functions which these Committees shall exercise :

Provided that, in making such rules, provision shall be made for periodical visits to persons under restraint under the provisions of this Part :

Provided further that a person in respect of whom an order has been made under section 21 or section 26 requiring him to abstain from any specified act or to report himself to the police shall not be deemed to be under restraint for the purposes of this section.

(2) All rules made under sub-section (1) shall be published in the local official Gazette, and on such publication shall have effect as if enacted in this Part.

31. (1) The Local Government may make rules prescribing the authority before whom and the manner in which bonds under this Part shall be executed and providing for the procedure to be followed regarding the notification of residence and reports to the police by persons in respect of whom orders have been made under section 21 or section 26.

(2) All rules made under sub-section (1) shall be published in the local official Gazette, and on such publication shall have effect as if enacted in this Part.

PART III.

32. If the Governor General in Council is satisfied that in the whole or any part of British India anarchical or revolutionary movements are being promoted and that scheduled offences in connection with such movements are prevalent to such an extent as to endanger the public safety, he may, by notification in the Gazette of India, make a declaration to that effect, and thereupon the provisions of this Part shall come into force in the area specified in the notification.

33. (1) Where, in the opinion of the Local Government, there are reasonable grounds for believing that any person has been or is concerned in such area in any scheduled offence, the Local Government may make in respect of such person any order authorised by section 21, and may further by order in writing direct—

(a) the arrest of any such person without warrant;

(b) the confinement of any such person in such place and under such conditions and restrictions as it may specify:

Provided that no such person shall be confined in that part of a prison or other place which is used for the confinement of convicted criminal prisoners as defined in the Prisons Act, 1894; and

(c) the search of any place specified in the order which, in the opinion of the Local Government, has been, is being, or is about to be, used by any such person for any purpose prejudicial to the public safety.

(2) The arrest of any person in pursuance of an order under clause (a) of sub-section (1) may be effected at any place where he may be found by any police-officer or by any other officer of Government to whom the order may be directed.

(3) An order for confinement under clause (b) or for search under clause (c) of sub-section (1) may be carried out by any officer of Government to whom the order may be directed, and such officer may use all means necessary to enforce the same.

34. Any person making an arrest in pursuance of an order under clause (a) of section 33 (1) shall forthwith report the fact to the Local Government and, pending receipt of the orders of the Local Government, may by order in writing commit any person so arrested to such custody as the Local Government may by general or special order specify in this behalf:

Provided that no person shall be detained in such custody for a period exceeding seven days unless the Local Government so directs, and in no case shall such detention exceed fifteen days.

35. An order for the search of any place issued under the provisions of clause (c) of section 33 (1) shall be deemed to be a search warrant issued by the District Magistrate having jurisdiction in the place specified therein, and shall be sufficient authority for the seizure of anything found in such place which the person executing the order has reason to believe is being used, or is likely to be used for any purpose prejudicial to the public safety, and the provisions of the Code, so far as they can be made applicable, shall apply to searches made under the authority of any such order and to the disposal of any property seized in any such search.

36. Where an order (other than an order for arrest or search) has been made under section 33, the provisions of sections 22 to 26 shall apply in the same way as if the order were an order made under section 21, save that, on receipt of the report of the investigating authority, the Local Government may, subject to the conditions prescribed by section 20, make any order which is authorized by section 33, and sections 22 to 26 and 28 to 31 shall be deemed to be included in this Part.

37. If any person fails to comply with, or attempts to evade, any order made under section 33 or section 36 other than an order to furnish security, he shall be punishable with imprisonment for a term which may extend to one year, or with fine, or with both.

PART IV.

38. (1) On the expiration of the Defence of India (Criminal Law Amendment) Act, 1915, every person in respect of whom an order under rule 3 of the Defence of India (Consolidation) Rules, 1915, was in force immediately before the expiration of that Act, and who has in the opinion of the Local Government been concerned in any scheduled offence, or who is on such expiration in confinement in accordance with the provisions of the Bengal State Prisoners Regulation, 1818, shall be deemed to be a person resident in an area in which a notification under section 32 is in force, and the provisions of Part III shall apply to every such person accordingly.

Provided that within one month from the expiration of the Defence of India (Criminal Law Amendment) Act, 1915, the Local Government may make any order of restraint which is authorised by that Part in respect of any such person, and if such an order is so made it shall be deemed to be an order made under section 26 (3) as made applicable by section 36, and the provisions of that Part regarding such an order shall apply accordingly.

(2) On the expiration of the Ingress into V of 1914. India Ordinance, 1914, as continued in force by the Emergency Legislation Continuance Act, 1 of 1916. 1916, any person in respect of whom an order was

II of 1911. in force immediately before such expiration under section 2 of that Ordinance read with clause (b) or clause (c) of sub-section (2) of section 3 of the Foreigners Ordinance, 1914, shall be deemed to be a person resident in an area in which a notification under section 20 is in force, and the provisions of Part II shall apply to every such person accordingly.

Provided that within one month from the expiration of the Ingress into India Ordinance, 1914, the Local Government may make any order of restraint which is authorised by that Part in respect of any such person, and if such an order is so made it shall be deemed to be an order made under section 26 (3), and the provisions of that Part regarding such an order shall apply accordingly.

PART V.

39. When a notification issued under section 3 or section 20 or section 32 is cancelled, such cancellation shall not affect any trial, investigation or order commenced or made under this Act, and such trial, investigation or order may be continued or enforced, and on the completion of any such investigation, any order which might otherwise have been made may be made and enforced, as if such notification had not been cancelled.

40. (1) An order made under Part II or Part III, directing a person to remain or reside in any area in British India outside the area in which such Part is in force, shall be as valid, and enforceable in like manner, as if such Part were in force throughout British India.

(2) An order made under clause (a) of section 33 (1) for the arrest of any person may be executed at any place in British India outside the area in which Part III is in force, and the same procedure shall be followed as if Part III was in force throughout British India :

Provided that, if the arrest is made outside the province of the Local Government which made the order, the report required by section 34 shall be made to that Local Government, and the period of detention limited by the proviso to that section shall be extended to twenty-one days.

41. No order under this Act shall be called in question in any Court, and no suit or prosecution or other legal proceeding shall lie against any person for anything which is in good faith done or intended to be done under this Act.

42. All powers given by this Act shall be in addition to, and not in derogation of, any other powers conferred by or under any enactment, and all such powers may be exercised in the same manner and by the same authority as if this Act had not been passed.

THE SCHEDULE.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

The following Bill was introduced in the Indian Legislative Council on the 1st March 1919 :—

No. 9 OF 1919.

A Bill further to amend the Indian Paper Currency (Amendment) Act, 1917.

WHEREAS it is expedient further to amend the Indian Paper Currency (Amendment) Act, 1917; XIX of 1917. It is hereby enacted as follows :—

1. This Act may be called the Indian Paper Currency (Amendment) Act, 1919.
Short title.
2. In section 2 of the Indian Paper Currency (Amendment) Act, 1917, XIX of 1917. Amendment of section 2, Act XIX of 1917. for the words "six hundred and sixty millions," the words "eight hundred millions" shall be substituted.
3. The Indian Paper Currency (Amendment) Act, 1918, and the Indian Paper Currency (Amendment) Ordinance, 1918, are hereby repealed.
Repeal of Act VI of 1918, and Ordinance III of 1918.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

By an Ordinance promulgated on the 7th of December, 1918, power was taken to increase the maximum limit for the issue of currency notes against British Treasury Bills by fourteen crores of rupees to eighty crores of rupees. The present Bill provides for the continuance of the provisions of that Ordinance for the period of the war and for six months thereafter.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.
LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT

The following Bill was introduced in the Indian Legislative Council on the 1st March, 1919 :—

No. 10 OF 1919.

A Bill to extend the operation of the Motor Spirit (Duties) Act, 1917.

WHEREAS it is expedient to extend the operation of the Motor Spirit (Duties) Act, 1917 ; It is hereby enacted as follows :—

1. This Act may be called the Motor Spirit (Duties) Amendment Act, 191 .
Short title.
2. In section 1 of the Motor Spirit (Duties) Act, 1917, the word " and " at the end of sub-section (2) and the whole of sub-section (3) shall be omitted.
Amendment of section 1 of Act II of 1917.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

Act II of 1917 passed in February of that year provided for the imposition and levy of an excise and customs duty of six annas a gallon on motor spirit. The duty was not imposed for the purpose of raising revenue but as a war measure with the object of restricting consumption ; the term of the Act was therefore restricted to the continuance of the present war and a period of six months thereafter. The tax, though it originated in administrative necessities, has become a useful source of revenue, and the Government of India consider that it cannot conveniently be rescinded at a time when it is necessary to impose additional taxation. It is desirable, therefore, in view of the uncertainty of the exact date on which the Motor Spirit (Duties) Act of 1917 would otherwise automatically lapse, to undertake legislation for its continuance. It is proposed by the present Bill to effect this by removing from Act II of 1917 the duration clause.

3. Rs. 5,000 or upwards, but less than Rs. 10,000. Six pies in the rupee.

4. Rs. 10,000 or upwards, but less than Rs. 25,000. Three pies in the rupee."

6. In the said Act, sub-section (3) of section 17, Chapter III, and in section 35 the words "or in a notice or order under section 30" are hereby repealed :

Provided that such repeal shall not affect the liability of any person to pay any sum due from him or any existing right of refund under the said Act.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

THIS Bill proposes to amend the Indian Income-tax Act, 1918 (Act VII of 1918), by giving relief to persons with small incomes who have at the present time been seriously affected by the great rise in prices in recent years. With this object it is proposed to raise the minimum limit of taxable incomes from Rs. 1,000 to Rs. 2,000 per annum, with effect from the 1st April, 1919.

The exemption of incomes below Rs. 2,000 from tax will obviate the necessity for any summary assessment procedure. Clause 6 of the Bill, therefore, repeals the sections of the Income-tax Act, 1918, which deal with summary assessment.

Proceedings of the Indian Legislative Council.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE INDIAN LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL ASSEMBLED UNDER THE PROVISIONS OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA ACT, 1915.
(5 & 6 Geo. V, Ch. 61.)

The Council met at the Council Chamber, Imperial Secretariat, Delhi, on Wednesday, the 26th February, 1919.

PRESENT :

The Hon'ble SIR GEORGE LOWNDES, K.C.S.I., K.C., Vice-President, presiding, and 43 Members, of whom 36 were Additional Members.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

The Hon'ble Sir Dinshaw Wacha asked :—

11 A.M.

1. "(a) Is it a fact that both the Prime Minister of England and the President of the United States have made a public declaration of policy that it is the duty of the State to provide suitable sanitary dwelling houses for the working classes?"

Dwelling houses for the working classes in British India.

(b) If the answer be in the affirmative, will Government make a similar pronouncement in reference to the housing of the working classes in British India?

(c) Is it a fact that the mortality among the working classes in British India caused by the insanitary conditions of the tenements in which they live, is high?

(d) Have any measures been hitherto taken by Government to provide sanitary dwelling houses for workmen employed in their service? If so, what are those measures and where have they been taken?

The Hon'ble Sir C. Sankaran Nair replied :—

"(a) The Government of India are not aware whether the Prime Minister of England and the President of the United States have made any definite public declaration of policy that it is the duty of the State to provide suitable sanitary dwelling houses for the working classes. Mr. Lloyd George, however, has laid considerable stress upon the housing problem as one of the most urgent needs, especially in a speech delivered at Manchester and in a declaration of policy at a meeting of his liberal supporters, both of which are reported in the 'Times' of 12th September. He is also reported in the papers to have stated in an electioneering speech at the Central Hall, Westminster, that housing must be a national task; see the 'Times' of November, the 18th, 1918. Reuter's Government and Press telegrams of the 13th February, 1919, contain a summary of a speech by Mr. Lloyd George in which he is reported to have said that it was Government's business to remove certain grievances, including bad and insufficient housing, and that Government was introducing Bills concerning housing, health, etc. Whether this amounts to the adoption of a policy of provision by the State of houses for the working classes will be made clearer when the text of this speech is received. The Hon'ble Member's attention is invited to the declarations made in the House of Commons by Mr. Hayes Fisher on the 2nd of May, 1918 and in October, 1918. On the former occasion Mr. Hayes Fisher explained the policy of assistance which it is proposed to make to the local authorities and he said, 'I for one cannot recommend the State to undertake for the first time in its history the obligation of housing the working classes or indeed of housing the community.' He also stated that the Government had come to the conclusion that so far as starting housing after the war was concerned, so far as setting the machinery in motion was concerned, there was no other course open to it except to enter into partnership with the local authorities.

(b) As the answer to the first part is not in the affirmative, this question does not properly arise. But it appears that the scheme under consideration in England is the grant of liberal assistance to the local authorities, public utility societies and possibly private enterprise. It may be mentioned in this connection that the Government of India have agreed to place at the disposal of the Government of Bombay a sum of five lakhs of rupees to meet the more pressing demands for assistance from such societies as are ready to carry out approved schemes of construction. The Government of India have also expressed their willingness to permit of such advances being made at a lower rate of interest than $5\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. per annum in special cases in which the Local Government consider that there are strong grounds for making a further concession in this respect. The Industrial Commission have made certain recommendations regarding the housing of industrial labour; see especially paragraphs 239 and 253 of their report and Appendix L thereto. It is understood that a scheme is under consideration between the Government of Bombay and the Bombay Mill Owners' Association.

(c) Separate statistics dealing with mortality among the working classes are not available, and even were they made available would probably be misleading as regards the present problem. It is, however, obvious that the unsatisfactory conditions in which some of the labour in India is housed must be detrimental to health and be a cause of a higher death rate than would pertain, were such conditions satisfactory. Attention, however, is invited to the powers possessed by municipalities in respect of insanitary dwellings.

(d) State Railway Administrations provide houses or tenements for a considerable portion of their employés, and the provision of accommodation for workshop employés is extending. Quarters are provided for constables and also for menials and other low-paid employés where local conditions render assistance in this form desirable or necessary. In Bombay, the construction of quarters for postmen has been taken in hand. In the case of quarters required for workmen employed on construction works, there are definite rules in the Public Works Code for guidance in providing suitable shelter, food, water and conservancy."

The Hon'ble Sir Dinshaw Wacha asked :—

2. "Have Government come to any decision in the matter of improving currency notes, regarding which commercial opinion was consulted in 1917?"

Improvement of currency
notes.

[26TH FEBRUARY, 1919.] [Sir James Meston ; Sir Dinshaw Wacha ; Sir Thomas Holland.]

The Hon'ble Sir James Meston replied :—

"In view of the abnormal currency conditions, it was decided to ~~take~~ no further action regarding the improvement of currency notes until the end of the war. The matter, however, is now being considered in the light of the opinions received from the Local Governments and commercial bodies, and of the additional experience which has been gained from the issue of notes of new denominations in India and elsewhere during the war."

The Hon'ble Sir Dinshaw Wacha asked :—

3. "Do Government propose to supersede the existing notes of 1 Rupee and $2\frac{1}{2}$ Rupees by notes of the same denomination, but of better class of tougher paper and of a somewhat larger size? If so, when?"

Supersession of existing notes of Rs. 1 and Rs. $2\frac{1}{2}$.

The Hon'ble Sir James Meston replied :—

"It is not proposed to make any change in the size or design of R1 and R2-8 notes until the question of the design and the size of currency notes generally has been settled. Steps are being taken to improve the quality of the paper."

The Hon'ble Sir Dinshaw Wacha asked :—

4. "What are the latest figures for (a) the additions during the current year to the note and rupee circulation, respectively, and (b) the circulation of the R1 and R2-8 notes?"

Circulation of Rs. 1 and Rs. 2-8 notes during the current year.

The Hon'ble Sir James Meston replied :—

"The addition to the gross circulation of currency notes, that is inclusive of notes held in Government Treasuries and head offices of Presidency Banks, amounted from the 1st April, 1918 to the 31st January, 1919 to R51 $\frac{1}{2}$ crores; the addition to the rupee circulation in the same period was R41 crores. The active circulation of notes, i.e., the circulation with the public, rose by R51 crores between the 1st April and the 31st December, 1918.

"The value of notes for R1 and R2 $\frac{1}{2}$ in circulation on the 31st December last, was R9 and R2 crores, respectively."

The Hon'ble Sir Dinshaw Wacha asked :—

5. "Will Government be pleased to state for the latest date for which information is available the amount of silver acquired under the Pittman Act which has been already (a) shipped and (b) received in India?"

Silver acquired under the Pittman Act.

The Hon'ble Sir James Meston replied :—

"Of the 200 million fine ounces of silver to be acquired under the Pittman Act, 141 million fine ounces have been shipped up to date, of which 118 $\frac{1}{2}$ million fine ounces have been actually received in India. A further 21 $\frac{1}{2}$ million fine ounces are expected to be shipped very shortly."

The Hon'ble Sir Dinshaw Wacha asked :—

6. "Will Government consider the question of preparing a preliminary issue of the census of production so far as it may be practicable?"

Census of production.

The Hon'ble Sir Thomas Holland replied :—

"I presume the Hon'ble Member is referring to industrial production, a subject on which he asked a question in this Council on the 28th February, 1917. He was then informed that the Department of Statistics already publishes yearly figures showing the production of coal, of yarn and woven goods in cotton mills, of breweries, paper mills, woollen mills, and of the principal minerals, and that it also publishes a yearly report on the production of tea, that with regard to a number of industries, it would probably be impossible to get any approximate figures of production, nor could a general census of production be undertaken without prior consultation with Local Governments and commercial opinion. The Government of India have not since then proceeded any further with this question, and I can only add that it seems doubtful whether a census of production covering a number of industries, of which statistics of production are not at present maintained, would, if undertaken now, produce any really valuable results. The position will no doubt be improved when well-equipped Departments of Industries are organised throughout the provinces, and the question will be reconsidered when there has been time to give effect to the main proposals of the Industrial Commission. The Hon'ble Member will no doubt recollect the remarks on this subject contained in paragraph 186 of the Commission's report."

[Sir Thomas Holland ; Sir Dinshaw Wacha ; Sir James Meston ; Sir Fazulbhoy Currimbhoy.] [26TH FEBRUARY, 1919.]

The Hon'ble Sir Dinshaw Wacha asked :—

Metallic portion of the Paper Currency
Reserve.

7. "What is the present percentage borne by the metallic portion of the Paper Currency Reserve to the total circulation? How does this percentage compare with that in Great Britain, France, Japan, and the United States, respectively?"

The Hon'ble Sir James Meston replied :—

"A statement* giving the information required is laid on the table."

The Hon'ble Sir Dinshaw Wacha asked :—

Investment of the Paper Currency
Reserve.

8. "How much of the 14 crores additional investment of the Paper Currency Reserve allowed by the most recent Ordinance has already been made? In what securities has this investment been made?"

The Hon'ble Sir James Meston replied :—

"Out of the 14 crores additional investment of the Paper Currency Reserve allowed under Ordinance III of 1918, ₹12½ crores only have been invested up to date, viz., ₹6½ crores in British Treasury Bills and ₹6 crores in Indian Treasury Bills."

The Hon'ble Sir Fazulbhoy Currimbhoy asked :—

Exemption of the Tea Industry from the Income-tax
Act.

9. "Will Government be pleased to lay on the table all the correspondence in the matter of the exemption granted to the tea industry for one year from the operation of the Indian Income-tax Act, 1918?"

The Hon'ble Sir James Meston replied :—

"The correspondence† is laid on the table."

The Hon'ble Sir Fazulbhoy Currimbhoy asked :—

War bonds.

10. "Will Government be pleased to state what liabilities of the Government of India mature in the following years in respect of War bonds :—

1920-21	.	.	.	1924-25
1921-22	.	.	.	1925-26
1922-23	.	.	.	1926-27
1923-24	.	.	.	1927-28 ?"

The Hon'ble Sir James Meston replied :—

"A statement‡ giving the information is laid on the table."

[26TH FEBRUARY, 1919.]

*(Sir Fazulbhoy Currimbhoy ; Sir James Meston ; Sir Claude Hill ; Sir Thomas Holland.)The Hon'ble Sir Fazulbhoy Currimbhoy asked :—

11. " Do Government propose to continue the restriction on the export of pearls ? If so, why ? "

Restrictions on the export of pearls.

The Hon'ble Sir James Meston replied :—

" The matter is now under consideration."

The Hon'ble Sir Fazulbhoy Currimbhoy asked :—

12. " Have Government received the report of the officer appointed to make a preliminary Hydrographic survey ? "

Hydrographic survey.

The Hon'ble Sir Claude Hill replied :—

" No report has yet been received, but it is hoped that the preliminary suggestions will be submitted by June next."

The Hon'ble Sir Fazulbhoy Currimbhoy asked :—

13. " Have the India Office finally refused sanction to one of the London Joint Stock Banks to open an office in India ? "

Refusal of sanction to one of the London Joint Stock Banks to open an office in India.

The Hon'ble Sir James Meston replied :—

" The India Office do not sanction or veto the opening of Banks in India. The Hon'ble gentleman probably has in mind a recent question of amalgamation which was before the British Treasury."

The Hon'ble Sir Fazulbhoy Currimbhoy asked :—

14. " Will Government be pleased to state whether any arrangements have been reached with regard to the Empire Commission for the management of war debts and also on what lines the negotiations, if any, are being carried on, and how they will affect India ? "

Management of war debts.

The Hon'ble Sir James Meston replied :—

" The Government of India are not aware that any authoritative proposal of the nature mentioned in the question has been made. They certainly have not been consulted."

The Hon'ble Sir Fazulbhoy Currimbhoy asked :—

15. "(a) Will Government be pleased to lay on the table all correspondence with Local Governments and with the Secretary of State on the problems of reconstruction, generally ? "

Creation of a Department of Reconstruction.

(b) Do Government intend to create a Department of Reconstruction on the lines adopted in the United Kingdom ? "

The Hon'ble Sir Thomas Holland replied :—

" Regarding the first part of my Hon'ble friend's question the correspondence between the Government of India, the Local Governments and the Secretary of State, regarding problems of reconstruction relates to questions of policy, the decision of which is bound to depend on the result of the deliberations of the Peace Conference now sitting at Paris. It would not be expedient to publish at this stage opinions expressed at different times during the war on matters of this nature, and I therefore regret that I am unable to lay papers on the table."

[Sir Thomas Holland ; Sir Fazulbhoy Currimbhoy ; Sir James Meston ; Sir Claude Hill.]

[26TH FEBRUARY, 1919.]

(b) The answer to the second part of the Hon'ble Member's question is in the negative."

The Hon'ble Sir Fazulbhoy Currimbhoy asked :—

Restrictions on the floating of new companies in India.

16. " Will Government be pleased to state how long they propose to continue restrictions on the floating of new companies in India ? "

The Hon'ble Sir James Meston replied :—

" The present intention of Government is not to extend the provisions of the Indian Companies Restriction Act beyond the period specified in section 1 (2) thereof. As to the date of the termination of the war, I would refer the Hon'ble Member to the Bill which was introduced at the last meeting of Council by the Hon'ble Sir George Lowndes.

Since the cessation of hostilities, licenses under the Act have been given more freely, and at present the number of applications refused is small."

The Hon'ble Sir Fazulbhoy Currimbhoy asked :—

India's debt of £100 million towards the war.

17. " What is the present position in regard to the obligation of the £100 million taken over by India in respect of the securities held and the rates of interest payable for them ? "

The Hon'ble Sir James Meston replied :—

" The proceeds of the first Indian War Loan, including about R9 crores of cash certificates, amounted to about R. 2½ crores, which, remitted home at 1s. 4d. enabled us to redeem £35 million out of our £100 million liability. The proceeds of the Second War Loan, amounting to rather over R57 crores, remitted at 18d., will enable us to redeem a further sum of about £43 million, the actual payment to the Home Government being made partly in the current year and partly next year. This leaves a balance of £22 million as the portion of the British war debt 1929-47, bearing interest at 5 per cent. for which India has accepted liability. The debt raised in India which has enabled us to redeem £78 million of our obligation consists, apart from cash certificates, of securities of the two war loans, bearing interest at 5 per cent. in the case of our own 1929-47 loan and 5½ per cent. in the case of our War bonds."

The Hon'ble Sir Fazulbhoy Currimbhoy asked :—

Issue of gold for the financing of wheat.

18. " Will Government be pleased to give the figures of the issue of gold for the financing of wheat for each of the war years ? "

The Hon'ble Sir James Meston replied :—

" Issues of gold for the financing of wheat were made in the last and current years as follows :—

	R
1917-18	9,21,77,040
1918-19	1,83,85,740".

The Hon'ble Sir Fazulbhoy Currimbhoy asked :—

Long-staple cotton.

19. " What steps do Government propose to take in pursuance of the recommendations of the Cotton Committee for the increase of long-staple cotton in India ? "

The Hon'ble Sir Claude Hill replied :—

" The Report of the Indian Cotton Committee has not yet been received by the Government of India. I am, therefore, unable to furnish the information asked for by the Hon'ble Member."

[26TH FEBRUARY, 1919.]

[Sir Fazulbhoy Currimbhoy; Sir Thomas Holland; His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief; Rai Bahadur Krishna Sahay; Sir William Vincent.]The Hon'ble Sir Fazulbhoy Currimbhoy asked :—

20. "How far has the scheme for the establishment of a system of valuable payable post between India and the United Kingdom progressed?"

The V. P.P. system between India and the United Kingdom.

The Hon'ble Sir Thomas Holland replied :—

"The opinions of Local Governments and Administrations were invited in October, 1918. All replies have not yet been received."

The Hon'ble Sir Fazulbhoy Currimbhoy asked :—

21. "Will Government be pleased to state in detail the quantity of stores—railway and military—and of provisions in Mesopotamia on their account and how they propose to dispose of the same?"

Disposal of stores, railway and military, in Mesopotamia.

His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief replied :—

"The stores referred to belong to His Majesty's Imperial Government. The question of their disposal is at present being discussed with His Majesty's Secretary of State for War."

The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur Krishna Sahay asked :—

22. "(a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to a letter, dated the 25th November, 1918, said to have been addressed by Mr. G. Milne, I.C.S., 'acting Honorary Secretary, Bihar and Orissa Civil Service Association', to the members of the Indian Civil Service in the Province of Bihar and Orissa, regarding their attitude towards the Reform Scheme, and printed in the Searchlight, dated the 19th December, 1918?"

The I.C.S. Reform Scheme.

(b) Are Government aware of the existence of the said Association, and is it a branch of a larger all-India organisation, or has it been formed independently and exclusively in the said province?"

(c) Was it formed with the sanction of the Provincial or the Central Government, or without that of either?"

(d) What are the objects of the Association, how long has it been in existence, and who are its office-bearers?"

(e) Are there any other and similar associations of other services in the said province? If so, of which services are they, and are they of only Imperial or also Provincial services?"

(f) Is there any rule under which it is open to Government servants to band themselves into such organisations?"

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent replied :—

"(a) The answer is in the affirmative.

(b) The Government of India are not aware of the existence of any All-India Indian Civil Service Association. No such association exists at the headquarters of the Government of India.

(c) The Association was not formed with the sanction of the Central Government, and the Government of India have no reason to suppose that the sanction of the Local Government was invoked.

(d) and (e) It is believed that similar associations exist in other services and in other provinces, and that their general object is the furtherance of service interests. But the Government of India do not recognise such associations and have no official information about them.

(f) The Hon'ble Member is referred to the answer that was given on the 19th February to a question by the Hon'ble Mr. Shukul."

[Rai Bahadur Krishna Sahay ; Sir William Vincent ; Mr. V. J. Patel.] 26TH FEBRUARY, 1919.]

The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur Krishna Sahay asked :—

Article by Lord
Sydenham in the "National News."

23. "(a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to an article by Lord Sydenham in The National News (extracts from which have appeared in several Indian newspapers) headed 'The Danger in India: a sinister attempt to weaken British Rule' in which it is stated that 'the mission of Mr. Montagu to India as a concession to agitation in the middle of the war gave a fresh stimulus to the forces of disorder, and the shameful organised attack by the Hindus upon peaceful Muslim villagers of Bihar was planned in anticipation of reforms which were expected to mark the further weakening of the British rule.'

(b) Has Government any information that the Shahabad or other Bakrid disturbances in Bihar were planned in anticipation of reforms?"

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent replied :—

"The answer to (a) is in the affirmative.

The answer to (b) is in the negative."

The Hon'ble Mr. V. J. Patel asked :—

European and Indian service
leave rules.

24. "(a) Do Government propose to submit fresh proposals to the Secretary of State for India in Council to do away with separate European and Indian service leave rules on the lines of those made in December, 1908?"

(b) If the answer to part (a) be in the negative, do Government propose to oppose the recommendation of the Public Services Commission to withdraw the privilege hitherto enjoyed by certain Indian officers of taking leave according to European service leave rules when they are promoted to a service to which these rules apply?"

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent replied :—

"(a) The answer is in the negative.

(b) The Government of India contemplate, subject to the approval of the Secretary of State, a modification of the principle laid down by the Public Services Commission by providing that in mixed services Indians selected for administrative posts should be admitted to the provisions of the European leave rules."

The Hon'ble Mr. V. J. Patel asked :—

Confidential reports on high gazetted officers.

25. "Do Government not propose to do away entirely with the system of confidential reports as far as it affects all gazetted officers holding positions of great trust and responsibility?"

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent replied :—

"Government are not sure what appointments the Hon'ble Member would describe as of great trust and responsibility, but they do not contemplate any change of their existing practice in this matter."

The Hon'ble Mr. V. J. Patel asked :—

Advertising of vacancies in public services carrying a salary of
Rs. 200 and more.

26. "Do Government propose to have any rules framed providing for the advertising for candidates to all vacancies in the public services carrying a salary of Rs. 200 and more per month that are usually filled in India?"

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent replied :—

"The Government of India are disposed to accept the principle of publicity by advertisement or otherwise of such vacancies, and, if with the sanction of the Secretary of State this system is adopted, Local Governments will doubtless introduce any rules that may be necessary for the purpose."

[26TH FEBRUARY, 1919] [Mr. V. J. Patel; His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief.]

The Hon'ble Mr. V. J. Patel asked :—

27. “(a) How many Indians and how many Anglo-Indians and Europeans have been appointed as officers of the Indian Munitions Board?”

Number of Indians,
Anglo-Indians and Europeans appointed as officers of the Indian Munitions
Board.

(b) Is any report on the working of the Indian Munitions Board since its beginning available? If not, will Government be pleased to consider the desirability of publishing one as soon as possible?”

His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief replied :—

“The reply to the first part of the Hon'ble Member's question is as follows. Excluding the accounts staff, at the head of which is an Indian, the officer personnel of the Indian Munitions Board consisted at the beginning of the present month of 365 Europeans and Anglo-Indians, 18 part-time European and Anglo-Indian officers in receipt of pay, and 4 Indians. Another Indian officer left the staff a few months ago.

The majority of the European and Anglo-Indian officers have been borrowed, on account of their special qualifications, from Government Departments and Company Railways. One hundred and twenty-three non-officials are being employed as officers under the Board, and of these, 75 are part-time officers who give their services in an honorary capacity.

As to (b) a report on the working of the Indian Munitions Board since its formation has been prepared, but as it contains information of military value it cannot be published at present. Copies of the report, however, are available for the confidential use of Hon'ble Members, who will be supplied on application being made to the Secretary, Indian Munitions Board.”

The Hon'ble Mr. V. J. Patel asked :—

28. “(a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to a Circular letter purporting to be issued by the Secretary of the Bihar and Orissa Civil Service Association, inviting the members thereof to answer certain questions regarding certain proposals under the Reform Scheme, and will Government be pleased to state whether the Government of India or the Local Government were consulted by the Association before it took this step?”

Attitude of the I.C.S. towards the Reform Scheme.

(b) Has the attention of Government been drawn to a rough draft of a Memorial which it is reported the Indian Civil Service Association at Madras proposes to submit, criticising and protesting against the assertion of the Viceroy and the Secretary of State contained in paragraph 327 of the Reforms Report to the following effect :—

‘We regard it as a libel on the Indian Civil Service as a body to say that they have resisted or will resist the policy announced last August. They have welcomed it because no one knew better than they how badly a declaration of policy was needed; and they will carry it out with determination, just as they have always carried out the policy laid down for them’.

(c) Has the attention of Government been drawn to the following remarks in a letter dated the 16th December, 1918, reported to have been sent by Mr. A. Galletti, I.C.S., as a ‘counterblast’ to the said Memorial :—

‘I think you are on the wrong track altogether. Your draft is just one long dismal whine. It is full of political innuendo; it is peevish, not to say mutinous in tone.’

(d) Has the attention of Government been drawn to the following remarks of the Servant of India in its issue of the 23rd January, 1919 :—

‘The Indian Civil Service of Madras has combined not only for professional but for political purposes as well and, in fact, with a view to bring to naught the Government's project of reform. The public are interested to know what disciplinary action Government intends to take against its servants for their offence not only against good form but recognised rules of service’.

[Mr. V. J. Patel; Sir William Vincent;
His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief] 6TH FEBRUARY, 1919.]

(e) Will Government be pleased to say whether they have taken or propose to take any action against the Bihar and the Madras Civil Servants concerned? If so, what?"

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent replied :—

" (a) The Hon'ble Member is referred to the reply given to a similar question asked by the Hon'ble Rai Bahadur Krishna Sahay. The Government of India were not addressed by the Secretary of the Bihar and Orissa Indian Civil Service Association as a preliminary to the issue of the circular. They have no reason to suppose that the Bihar and Orissa Government was so addressed.

(b) and (d) The answer is in the affirmative.

(c) The Government of India have seen copies of the letter.

(e) The answer is in the negative."

The Hon'ble Mr. V. J. Patel asked :—

Indian Civil Service Associations. 29. " (a) Will Government be pleased to name the Indian Civil Service Associations existing in India with the names of the Members and the Office-bearers of each such Association, as also the date on which it came into being?

(b) What are the aims and objects of each of these Associations?"

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent replied :—

" (a) & (b) The Hon'ble Member is referred to the answer given to parts (d) and (e) of the Hon'ble Rai Bahadur Krishna Sahay's question."

The Hon'ble Mr. V. J. Patel asked :—

Contributions made by India to wards the War in men, money and material. 30. " (a) Will Government be pleased to say whether any authenticated publication giving all the contributions of India to the war efforts of the Empire in men, money and material is available?

(b) Is it a fact that blue-books giving war efforts of all self-governing Colonies were published by the Imperial Government every quarter? If so, did the Government of India represent to the Imperial Government the advisability of including the war efforts of India in such blue-books or publishing separately a book recording these?"

His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief replied :—

" The reply to the first part of the Hon'ble Members question is.—Records of India's contribution to the war in men, money and material have been kept and communicated to the Secretary of State from time to time, but these are not available for general publication at present. The question of arranging for an authoritative record, in convenient form, which will be available for general information, is now under consideration, and steps have been taken to compile the same.

In respect of (b) no information is available in India in regard to the publication by the Imperial Government of quarterly Blue-books giving particulars of the war efforts of the self-governing Dominions. The Government of India have not, therefore, represented to the Imperial Government the advisability of including in publications of this kind particulars of India's war efforts. The only known papers on the subject published at home and laid before Parliament, are those referred to in the answer given by Sir William Meyer to the Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya in the Legislative Council on the 10th September 1918."

[62TH FEBRUARY, 1919.]

[Mr. G. S. Khaparde; Sir James Meston.]

The Hon'ble Mr. G. S. Khaparde asked :—

31. “(a) Will Government be pleased to state the present strength of the Military Accounts Department and its strength before the war, both permanent ^{Military Accounts Department.} and temporary, in regard to—

- (1) Officers;
- (2) Subordinate Accounts service;
- (3) Clerks.

(b) If any increase was made on account of the war, will Government be pleased to indicate the difference under each of the heads mentioned in (a) above.”

The Hon'ble Sir James Meston replied :—

“(a) and (b) A statement* is laid on the table giving the information asked for by the Hon'ble Member.”

The Hon'ble Mr. G. S. Khaparde asked :—

32. “(a) Were any Indians either appointed or promoted to the rank of officers in the Military Accounts Department with a view to increase its strength to meet the exigencies of the war? If so, how many? ^{Appointment and promotion of Indians in Military Accounts Department.}

(b) Are there any Indians holding appointments higher than those of Deputy Examiners in the Military Accounts Department?

(c) Is it a fact that no Indians have been appointed to any posts in the Military Accounts Department carrying more than Rs 800 a month?

(d) If the answer to (c) be in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to state the reasons why no Indians were so appointed?

(e) Are there any and, if so, how many Indians in independent charge of any office in the Military Accounts Department?

(f) If the answer to (e) be in the negative, will Government be pleased to state the reasons why there are no Indians in independent charge of any such office?”

The Hon'ble Sir James Meston replied :—

“(a) No Indians have hitherto been appointed or promoted permanently to the superior staff of the Military Accounts Department with a view to increase its strength to meet the exigencies of the war.

The strength of the superior staff before the war was 57 officers; the present strength is 58, excluding two officers who are seconded for other duties. The services of ten Indians have been lent, for the period of war, by the Civil Accounts and other Departments, to carry out duties usually allotted to the superior staff of the Military Accounts Department.

“(b), (c) and (d) No Indians are at present holding permanent appointments higher than those of Deputy Examiners in the Military Accounts Department. No permanent appointments of Indians have hitherto been made to posts in the Military Accounts Department carrying more than Rs 800 a month.

Appointments to the superior staff have hitherto, with few exceptions, been made by the Secretary of State at home.

“(e) and (f) There are only fourteen permanent independent charges in the Military Accounts Department. All of these are held by senior officers of the Department, none of whom are Indians. Owing to the war there are now three additional temporary independent charges in India, one of which is held by an Indian.”

[Mr. G. S. Khaparde ; Sir James Meston.]

26TH FEBRUARY, 1919.]

The Hon'ble Mr. G. S. Khaparde asked :—

Persons deputed from other Departments to Military Accounts Department.

33. “ (a) Were any persons transferred from other Departments to the Military Accounts Department to cope with increase of work caused by the war ?

(b) If so, how many, and were substitutes for such persons employed in those Departments ? ”

The Hon'ble Sir James Meston replied :—

“ (a) and (b) Yes. The following classes have been temporarily transferred to the Military Accounts Department :—

(i) permanent clerks from the Civil and Railway accounts offices under the control of the Comptroller and Auditor-General, and clerks employed under Provincial Governments. The number of such clerks at present employed is about 960.

(ii) British soldier clerks. The number is at present about 2,700.

Substitutes are employed wherever the conditions of work necessitate this course. Government have sanctioned in the case of the clerks of the Civil Department, the temporary suspension of their lien on their permanent appointments, so as to admit of promotions being made in their places.”

The Hon'ble Mr. G. S. Khaparde asked :—

Creation and filling of posts in Military Accounts Department.

34. “ (a) Is it a fact that some posts carrying R400 a month were recently created in the Military Accounts Department, and that the posts so created were conferred on soldier clerks ? If so, what is the number of such posts ?

(b) What were the qualifications of the soldier clerks on whom the posts were conferred ?

(c) Were not qualified men from the Subordinate Accounts Service available for the said posts ?

(d) If the answer to (c) be in the affirmative, why were the qualified men from the Subordinate Accounts Service not utilised for the purpose ?

(e) How many men were promoted to the rank of officers from the Subordinate Accounts Service in the Military Accounts Department during the war owing to an increase in the number of officers ? ”

The Hon'ble Sir James Meston replied :—

“ (a) Yes. 21 soldier clerks have been gazetted as Special Deputy Examiners on a consolidated pay of R400 per mensem, and a few more are being added thereto to meet urgent requirements.

(b) The soldier clerks in question belonged to the Territorial Army and had been employed in the Military Accounts offices for the past two to four years on clerical duties, and latterly as supervisors of sections. Many of them have had a University education. In civil life, before they enlisted, the majority had had experience in accounts work with commercial firms and banks or as articled clerks with Chartered Accountants.

(c) and (d) No. Such senior subordinates as were qualified for promotion had already been promoted to gazetted rank as Deputy Examiners. The Hon'ble Member may be interested to learn that in order to fill the additional war appointments in the Subordinate Accounts Service, it has been found necessary in a few cases to appoint even 3rd grade accountants on R110 to 180 to be temporary Deputy Examiners on R550.

The temporary appointments for which the soldier clerks were selected were in connection with the accounts of British Troops. For this work it is essential to employ in a supervising capacity men who are already thoroughly conversant with the work.

[26TH FEBRUARY, 1919.]

[Sir James Meston ; Mr. G. S. Khaparde.]

(e) The strength of Deputy Examiners before the war was 31, and there has been an addition of 42 temporary Deputy Examiners up to date to meet war conditions. Five Deputy Examiners were promoted, with the approval of the Secretary of State, to the superior staff of officers during the war."

The Hon'ble Mr. G. S. Khaparde asked :—

35. "(a) Is it a fact that promotions in the Subordinate Accounts Service in the Military Accounts Department have not been notified during the last eighteen months, nor has the revised list showing the standing of each member of the establishment been issued ?

Promotions in the Subordinate Accounts Service in the Military Accounts Department.

(b) If the answer to (a) be in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to state why the promotions have not been notified or the list been issued, and when it is proposed to notify the promotions and issue the list ?"

The Hon'ble Sir James Meston replied :—

"(a) and (b) Permanent and sub pro tem., promotions affecting the Subordinate Accounts Service of the Military Accounts Department have not been notified since October, 1917. About 30 vacancies have occurred during this period owing to deaths, retirements or the temporary promotion of members of the Subordinate Accounts Service to the grade of Deputy Examiner. All these vacancies will entail permanent or sub pro tem., promotions.

The delay has been caused by the difficulty of ascertaining in respect of the two Circles concerned, viz., the Northern and Southern Armies, the dates on which, in some cases, men were substantively promoted to the 4th grade of the clerical service, which dates govern their order of seniority when promoted to the Subordinate Accounts Service. The information is now almost complete ; and it is hoped that the promotions will be notified shortly. The Hon'ble Member will realise that the difficulty in obtaining this information has been greatly enhanced by the pressure of work and by the constant transfers and changes of personnel. Many of the clerks whose substantive promotion to the Subordinate Accounts Service has still to be notified are already officiating in leave vacancies or temporary additional appointments, and have not therefore suffered any appreciable loss of emoluments owing to the delay. Substantive promotions, when made, will all have retrospective effect to the date on which the vacancies occurred."

The Hon'ble Mr. G. S. Khaparde asked :—

36. "(a) Did any persons holding posts in the Military Accounts Department proceed on field service during the war ? If so, how many ?

Members of the Military Accounts Department who proceeded on field service and the filling up of their posts.

(b) Does the Accounts Manual War, paragraph 89, require that the posts of such persons should be filled up sub pro tem., during their absence, and were the posts of the persons referred to in (a) so filled up ?

(c) If the answer to (b) be in the affirmative, how many such posts were filled up ? If the answer to (b) be in the negative, why were the posts not filled up ?"

The Hon'ble Sir James Meston replied :—

"(a) The number of permanent officers and others sent on Field Service in 1914 was as follows :—

(i) Officers	{ Military	13
	{ Civilian	2
(ii) Deputy Examiners		6
(iii) Subordinate Accounts Service		46
(iv) Clerks		306

These numbers have varied from time to time with reference to the strength of the troops in the field and changes in accounts procedure, etc. The number of permanent officers and men now employed wholly on field account work is—

[Sir James Meston.] [26TH FEBRUARY, 1919.]

(a) Out of India—

Officers	6
Deputy Examiners	6
Others	154

(b) In India—

Officers	18
Deputy Examiners and Assistant War Controllers	17
Others	379

(b) and (c) Paragraph 89, Accounts Manual, War, was designed to meet the cases of men transferred for field account duties to other offices in connection with expeditions on the frontiers of India, and authorises sub. pro-tem. promotions being made in such temporary vacancies in the permanent establishment.

During the late war sub. pro-tem., promotions have been allowed in the case of twelve Military officers of the Department who have been employed on field account work. The rule is not applicable to civilian officers of the superior staff, as they are on a time-scale of pay.

As regards the subordinate accounts and clerical services, the Government of India decided in February, 1915, that sub. pro-tem. promotions should only be made to the extent that men on field service had to be replaced by additional temporary appointments in India, as the transfer of men to the field involved the transfer of part of their work to the field account office.

The reason for not following universally the procedure laid down in paragraph 89, Accounts Manual War, was that, in the case of frontier expeditions, the transfer of a relatively small number of clerks from the various Military Accounts offices in India to the field office, mainly to deal on the spot with supply accounts, did not diminish the work connected with pay accounts in the offices from which they were transferred.

During the late war, owing to the magnitude of the operations, the large numbers of troops employed, and the fact that they were serving overseas, a different procedure had to be adopted. The pay accounts work connected with the expeditionary forces was transferred, with the necessary personnel, to fixed centres, e.g., Rouen, Dar-es-Salaam, Cairo and Basrah; and latterly, it has been concentrated in the Field Controller's office at Poona. The divisional offices from which the clerks were transferred to these fixed centres were relieved of the work which, in the case of a frontier expedition, would have still been performed by them. Consequently, there was no justification for granting general sub. pro-tem., promotions in those offices in the place of clerks who, on transfer to a field office, took their work with them.

In accordance with this decision sub. pro-tem. promotions were limited during the early part of 1915 to the following extent:—

Deputy Examiners	4
Subordinate Accounts Service	17
Clerks	58

Subsequently, owing to the expansion of field operations, a larger number of temporary clerks had to be employed; and in order to secure adequate supervision, 35 and 70 sub. pro-tem. appointments were added to the above number in July, 1915 and September, 1916, respectively. The transfer of men to the Central War Controller's office also created 41 additional sub. pro-tem. appointments."

[26TH FEBRUARY, 1919.] Mr. G. S. Khaparde ; Sir James Meston.]

The Hon'ble Mr. G. S. Khaparde asked :—

37. “(a) Is it a fact that the pay of the whole establishment of the Military Accounts Department, and particularly that of the last grade in it, has not been revised during the last 45 years, notwithstanding the increased cost of living, etc.? If so, what is the reason of such non-revision? Revision pay in the Military Accounts Department.

(b) Have Government received any memorials from the men of the Military Accounts Department, praying for increased pay? If so, what action was taken on the memorials?

(c) Is the question of increase of pay of the men in the Military Accounts Department under consideration? If so, when is it likely to be decided?”

The Hon'ble Sir James Meston replied :—

“(a) Until the year 1908 there was no general increase in the rates of pay of the Military Accounts Department, which were fixed in 1874. In the year 1905-06, an exhaustive investigation into the organisation and work of the Department was carried out by Mr. Barrow, the then Comptroller General, who found that the average annual emoluments of the Military Accounts clerks were higher than those of the clerks in the Civil Accounts Department, except in Madras; but that, while the rates of pay were generally adequate and sufficient to attract suitable recruits, the distribution of appointments in the several grades required revision in order to secure a more rapid flow of promotion. With this object he submitted certain proposals which were accepted by Government, and the reorganisation of 1908 was decided upon.

This reorganisation had the effect of creating 166 new appointments in various grades and of further increasing the average pay of the Military Accounts clerks from R76 to R83; sixty-three appointments were also added in the last grade to form a training reserve, while the rates of pay in the Secunderabad and Burma Divisions were considerably increased to bring them generally on to a level with those prevailing in the Poona Circle and in the Military Accounts Offices in the Northern Army, respectively. The 1908 reorganisation involved an additional cost of nearly 2 lakhs of rupees a year.

The next reorganisation of the Department took place in 1914 when independent Divisional Controllers' offices were formed, and a universal rate of pay for new entrants into the Department was fixed for all India, supplemented by local allowances varying from R5 to R50 to meet the higher cost of living at certain expensive stations.

The pay of the last grade of the clerical service used to be R30 in all Divisions, except in the Secunderabad Division, where the reorganisation of 1908 brought it on a level with the other Divisions. No difficulty has been experienced in obtaining recruits for the offices at this rate of pay.

(b) Memorials have been received from time to time, praying for increased rates of pay or allowances in addition to pay. Such memorials have been more frequent during the past three or four years, owing to the higher cost of living which has resulted from war conditions.

The following concessions have been sanctioned from time to time, not as a direct result of these memorials, but in order to give, during the pressure of war work, higher emoluments and better chances of advancement to the more deserving clerks, namely :—

(i) Men have been granted temporary promotion to higher grades in order to provide them with emoluments commensurate with more responsible duties. Over 200 sub pro-tem. appointments of this nature have been made, and this measure has resulted in about 750 men on the permanent establishment receiving substantial increases to their pay in the consequent chain of promotions.

(ii) As a reward for good services rendered in connection with the war, about 100 men have been given supernumerary promotion to grades higher than their own. This has given them promotion to these grades at a much earlier date than they would obtain it in the ordinary course.

[Sir James Meston ; Mr. G. S. Khaparde ; William Vincent ; Mir Asad Ali, Khan Bahadur.]

- (iii) A monthly bonus is given to all junior clerks, who have done good work during the month, to raise their pay to the level of the next higher grade.
- (iv) Special allowances have been granted to men engaged on field account duties in India. In the case of those who draw below R100 an additional allowance of 50 per cent. has been granted. For those who draw over R100 the additional allowance is 20 per cent. on their pay. Clerks on field service outside India receive special concessions, e.g., in Mesopotamia a special allowance of 33½ per cent. for those drawing R300 and over, and special consolidated rates of pay to those drawing less than R300. This involves increases ranging from 166 per cent. in the case of men drawing R30 to about 40 per cent. in the case of men drawing R280. In Egypt, the junior clerks are given promotion to the next higher grade as well as allowances ranging from 50 per cent. upwards; while the senior clerks receive field allowances of 33½ per cent.

The result of these various concessions and of the expansion of establishments due to the war has been to give large increases of pay to many clerks of the Department. The establishment lists show that men serving in India, who are not specially employed on field account duties, are now drawing considerably higher rates of pay than in the year 1914, e.g., the junior men in the R200—280 grade in 1914 are now in some cases drawing R550 as temporary Deputy Examiners, and many junior men drawing R35 in the 6th grade in 1914 are now drawing R50 to R60.

(c) Not at present. "

The Hon'ble Mr. G. S. Khaparde asked :—

The Indian Civil Service and the Reform Scheme.

38. "(a) Is it a fact that Civil Service Associations have been formed in Madras and Bihar to take part in the discussion of the scheme of political reforms to be introduced into India ?

(b) If so, how many members of the Indian Civil Service have enrolled themselves as members of the same ?

(c) Do Government intend taking any action with regard to the competency of the said members to join and take part in carrying out the aims and objects of the said Associations ?"

(d) Have Government received any memorial or memorials from the said Associations ?

(e) If the answer to (d) be in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to lay on the table the reply or replies, if any, given to the said memorial or memorials ?"

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent replied :—

"(a) (b) and (c) The Hon'ble Member is referred to the answer given to parts (d) and (e) of a similar question by the Hon'ble Rai Bahadur Krishna Sahay.

(d) The answer is in the negative."

The Hon'ble Mir Asad Ali, Khan Bahadur, asked :—

39. "Will Government be pleased to state—

(a) What steps have already been taken by Local Governments to control the high prices of foodstuffs and cloth ; and

(b) What further steps they propose to take to reduce prices as far as possible ?"

Steps taken by Government to control the prices of foodstuffs and cloth.

[26TH FEBRUARY, 1919.

[Sir Claude Hill; Mir Asad Ali, Khan Bahadur; His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief.]The Hon'ble Sir Claude Hill replied :—

" In respect of foodstuffs, certain Local Governments have submitted proposals for fixing prices under the Defence of India Rules, but the Government of India are reluctant to sanction general measures of this kind, as the fixation of prices is feasible only under a guarantee of supply ; but, where supplies can be adequately controlled, as in the case of imports, effective measures have been taken in several provinces. In addition to traffic restrictions designed to prevent the depletion of definite areas, permits for the imports of foodstuffs from other provinces or for the movement of foodstuffs from one part of the province to another are granted only to merchants who agree to sell them at fixed prices. In Madras, for instance, contravention of the conditions laid down entails the removal of the offender from the register of merchants entitled to obtain railway permits. In Bombay, the maximum prices of rice imported from Burma and of wheat imported from the Punjab are announced from time to time. Similarly, a maximum selling price has been fixed in Calcutta for Burma rice. In Madras, importers of Burma rice are allowed to sell the rice only at a definite profit per bag or per maund. In the Punjab, with a view to checking the excessive price of wheat, the Articles of Commerce Ordinance has been utilised to obtain the supplies required for the Army.

The Government of India have no information of any further measures contemplated by the Local Governments.

As regards cloth, I would draw the Hon'ble Member's attention to the Press Communiqué issued by the Controller of Cotton Cloth on the 30th January, a copy of which was laid upon the table at the last meeting on the 19th February. I might also mention that in September, 1918, steps were taken in Bengal under the Defence of India (Consolidation) Rules to restrict dealings in cotton cloth to persons in possession of Government licenses, the object being to eliminate speculators and profiteers whose dealings had helped to force up prices."

The Hon'ble Mir Asad Ali, Khan Bahadur, asked :—

40. " Will Government be pleased to state—

The Indian
Munitions
Board.

(a) The total cost so far of the establishment of the Indian Munitions Board since its inception;

(b) The total strength of its establishment, officers and clerks, civil and military, European, Anglo-Indian and Indian; and

(c) The total number of Europeans, Anglo-Indians and Indians, respectively, employed under the Board drawing a salary of Rs100 and more per mensem ?"

His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief replied :—

" (a) The total cost of the establishment of the Indian Munitions Board, that is to say, the total cost of the salaries for the period from its inception to the end of December 1918 is Rs7,470,419, or approximately 1·2 per cent. of the total expenditure during the same period. This figure includes the salaries of employés in Ordnance and Army Clothing Factories, excluding those engaged on daily wages.

(b) The strength of the establishment on the 31st December, 1918, was as follows :—

of Islam.

The Hon'ble Mir Asad Ali, Khan Bahadur, asked:—

41. "Are Government aware of the strength and volume of Moslem feeling throughout the country in the matter of the restoration to the Caliph of all the sacred places of Islam now in the hands of Great Britain and the Allies?"

Do Government propose to move the Secretary of State to bring this question before the Peace Conference?"

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent replied:—

"Government have nothing to add to the letter which was recently addressed to the All-India Moslem League under instructions from His Majesty's Secretary of State for India.

A copy of this letter * is laid upon the table."

Publicity

Propaganda.

The Hon'ble Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda asked:—

42. "(a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to an article in the Amrita Bazar Patrika of the 13th December, 1918, on the 'Publicity Board Propaganda' and also to the comments of the Englishman and Statesman of 12th December on the activity of the Publicity Board?"

(b) Will Government be pleased to publish a statement showing the total expenditure on the propaganda work of the Publicity Board giving details Province by Province?

(c) How many newspapers are published by the Board and how many, if any, are subsidised by them?

(d) Do Government propose to consider the desirability of dissolving the Board or discontinuing its propaganda work now?"

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent replied:—

"(a) The answer is in the affirmative.

(b) and (c) A statement† giving the information asked for by the Hon'ble Member is laid on the table.

(d) The following Provincial Boards have either closed already or are taking steps to effect a very early closure:—

The Central Publicity Board has advised the Government of India to allow the following Publicity Boards to continue their activities until March 15th, 1919 :—

Madras.

Bombay.

United Provinces.

Punjab.

The Central Publicity Board will continue its activities until March 31st, 1919. The total estimated expenditure of the Board up to that date is Rs. 66,000."

LOCAL AUTHORITIES PENSIONS AND GRATUITIES BILL.

The Hon'ble Sir C. Sankaran Nair :—" Sir, I move that the Bill to extend the powers of local authorities in regard to the granting of pensions and gratuities be taken into consideration." 11-20 A.M.

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble Sir C. Sankaran Nair :—" Sir, I move that the Bill be now passed. The Bill has been published and no criticisms have been received. It is only a permissive Bill."

The motion was put and agreed to.

INDIAN CRIMINAL LAW (AMENDMENT) BILL.

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent :—" Sir, I move that the Hon'ble Mr. Moore and the Hon'ble Mr. Moncrieff Smith be added to the Select Committee appointed to report on the Bill to provide for the amendment of the Indian Penal Code and the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, vice the Hon'ble Sir Verley Lovett and the Hon'ble Mr. Muddiman, who will unfortunately be unable to attend the meetings of that Committee." 11-25 A.M.

The motion was put and agreed to.

INDIAN OATHS (AMENDMENT) BILL.

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent :—" Sir, I move for leave to introduce a Bill further to amend the Indian Oaths Act, 1873. The Statement of Objects and Reasons annexed to the Bill indicates sufficiently why this Bill has been introduced. Under section 16 of the Indian Oaths Act, no person appointed to any office shall, subject to the provisions of sections 3 and 5, before entering upon the execution of his duties, be required to make any oath. It is intended to prescribe oaths of office for particular high officials who are mentioned in the Statement of Objects and Reasons, and the amendment of the Act is proposed to remove any doubt as to the right to prescribe such an oath." 11-26 A.M.

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent :—" Sir, I introduce the Bill, and move that the Bill, together with the Statement of Objects and Reasons relating thereto, be published in the Gazette of India in English."

The motion was put and agreed to.

[26TH FEBRUARY, 1919.]

INDIAN ELECTRICITY (AMENDMENT) BILL.

11-30 A.M.

The Hon'ble Mr. V. J. Patel.—"Sir, I beg to move for leave to introduce a Bill further to amend the Indian Electricity Act, 1910. The object of this Bill, as the Council will see, is two-fold. In the first place, it is intended to secure to every local authority proper opportunities to submit its objections against the granting of a license to a company of shareholders, and secondly, to provide that if any such objection is based on a rival claim for a license, the Local Government shall give preference to the application of the local authority unless there exist special circumstances which in its opinion render such preference inexpedient. Now, as to the first object, I invite the attention of this Council to the old Indian Electricity Act of 1903. Under its provisions, the Local Government was bound to consult every local authority as a preliminary measure on the merits of an application for a license. This gave the local authority an opportunity of expressing its views on the merits of the project as contained in the draft application for a license. Apart from the privilege of this preliminary consultation, the local authority had another opportunity of putting in a protest against the grant of a license after the publication of a draft license. This law was altered in 1910, and the local authority under the provisions of the new Act is placed more or less on the same footing as a private individual who is entitled to record his protest after the publication of the draft license. Now, the advantages of this privilege of preliminary consultation as it existed in the previous Act were two-fold. In the first place, the local authority had the opportunity of informing the Local Government that a similar scheme on a more economical basis could be submitted on its own behalf to benefit its rate-payers. Of course, the final decision under that Act rested with the Government. And secondly, the local authority had an opportunity of negotiating the terms on which the license should be granted by Government. As a matter of fact, this has happened in one case in Ahmedabad. Messrs. Killick Nixon applied for a license within the limits of the municipality under the provisions of the Act of 1903, the Local Government referred that application of the Company to the Ahmedabad municipality for preliminary consultation. As a result of that, Messrs. Killick Nixon approached the Ahmedabad municipality and negotiated with them as to the terms on which the municipality would waive any objection they were prepared to make. In consequence of that the Ahmedabad municipality got very favourable terms for the supply of electricity for its street lighting. Now, as to the second object of the Bill, I may invite the attention of this Council to the fabric of the Electricity Act which is now in force. The Act contemplates that the local authority is the body primarily interested in electric schemes within its area, so much so that the local authority is given a statutory right to purchase the undertaking after the lapse of a specified period. I invite attention to section 7 of the present Electricity Act, which runs as follows:—'Where a license has been granted to any person not being a local authority and the whole of the area of supply is included in the area for which a single local authority is constituted, the local authority shall, on the expiration of such period, not exceeding fifty years, and of every such subsequent period not exceeding twenty years, as shall be specified in this behalf in the license, have the option of purchasing the undertaking.' That being so there is no reason why, if the local authority is in a position to finance any scheme of electricity in its area, it should not be given the business from the beginning, not only for the supply of electricity for street lighting, but also to its rate-payers. This course would enable the local authority to supply electricity to its rate-payers at a cheaper rate than where the license was given to an outsider. The question naturally arises whether there has been any demand of this kind. I may say that I know of one instance. The municipality of Bandra in the Bombay Presidency has applied for a license for electricity within its limits; Killick Nixon have also put in a similar application; both applications are before the Government, and I do not know what decision Government will arrive at. I do not, however, desire to prejudice the case of either party by any remarks in this Council; suffice it to say that it is very difficult for a local authority to fight its battle against powerful interests. Apart from these considerations, the main consideration which has induced me to bring in this Bill is that, under the policy recently inaugurated by the Government of India, the local authorities are now going to enjoy more independence, more freedom, and I beg to submit that it is time that Acts containing restrictions which hinder the healthy development and growth of local bodies should now be abrogated or amended. With these few words I beg to introduce the Bill "

[26TH FEBRUARY, 1919.]

[Mr. V. J. Patel ; Sir Claude Hill.]

The Hon'ble Sir Claude Hill :—" Sir, I was waiting to see if any other Hon'ble Member would address the Council. I think it would perhaps save time if I explained the position of Government in regard to this Bill. The Bill is a very short one and, apparently, a very simple one ; and the Government have no desire whatever, if introduction is permitted, to object to the Bill being referred to Local Governments. But the Government of India feel that they must reserve full liberty of action on the measure on receipt of the replies of Local Governments. I should like to point out in this connection that, simple as the measure appears to be, it would seem to require very careful consideration from the point of view of the investing capitalist's interests especially in regard to the proviso. It is possibly open to argument whether the proviso suggested by the Hon'ble Member might not have a deterrent effect upon capital. The Government as I have said are willing, while reserving the right of action later, to go so far as to agree to the introduction of the Bill and to its being referred to Local Governments." 11-39 A.M.

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble Mr. V. J. Patel :—" Sir, I now introduce the Bill, and move that it, together with the Statement of Objects and Reasons relating thereto, be published in the Gazette of India and in the local official Gazettes in English."

The motion was put and agreed to.

NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS (AMENDMENT) BILL.

The Hon'ble Mr. V. J. Patel :—" Sir, I beg to move for leave to introduce a Bill further to amend the Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881. The Bill, though a very short one, is a very important Bill. Its object is to set right the difficulty created by the decision of the Bombay High Court in a recent case on the question whether a cheque expressed to be payable to a specified person is a Negotiable Instrument. Now, both according to the English law as well as the law in India, on Negotiable Instruments, there are five kinds of cheques ; cheques payable to a specified person, cheques payable to a specified person or order, cheques payable to the order of a specified person, cheques payable to bearer, and cheques payable to a specified person or bearer. According to the mercantile usage obtaining in England as well as in India, all these cheques are negotiable. Now as to law. In England before 1882, a cheque payable to a specified person was regarded as non-negotiable. This law was altered by 45 and 46 Vict., c. 61, which provided that an Instrument payable to a specified person, and not containing words prohibiting transfer or indicating an intention that it shall not be transferable is an Instrument 'payable to order' that is negotiable. Thus it was in 1882 that the law in England was brought into line with the custom prevailing there. 11-40 A.M.

" Now coming to India, as I have already observed, the custom is that a cheque payable to a specified person is negotiable. But the law is otherwise, and in a recent case, as I have already mentioned in the beginning, the Bombay High Court refused to recognise the custom which went straight against the positive law as laid down in the Negotiable Instruments Act. They relied on the case of Goodwin versus Roberts, the case followed also by Cockburn, C. J., who observed :—

‘ We must by no means be understood as saying that mercantile usage, however extensive, should be allowed to prevail if contrary to positive law. To give effect to a usage which involves a defiance or disregard of the law would be obviously contrary to the fundamental principle in the leading case of Goodwin versus Roberts. ’

“ Now what were the facts in the Bombay case referred to ? In the Bombay case a cheque was addressed to a specified person, and the word ‘ bearer ’ was struck out without the substitution of the word ‘ order ’, and the question for decision was, whether that cheque should be regarded as negotiable. No doubt in that case it was proved to the hilt that the custom in the Bombay market was to the effect that such a cheque was negotiable. But in spite of that, relying on the decision I just quoted, the Bombay High Court held that the custom being contrary to the definition of Negotiable Instruments as contained in section 3 of the Negotiable Instruments Act could not have any legal recognition. I will read that definition to this Council with your permission, Sir :—

‘ A ‘ negotiable instrument ’ means a promissory note, bill of exchange or cheque expressed to be payable to a specified person, or his order, or to the order of a specified person, or to the bearer thereof, or to a specified person or the bearer thereof. ’

“ Now it is quite clear looking to this definition that the custom is quite contrary to the positive law on the subject. If that is so, what is the remedy ? The only remedy left is to appeal to the Indian Legislature to amend the Act. This is what the learned Judge of the Bombay High Court says in this connection :—

‘ If it should be desired by merchants and bankers that a particular usage should be legally recognised, then their proper course would be to apply for an amendment of the Indian Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, so as to bring it into line with the latest English Statute of 1882. Such an application, however, would have to be made not to this Court but to the Indian Legislature. ’

“ It is with a view that the difficulty created by the decision of the Bombay High Court in the case of Dossabhoy versus Virchand may be set right, that I have brought forward this Bill, and I hope the Council will support it. ”

11-58 A.M.

The Hon'ble Sir Thomas Holland :—“ Sir, the Chambers of Commerce in Bengal and in Bombay have also drawn the attention of Government to the possible inconvenience that might arise in consequence of a rigid interpretation of the Act of 1881, especially that section of it with the unlucky number. The Government realise the desirability of bringing the Act into unison with the accepted practice of business circles. They therefore readily accept the principle of the Bill which the Hon'ble Mr. Patel has asked for leave to introduce and has explained so clearly.”

12 A.M.

The Hon'ble Sir Fazulbhoy Currimbhoy :—“ Sir, I beg to support the Bill, and I hope that this Bill will be passed at this Session as a lot of inconvenience is caused to the commercial public.”

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble Mr. V. J. Patel :—“ Sir, I now beg to introduce the Bill, and move that the Bill, together with the Statement of Objects and Reasons relating thereto, be published in the Gazette of India in English.”

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Council then adjourned to Saturday, the 1st March, 1919.

(Referred to in answer to Question No. 41.)

No. 203, dated the 15th February, 1919.

From—The Secretary to the Government of India, Home Department,

To—The Secretary, All-India Moslem League.

I am directed to acknowledge, on behalf of the Secretary of State for India, a telegram of January the 1st from the All-India Moslem League containing the substance of certain resolutions passed at its recent meetings.

2. As regards the Khalifat His Majesty's Government adhere as they have throughout adhered to their public pronouncement that the question of the Khalifat is one that solely affects Moslems and is therefore one that must be decided by Moslems themselves without interference.

3. I am, however, to take this opportunity of repudiating emphatically the suggestions contained in one of the resolutions passed by the League, that there has been some deviation on the part of His Majesty's Government from the pledges given regarding Moslem holy places. They announced that the holy places would be immune from attack or molestation by the British naval and military forces, so long as there was no interference with pilgrims from India to them. Not only was this pledge observed in the spirit and letter during the actual occupation by His Majesty's forces of the territories in which holy places are situated, but steps have been taken and are being taken to ensure the strict observance of the sanctity of the holy places during our occupation of such territories.

4. In conclusion I am to state that His Majesty's Government fully appreciate the feeling of both Indians and the Moslems in regard to the momentous questions to be decided at the Peace Conference and they authorise the Government of India to say that they may rest assured that due consideration will be given to that feeling by His Majesty's representatives at the Peace Conference.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.
LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE INDIAN LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL ASSEMBLED UNDER THE PROVISIONS OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA ACT, 1915.
(5 & 6 Geo. V, Ch. 61.)

The Council met at the Council Chamber, Imperial Secretariat, Delhi, on Saturday, the 1st March, 1919.

PRESENT :

His Excellency BARON CHELMSFORD, P.C., G.M.S.I., G.M.I.E., G.C.M.G., G.C.B.E., Viceroy and Governor General, presiding, and 49 Members, of whom 41
were Additional Members.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur B. D. Shukul asked :—

11 A.M.

1. "(a) Will Government please lay upon the table a statement showing separately the number of deaths from cholera, plague and influenza in the whole of British India, year by year, for the last twenty years ending 31st March, 1918?"

Number of deaths from cholera, plague and influenza.

(b) Will Government state the total number of deaths from influenza alone during the current year up to 31st December, 1918?

(c) Have the Government of India issued a circular letter to all Local Governments and Administrations calling upon them to furnish full information as regards the recent attack of influenza? If so, will Government be pleased to publish the replies when received and place them on the table?

(d) Is it a fact that the medical aid available in the country was found to be too inadequate to meet the requirements of the people suffering from influenza, particularly the poor classes living in rural areas?

(e) If so, what action do Government propose to take so as to provide greater facilities for cheap medical aid to be placed within the easy reach of poor patients living in the interior, should there be a recrudescence of the disease in future, and will the Government of India consider the feasibility of appointing a Committee, consisting of officials and non-officials, to consider and recommend the means of providing such relief as would be found suitable to the needs of a poor country like India? "

The Hon'ble Sir C. Sankaran Nair replied :—

" (a) A statement* is laid on the table detailing the number of deaths in British India that have been ascribed to cholera and plague, year by year from 1898 to 1917. Similar information is not available regarding influenza, but it may be stated that, prior to the 1918 pandemic, influenza, had been a very insignificant cause of mortality during the last twenty years.

(b) Complete statistical data are not yet available, and such as have been received deal with a period ending November 30, by which date the epidemic had all but ceased in most parts of the country. It is estimated that the total influenza mortality for British India during 1918 very closely approximates five millions. Such information as we at present possess is discussed in a report* by the Sanitary Commissioner with the Government of India which is placed on the table.

(c) The reply is in the affirmative.

Such replies* from Local Governments as have been printed are placed on the table: the remainder will be placed on the table when printed. In the case of some of the minor Administrations, it appears unnecessary to print the reports, but they are open to inspection by the Hon'ble Member.

(d) The reply is in the affirmative. The recent epidemic was without parallel in the history of disease, and the inadequacy of medical arrangements to cope with the outbreak was subjected to criticism in most countries that were severely affected.

(e) In the event of a recurrence of such an appalling catastrophe as was the recent outbreak, no measures that this or any other Government could take would suffice to meet the demands for medical relief. In this connection also the Hon'ble Member is referred to the report written by the Sanitary Commissioner with the Government of India.

The question of health organizations for rural areas in India is at present the subject of correspondence between the Government of India and the Provincial Administrations whose replies are awaited. The Government of India are fully alive to the importance of the subject and to the necessity of expansion of health activities.

The Government of India are considering such suggestions as Local Governments and Administrations have made with regard to future possible measures for coping with any recrudescence of the disease, and are prepared to give every assistance in their power.

They do not propose to appoint a Committee such as is contemplated by the Hon'ble Member.

I cannot leave this subject without making a few further remarks which do not immediately arise out of the question put by the Hon'ble Member. It will be as evident to this Council as it has been to the Government of India from the reports received that no such terrible calamity has within recorded time fallen upon India as that which in three months of last year created appalling ravages among the population. Though the full extent of the calamity has only now become apparent, it was clear to Government from the beginning that the catastrophe was of no common order. That which could be done was done both by Government and by private agency, and Hon'ble Members have already heard in His Excellency the President's opening speech the measures which it is proposed to take for the future. At the same time there is no concealing the fact that, even had India been far better equipped than she is with facilities for dealing with the disease, the extent of the calamity could not have been circumscribed nor its intensity lessened to any considerable degree. The disease has visited practically all countries in the world; and those which have large numbers of doctors, hospitals and other means for coping with it have suffered, though it appears proportionately less than India, nevertheless to an alarming extent. It yet remains to be seen how the Indian mortality compares with that in other places. But it is doubtful whether the mortality in outbreaks of this sort can be regarded as regulated merely by the absence of facilities for coping with it. The point brought out in the report which is laid on the table is the peculiar susceptibility of Indians to attacks by the germ responsible for pneumonia and the deadly nature of that disease among the people of this country. There can be but little doubt that this peculiar susceptibility has played a large part in determining the high incidence of this most fatal complication of influenza which certain provinces exhibit.

[1st MARCH, 1919.]

In the face of a disease distributed with such swiftness, attaining such virulence and causing such serious dislocation of our defensive system, the efforts of man may appear to be almost of negligible avail. But the almost superhuman difficulty of the task must only serve to spur us to new endeavour. We are sending two delegates to the Inter-Allied Sanitary Conference at Paris, which is expected to pay particular attention to the question of influenza. Whatever measures that Conference may commend, so far as they appear applicable to India, we shall use every endeavour to carry out. The practical teaching of elementary hygiene in schools is another matter to which importance is attached and which the Government of India consider it is the clear duty of local education authorities to promote and to render as effective as possible."

The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur B. D. Shukul asked :—

2. " Will Government please lay upon the table a detailed statement showing, province by province, the total amount of contributions made by India to help the Empire and the Allies in the shape of men, money and material in the prosecution of the war up to date ? "

Contributions made by India towards the war.

His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief replied :—

" The attention of the Hon'ble Member is invited to the answer given to the Hon'ble Mr. Patel's question on the same subject on the 26th February. As explained therein Government propose to publish, for general information, a comprehensive record of India's contributions to the war. It will not be possible, however, to furnish, in this record, separate details of the contributions of each province."

The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur B. D. Shukul asked :—

3. "(a) Are Government aware that acute hardship is being felt by the people of the Central Provinces owing to the abnormal rise in the prices of food-grains ?

Rise in prices of food-grains in Central Provinces.

(b) Is it under contemplation to remove restrictions placed on the transport of foodstuffs from one province to another or to provide reasonable facilities for easy transport of food-grains to the Central Provinces from outside by supplying wagons in sufficiently large numbers to enable the requisite quantity to be imported, and also to persuade the Railway and Navigation Companies to reduce freights ?

(c) If not, what other action do Government propose to take in the matter with a view to relieve the severity of the present situation ? "

The Hon'ble Sir Claude Hill replied :—

" I would invite the Hon'ble Member's attention to the comprehensive statement which was laid on the table on the 19th of February."

[Sir Gangadhar Chitnavis ; Sir Arthur Anderson ; [1ST MARCH, 1919.]
Mr. V. J. Patel ; Sir William Vincent.]

The Hon'ble Sir Gangadhar Chitnavis asked :—

Itarsi-Nagpur
Railway.

4. "(a) Are Government aware that there is a general desire that work on the Itarsi-Nagpur Railway, which was stopped on account of the war, should be resumed and completed ?

(b) Will Government be pleased to say if the work will soon be taken in hand and finished ?"

The Hon'ble Sir Arthur Anderson replied :—

"(a) Government recognise and share the general desire for the early completion of the Itarsi-Nagpur Railway.

(b) Construction has never been entirely closed down, but has had to be severely restricted owing to lack of material and funds ; these difficulties still remain, but endeavours will be made to bring the work to completion as early as possible."

The Hon'ble Mr. V. J. Patel asked :—

Equality of treatment of European
members of the Imperial Services.

5. "(a) Do Government propose to uphold the principle of observing absolute equality between European and Indian members of the Imperial services, who have received their training abroad, whether they have reached that service by direct recruitment or by promotion ?

(b) If the answer to part (a) be in the negative, what line do Government propose to take in the matter ?"

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent replied :—

"The question put by the Hon'ble Member raises issues of great complexity and importance. The Government of India have been giving them their earnest attention, but are not yet in a position to formulate their conclusions which will in any case have eventually to be submitted to the Secretary of State before they are published."

The Hon'ble Mr. V. J. Patel asked :—

Equality of treatment on promotion of subordinates to the Imperial services.

6. "Do Government propose, firstly, to accept the recommendation of the Public Services Commission to the effect that when subordinate or Provincial officers are promoted to an Imperial service they should be treated on terms of absolute equality in the matter of their salaries, allowances and pension with Imperial officers who are directly recruited to the higher service, and secondly, not to accept the only exceptions made to this recommendation, namely, in the cases of the Indian Civil Service and the Survey of India Department ?"

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent replied :—

"The Hon'ble Member is presumably referring to paragraph 27 of the Public Services Commission Report. The Commission did not there recommend that officers of a subordinate or Provincial service should, when promoted to an Imperial service, be treated on terms of absolute equality in the matter of salaries, allowances and pension with Imperial officers, but that 'promoted officers should be given in future the same opportunities (i.e., of promotion) as officers directly recruited . . . and should be eligible on their merits for appointment to any post in the service.'

The reference in the question to the Survey of India Department is not understood. The Commission recommended that, with the single exception of the Indian Civil Service, all promoted officers should be made full members of the service into which they are promoted.

The question of the status and emoluments of promoted officers is still under the consideration of the Government of India."

[1st MARCH, 1919.] [Mr. V. J. Patel; Sir William Vincent; Sir Claude Hill; Sir Arthur Anderson.]

The Hon'ble Mr. V. J. Patel asked :—

7. "(a) Do Government from time to time make requisitions on the Secretary of State for India for recruits for appointments usually recruited from England?"

Publications of requisitions on the Secretary of State for appointments to be made in England.

(b) If so, do Government propose to adopt a system of publishing such requisitions in future with a view to exhaust the possibilities of finding suitable recruits in India?"

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent replied :—

"(a) No Government appointments are made from candidates in England except through the Secretary of State.

(b) The possibility of obtaining suitable recruits in India varies widely according to the nature of the appointment, and the Government of India are therefore unable to give any such general undertaking as is suggested by the Hon'ble Member. It may be assumed broadly that the alternative of recruiting in India (when such a course is not prohibited by Statute or rule) is fully considered before a requisition is sent to England; but more than this cannot be said unless the Hon'ble Member will particularize the appointments which he has in mind."

The Hon'ble Mr. V. J. Patel asked :—

8. "What action do Government propose to take regarding the fears expressed and the facts disclosed in the following sentence taken from paragraph 19 of the separate minute on the Public Services Commission Report by Sir M. B. Chaulbal :—'The fear entertained as regards these services in the third group is that perhaps an indefinite length of time may be taken in 'Indianising' them and that as they become India-recruited, Asiatic Indians would not be selected for them in due proportion, and they may become like the present recruited-in-India services, in which, as pointed out later, the proportion of Asiatic Indians to Europeans and Anglo-Indians is only 23, 8.2, and 6.3 per cent. in posts with salaries of Rs200 and above, Rs500 and above, and Rs800 and above, respectively?'"

Sir M. B. Chaulbal's minute on the Public Services Commission Report.

The Hon'ble Sir Claude Hill replied :—

"The attention of the Hon'ble Member is drawn to the debate that took place in this Council on the 28th February last year, in connection with a Resolution moved by the Hon'ble Mr. Sastri. Government have nothing to add to the statements then made on their behalf by various speakers."

The Hon'ble Mr. V. J. Patel asked :—

9. "(a) Is it a fact that the Railway Board are not appointing any Indians as probationary Assistant Traffic Superintendents this year?"

Appointment of Indians as Probationary Traffic Superintendents.

(b) Will Government be pleased to state the number of Indians appointed as probationary Assistant Traffic Superintendents, the number of Indians appointed as officers on State and Company-managed Railways in British India and on Railways in Indian States, as also the number of Anglo-Indians and Europeans appointed to all such posts during the last quinquennium?"

The Hon'ble Sir Arthur Anderson replied :—

"(a) It is probable that the Railway Board will appoint three Indians as probationary Assistant Traffic Superintendents, State Railways, during the present year.

(b) During the five years 1914—1918, the Railway Board appointed 17 Indian Assistant Traffic Superintendents, State Railways. The total number of officers appointed during the above period in the different departments of State and Company-managed Railways in British India was 84 Indians and 185 Anglo-Indians and Europeans. These figures do not include officers of the Audit and Accounts Department, State Railways, who are provided by the Indian Finance Department.

The Railway Board have no information as to the number of appointments made in railways owned and worked by Indian States."

The Hon'ble Sir Fazulbhoy Currimbhoy asked :—

Protective Irrigation Works.

10. " Do Government propose to take early steps to carry out the recommendations of the Famine Commission regarding protective irrigation works by a larger expenditure towards this end from the Famine Insurance Fund ? "

The Hon'ble Sir Claude Hill replied :—

" In paragraph 538 of their report, the Indian Famine Commission of 1898 recommended that out of the annual provision of a crore and a half of rupees forming the famine insurance grant, the greater portion, if not the whole, of Rs 35 lakhs a year should be spent on the construction of protective irrigation works. This limit has since been largely exceeded, and the provision now made from the famine insurance grant for the construction of protective irrigation works, is Rs 75 lakhs. About a decade ago, it was considered that even the sum of 75 lakhs a year would not be sufficient for the protective works programme, and the Government of India decided, with the sanction of the Secretary of State, to supplement these funds from ordinary revenues outside the famine insurance grant to the extent of 25 lakhs a year. Although it has not been possible to work up to the maximum limit of 100 lakhs in any one year, the expenditure of 75 lakhs has three times been exceeded, namely, during the triennium 1913-14 to 1915-16. During the last two years, however, the expenditure on protective irrigation works has had to be restricted owing to circumstances arising out of the war, but even in these two years the expenditure exceeded half a crore of rupees, as compared with the 35 lakhs recommended by the Commission."

The Hon'ble Sir Fazulbhoy Currimbhoy asked :—

Appointment of a Committee to consider railway rates.

11. " (a) Have there been general complaints as regards the adverse effect of existing railway rates on industrial concerns in places situated away from the principal ports ?

(b) Do Government propose to appoint a Committee of officials and non-officials to consider the matter ? "

The Hon'ble Sir Arthur Anderson replied —

" The Hon'ble Member has not stated the period which his first question covers. No general complaints have been received by the Railway Board, but during the past year three specific representations have been submitted which concern indigenous industries and were applications for special reduced rates. In one case the applicants were advised to address the railways concerned as they had not already done so ; and in another, the concession asked for was not considered to be reasonable and was not granted. The third case is under reference with the railway concerned.

The Industrial Commission, as the Hon'ble Member is aware, received a certain amount of evidence bearing on this question, and its report is now under review by Government. It is not yet possible to say whether the evidence and opinions obtained will necessitate a special inquiry into the subject."

The Hon'ble Sir Fazulbhoy Currimbhoy asked :—

Licensing of Cotton exports.

12. " Have Government considered the question of licensing cotton-exports ? Will they be pleased to lay on the table papers in connection therewith and indicate the system which it is proposed to adopt ? "

[1ST MARCH, 1919.]

[*Sir Thomas Holland ; Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma ;
Sir Claude Hill.]The Hon'ble Sir Thomas Holland replied :—

" This question has been under the consideration of Government. They do not at present propose to institute any special form of control. I regret I am unable to lay any papers on the table at present."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma asked :—

13. " Will Government be pleased to state the prices of foodstuffs—wheat, rice, barley, ragi, chollam and cumbu, maize, oilseeds—and of cotton at the commencement of the war and on the most recent date for which the figures are available, in the various countries having important trade relations with India ? "

Prices of Food-stuffs.

The Hon'ble Sir Thomas Holland replied :—

" All the information* of the kind available is now laid on the table."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma asked :—

14. " Will Government be pleased to state whether any, and, if so, what reductions in the post and telegraph rates and the railway rates for the carriage of foodstuffs are possible or contemplated during the year 1919-20 ? "

Reduction in the post and telegraph rates and the railway rates for the carriage of food-stuffs.

The Hon'ble Sir Thomas Holland replied :—

" The reasons which necessitated the recent increases in post and telegraph rates were published in Press Communiqué† dated the 31st of July, 24th September and the 19th December, 1918, copies of which are laid on the table. These reasons still continue, and it cannot yet be foreseen when they will cease to operate.

There has been no general enhancement in railway rates for the carriage of foodstuffs during the war, and no reduction consequently is contemplated."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma asked :—

15. " In what districts in India have relief works been started or recommended owing to famine conditions ? "

Famine Relief works.

The Hon'ble Sir Claude Hill replied :—

" Famine relief works are started under the orders of Local Governments. So far famine has been declared only in the Ahmednagar district, the Khed and Sirur talukas of Poona, and the Dohad taluka and the Jhalod petha of the Panch Mahals district, in the Bombay Presidency, and relief works have been opened in all these areas except Dohad."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma asked :—

16. " (a) Is there any, and, if so, what difference in the customs duties obtaining in the United Kingdom and in India in respect of beer, spirit and other alcoholic liquors ? "

Customs duty on spirits and liquors.

(b) If the customs duties in India are lighter than those in the United Kingdom, do Government propose to consider the desirability of making them heavier or at least equal to those in the United Kingdom ? "

The Hon'ble Sir Thomas Holland replied :—

" (a) A statement* is laid on the table showing the customs duties levied in India and in the United Kingdom on beer, spirits and other alcoholic liquors.

*Not included in these Proceedings.
† Vide Appendix A.

[Sir Thomas Holland ; Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma ; [1st MARCH, 1919.]
Sir James Meston.]

(b) The Indian rates of duty are not materially lighter than those in force in the United Kingdom except in the case of beer."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma asked :—

Additions to Currency and note circulation since the commencement of the war.

17. "What are the total additions (if any) to the currency and the note circulation since the commencement of the war in the various countries having important trade relations with India?"

The Hon'ble Sir James Meston replied :—

"A statement* giving the information desired by the Hon'ble Member so far as is available is laid on the table."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma asked :—

Production of refined salt in India.

18. "Do Government propose to consider the desirability of steps being taken to institute scientific inquiries to ensure the production of cheap refined salt in India, so as to make her independent of other countries in respect of the same?"

The Hon'ble Sir Thomas Holland replied :—

"The Government of Madras have already produced a cheap refined salt resembling Cheshire salt and not differing greatly from it in analysis. But as duty is levied on weight and salt is sold in retail shops by measure, the vendors are reported to prefer a light large-grained salt which weighs little and bulks big.

The Government of Madras have also placed a senior Assistant Commissioner on special duty for the improvement of the quality of the salt produced in the Presidency, and have deputed another officer to study the question at the Indian Institute of Science, Bangalore. The direction of experiments at the Institute has been undertaken by Drs. Sudborough and Watson, who have also visited the Tuticorin factory and suggested a model lay-out to secure salt of the nature required.

Similar experiments are contemplated by the Northern India Salt Revenue Department."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma asked :—

Shipbuilding, etc., in India.

19. "What steps, if any, are proposed to be taken—

- (a) for the encouragement of ship-building in India ;
- (b) for the institution of a State bank for India, and generally for organising banking and improving banking facilities throughout India ; and
- (c) for the organising of a Stores Department as recommended by the Industrial Commission ?"

The Hon'ble Sir Thomas Holland replied :—

"(a) Government have already given assistance in various ways with regard to the building of sailing vessels, while the construction of river-craft, partly from imported material and machinery, has long been established ; but in the case of ocean-going steel ships, it would clearly be inadvisable to give active encouragement until India is in a position to manufacture the principal materials required for their construction, especially steel plates, which form such a large fraction of the total.

As a result of the special war efforts recently made in the United Kingdom and America to increase the output of ships in order to counterbalance the depredations of submarines, shipyards fully equipped in those countries are now greatly in excess of normal and even of visible requirements ; consequently any attempt to start building in India, which would necessarily involve the importation of machinery and materials at abnormal rates as well as the training of expert labour, is likely in present circumstances to be far from a commercial success. It would obviously be unwise to pay high prices and heavy freights for materials which would be utilised here under disadvantageous circumstances. It is hoped, however, that, in the near future, steel plates will be manufactured in India, and that supplementary industrial development in other directions also may justify the taking of measures to build ships in this country. The question is occupying the attention of various firms, and when the conditions are suitable, every reasonable help will be afforded by Government.

[1st MARCH, 1919.] [Sir Thomas Holland ; Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma ; Sir James Meston ; Sir Claude Hill.]

(b) The Government of India have under their very anxious consideration the question of the development of banking in India and the methods by which this can most effectively be secured.

(c) A final decision on the recommendation made by the Industrial Commission for the organisation of a Stores Department in India cannot be reached until the views of Local Governments have been obtained."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma asked :—

20. "Do Government propose to appoint a Committee to advise as to whether the gold-standard reserve should not be kept in India, as to the form in which it should be kept and as to what currency reforms, if any, should be undertaken, having regard to the new situation created by the war ?" The Gold-standard reserve.

The Hon'ble Sir James Meston replied :—

"The Hon'ble Member has drawn attention to matters of an importance which the Government fully recognize. The war has taught us many new lessons about currency : and the Hon'ble Member's suggestion for an inquiry will receive our very best consideration."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma asked :—

21. "Was a supplementary grant of £200,000 made for technical and agricultural education during 1918-19 ? If so, how has this grant been utilised ?" The supplementary grant for technical and agricultural education.

The Hon'ble Sir Claude Hill replied :—

"The answer is in the affirmative. Out of the total grant of £200,000, £60,000 have been allotted for technical education and £140,000 for agricultural education. The latter amount has also been supplemented by a sum of £12,000 representing the balance available from the profits which accrued from the scheme for the purchase and export of wheat on Government account. The grant for technical education has this year been given for non-recurring objects only and the distribution has been made with reference to schemes which were ready or appeared feasible. The grant for agricultural education was made with the object of starting some of the most urgent schemes for the improvement of agricultural education and in particular for the following objects :—

- (i) the establishment of agricultural middle schools ;
- (ii) the establishment of agricultural colleges where they do not yet exist ;
- (iii) the further equipment of existing colleges so as to raise the standard of training to such a level that the best students, after a post-graduate course at Pusa, would be qualified for admission to the Imperial Agricultural Service.

[Sir Claude Hill ; Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma ; Sir Arthur Anderson ; Sir C. Sankaran Nair.]

[1ST MARCH, 1919.]

A statement* showing the distribution of the allotment amongst provinces is laid on the table."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma asked :—

Railway programme
for 1919-1920.

22. " Will Government be pleased to state the money value of the orders proposed to be placed :—

- (1) in India,
- (2) in the United Kingdom, and
- (3) elsewhere

for the supply of machinery, rails, wagons, etc., required for the railway programme of 1919-20 for new expansions and repairs, respectively ?"

The Hon'ble Sir Arthur Anderson replied :—

" The money value of orders which it is proposed to place in India during 1919-20 for rails is approximately 100 lakhs of rupees, and for wagons 180 lakhs of rupees. It is believed that these figures represent roughly the manufacturing capacity of this country at present. Machinery of the kinds required by railways is not yet manufactured to any extent in India.

With regard to the United Kingdom, it is impossible at present to give the full information asked for, as advice regarding prices is not yet to hand. Orders have been placed for about 60,000 tons of rails, and though the number of wagons for which orders have actually been placed is not yet definitely known, it is probable that some 10,000 wagons will be obtained from there during 1919-20 towards meeting arrears in replacements and shortages of stock which have accumulated during the war period. Indents have been transmitted to England for some 1,200 items of machinery.

In order to meet anticipated urgent Military requirements an indent was transmitted to England in the first half of 1918 for 5,000 wagons. This order was placed in America, and it is expected that deliveries will commence early in the next financial year.

Allocation between expansions and repairs cannot be made at this stage."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma asked :—

Mortality from influenza in India.

23. " Will Government be pleased to state—

- (a) the total mortality in India from the influenza epidemic, or, if no separate figures are available, the total mortality from fevers generally since the first appearance of the epidemic in India ;
- (b) the total number of villages and towns in which the epidemic appeared and in how many of such places organised medical help under the British allopathic system or any other system was available ; and
- (c) whether any reports have been received that persons affected by influenza suffered or died owing to insufficient nourishment ?"

The Hon'ble Sir C. Sankaran Nair replied :—

" (a) The estimated total mortality caused by the influenza epidemic in British India closely approximates five millions. Full reports have not been received from all the Native States but it is feared that the influenza mortality therein fell little, if at all, short of one million.

[1ST MARCH, 1919.]

[Sir C. Sankaran Nair; Rai Sita Nath Ray Bahadur; His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief; Sir Arthur Anderson.]

The figures for British India represent the excess mortality during the influenza period over the mean mortality for these months, due allowance being made when necessary for mortality caused by other co-existent epidemic diseases.

(b) The information is not available. In the worst affected provinces scarcely a village escaped infection. The relative incidence of sickness and mortality in various parts of the country is discussed in a note by the Sanitary Commissioner with the Government of India which has been placed on the table.

(c) There is no evidence that a condition of malnutrition played any important part in India or elsewhere in determining an attack of influenza. Influenza was extremely prevalent in parts of the world where food was particularly abundant; in India the incidence was very high in the army and in certain jails and other communities where malnutrition as a factor can be ruled out. Reports from some of the Provincial Governments, however, indicate that the rural classes were in certain parts of the country adversely affected by economic conditions, such as the high price of food and the scarcity of milk resulting from shortage of fodder. It cannot be denied, then, that malnutrition, in a certain unknown proportion of cases, may have played an important part in determining a fatal issue to an attack of influenza, and that economic conditions arising out of the failure of the monsoon may have been a factor in determining a higher influenza death rate in rural areas than in towns. The possibilities of error in making dogmatic assertions in matters of this kind are exemplified by the fact that some of the most fatal outbreaks of which we have record occurred among small garrisons in military outposts where the factor of malnutrition could not have arisen."

The Hon'ble Rai Sita Nath Ray Bahadur asked :—

24. " Will Government be pleased to state—

- (a) the number of Indian soldiers sent from India to the different theatres of war and of the casualties amongst them; and
- (b) the number of non-combatants sent from India to the different theatres of war? "

Indian soldiers and non-combatants sent to the different theatres of war.

His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief replied :—

A statement* containing the information asked for is laid on the table.

The Hon'ble Rai Sita Nath Ray Bahadur asked :—

25. " Do Government propose to consider the question of reducing railway fares to pre-war rates and of reinstating the facilities offered to the public in the matter of reduced fares for return tickets and reserved accommodation? "

Reduction of railway fares.

The Hon'ble Sir Arthur Anderson replied :—

" The Hon'ble Member's attention is drawn to the Communiqué issued by the Railway Board on the 14th December, 1918, a copy† of which is laid on the table."

The Hon'ble Rai Sita Nath Ray Bahadur asked :—

26. " Do Government propose to consider the desirability of now increasing the number of passenger trains on all the lines in India? "

Increase in number of passenger trains.

* Vide Appendix D.

† Vide Appendix E.

[Sir Arthur Anderson; Rai Sita Nath Ray Bahadur; His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief; Sir Thomas Holland; Maharaja Sir Manindra Chandra Nandi.]

[1ST MARCH, 1919.]

The Hon'ble Sir Arthur Anderson replied :—

"I have just laid on the table a copy of a Communiqué issued to the press by the Railway Board which gives full information. The number of passenger trains will be increased as soon as ever circumstances permit."

The Hon'ble Rai Sita Nath Ray Bahadur asked :—

The Indian
Munitions
Board.

27. " Will Government be pleased to state if the work of the Indian Munitions Board will be stopped after the war and the Board dissolved ? "

His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief replied :—

" The work of the Indian Munitions Board, as such, will terminate after the war, and the Board, as such, will be dissolved.

The question of maintaining certain functions, which were undertaken by the Board to meet the special conditions of the war, is now under consideration, together with the closely related recommendations which have been made by the Industrial Commission as to measures to be taken for the purchase and manufacture of Government stores."

The Hon'ble Rai Sita Nath Ray Bahadur asked :—

Reduction
foreign postal rates and inland telegraph
rates.

28. " Do Government propose to consider the question of reducing the foreign postal rates and inland telegraph rates so as to bring them down to the pre-war level ? "

The Hon'ble Sir Thomas Holland replied :—

" As India belongs to the International Postal Union, and as there must be reciprocal postage rates between countries belonging to that Union, the question of the reduction of the foreign postal rates to the pre-war level cannot be considered by this Government until the Imperial Government move in the matter.

As regards inland telegraph rates, I would refer the Hon'ble Member to the answer given to the Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma."

The Hon'ble Maharaja Sir Manindra Chandra Nandi asked :—

Improvement of the Educational Services.

29. " (a) Has any definite scheme for the improvement of the Educational Services been drawn up on the basis of the opinions of the Local Governments which were invited by the Government of India over a year ago in connection with the recommendations of the last Public Services Commission ?

(b) If the answer to (a) be in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to lay the scheme on the table, and to state when it is likely to be given effect to ?

(c) If the answer to (a) be in the negative, do Government intend to grant any temporary relief to the officers of the various minor educational services pending the delay in effecting improvements ?

(d) Will Government be pleased to state when the war vacancies in the Indian Educational Service are likely to be filled, and if it is intended to fill them by promotion of deserving officers of the Provincial Educational Service ?

[1st MARCH, 1919,] [Maharaja Sir Manindra Chandra Nandi ; Sir C. Sankaran Nair ; Sir Arthur Anderson.]

(e) With reference to the grant made by the Government of India for the improvement of secondary education, will Government be pleased to state when the schemes submitted by the Local Governments are likely to be given effect to ? ”

The Hon'ble Sir C. Sankaran Nair replied :—

“(a) and (b) The recommendations of Local Governments are under consideration, and it is hoped very shortly to lay a definite scheme before the Secretary of State.

(c) It is not clear which services are included under the expression ‘Minor Educational Services.’ Presumably those below the Provincial Educational Service are intended. The Public Services Commission did not deal with the case of these Services. But various schemes have been proposed by some of the Local Governments for improving their terms of pay ; and some of these schemes have already received sanction. As regards the higher services, whose case was considered by the Commission, in view of the delay likely to be entailed by its investigations and the framing of conclusions, personal allowances were granted in 1913 to certain members of the Provincial Educational Services whose special attainments or whose unsatisfactory position as regards emoluments appeared to justify such treatment ; and subsequently some allowances were given to members of the Indian Educational Service whose interests were prejudiced by this inevitable delay.

(d) Fourteen vacancies in the Indian Educational Service were recently filled largely by promotion from the Provincial Educational Service. Steps are being taken to fill others.

(e) Various Imperial grants have been made to Local Governments for improving secondary education. Schemes have been framed, and some of these schemes have already been sanctioned and put into operation. An account of these schemes will be found in paragraph 188 of the Quinquennial Review of the Progress of Education in India for 1907-1912 and paragraphs 210-211 of the Review for 1912-1917.”

The Hon'ble Maharaja Sir Manindra Chandra Nandi asked :—

321 “(a) Will Government be pleased to lay on the table the names of the various railway projects which are now under the consideration of the Government for immediate construction, together with their mileage and estimated costs ? Railway Projects.

(b) Is there any probability of taking in hand at once the construction of any railway line connecting India with Burma ? ”

The Hon'ble Sir Arthur Anderson replied :—

“(a) Two lists* of Railway projects which are under consideration by the Railway Board for early construction are placed on the table.

List I shows lines, which, if built, will be financed as part of the general Railway Programme

List II shows lines projected by promoters under Branch line terms or by District Boards Government are unable to say when it will be possible to commence all or any of the above railways, as it is probable that all railway materials which are likely to be available, will, for sometime to come, be required for renewals and increased traffic facilities on existing railways, which have been held in abeyance during the war. Moreover, construction of lines to be financed by Government must also depend on the provision of funds, and in view of the urgent requirements of open lines, the money available for new construction is likely to be limited for some little time to come.

* Not included in these Proceedings.

[Sir Arthur Anderson; Maharaja Sir Manindra Chandra Nandi; Sir Thomas Holland.] [1ST MARCH, 1919.]

(b) I cannot hold out to the Hon'ble Member any hope of the early completion of a railway line connecting India with Burma, but during the present cold weather a detailed survey of the section, Chittagong to Akyab, is being completed and the results of a previous survey from Pyinmana to Magway are being revised. If a connection between India and Burma were ultimately made by the coast routes, these sections would form part of the connection."

The Hon'ble Maharaja Sir Manindra Chandra Nandi asked :—

Establishment of Central and Provincial Industrial Boards.

31. "(a) Will Government be pleased to state the probable time for the establishment of Central and Provincial Industrial Boards as recommended by the recent Indian Industries Commission ?

(b) Do Government propose to consider the advisability of having a strong leaven of the Indian element in all the above Boards ?"

The Hon'ble Sir Thomas Holland replied :—

"I would refer the Hon'ble Member to the reply given on the 6th February last to a question by the Hon'ble Rai Bahadur B. D. Shukul regarding the recommendations of the Industrial Commission. It is obvious that until final conclusions can be reached with regard to the main proposals of the Commission, it is impossible for me to give any definite information regarding the creation of Industrial Boards. The Hon'ble Member will, I am sure, understand that the constitution of Provincial Boards would in any case be entirely a matter for Local Governments."

The Hon'ble Maharaja Sir Manindra Chandra Nandi asked :—

Recruitment for the Carriage and Wagon Departments at Kharagpur.

32. "(a) Is it a fact that the authorities of the Bengal Nagpur Railway have recently been advertising for over four hundred hands in the Locomotive, Carriage and Wagon Departments of their workshops at Kharagpur to be recruited entirely from Europeans and Anglo-Indians ?

(b) If so, will Government be pleased to state the reasons why Indian candidates were not called for ?"

The Hon'ble Sir Arthur Anderson replied :—

"I can assure the Hon'ble Member that the report referred to in the first part of his question is quite inaccurate.

The facts are that the company advertised for European and Anglo-Indian apprentices to fill—

8 vacancies in the Locomotive Department, and 8 vacancies in the Carriage Department.

Indian apprentices were not advertised for as sufficient Indian apprentices are obtainable without the necessity of advertising. It may interest the Hon'ble Member to know that at the beginning of February this year there were under training in the Kharagpur Workshops—

33 European and Anglo-Indian apprentices.

10 Indian apprentices (A grade).

160 Indian apprentices (B grade)."

[1st MARCH, 1919.] [Maharaja Sir Manindra Chandra Nandi; Sir Thomas Holland; His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief; Sir James Meston.]

The Hon'ble Maharaja Sir Manindra Chandra Nandi asked :—

33. "What measures are proposed to be taken by Government for the development of industries in India by Indians?"

Development of industries in India by Indians.

The Hon'ble Sir Thomas Holland replied :—

"Future measures for the development of industry must depend on the decisions arrived at on the Report of the Industrial Commission, which is now under consideration, as explained by the Hon'ble Mr. Ley in reply to the Hon'ble Mr. Shukul on the 6th February last."

The Hon'ble Maharaja Sir Manindra Chandra Nandi asked :—

34. "Have Government made arrangements for the manufacture of standardised cloth in the Bombay Mills? If so, when is it likely to be placed in the market?"

Manufacture of standardised cloth.

The Hon'ble Sir Thomas Holland replied :—

"As the Hon'ble Member will see from the reply given in this Council on the 19th February last to a question by the Hon'ble Sir Dinshaw Wacha, the answer to the first part of the question is in the affirmative.

March 15th has been fixed as the date on or before which the first monthly allotment of standard cloth is to be delivered by the Mills."

The Hon'ble Maharaja Sir Manindra Chandra Nandi asked :—

35. "How long is it intended to keep the Indian Munitions Board working?"

The Indian
Munitions
Board.

His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief replied :—

"The Hon'ble Member is referred to the reply just given to the Hon'ble Rai Sita Nath Ray Bahadur's question on the same subject."

FINANCIAL STATEMENT FOR 1919-1920.

The Hon'ble Sir James Meston :—"My Lord, the Financial Statement of this year, in spite of every effort to reduce its length, is still a very voluminous document, over 30 printed pages of close letter-press and figures; and as copies will very shortly be in the hands of Hon'ble Members I propose, with your Excellency's permission, instead of reciting the lengthy narrative here, to run through the chief features of the Budget and leave the Statement itself and its many appendices to be studied by Hon'ble Members at greater leisure. It is not an easy task to pick up the mantle which has fallen from such a master of Indian finance as was Sir William Meyer. His unique knowledge of the subject and his untiring industry enabled him to nurse the finances of the country through all the difficulties and novel situations of a great war; and he has left India stronger in its financial machinery and in its financial credit than at any previous time in its history. Sir William Meyer was almost the last of a school which went through a period of hard training in the days of the falling rupee when the struggles to make both ends meet were extremely bitter, and economies which would now be regarded as unspeakably sordid were the ordinary practice of the Finance Department. It is wholly unfed; my Lord, to speak of that school, as one hears it sometimes spoken of, as having been penurious and lacking in enterprise; there are very few of us to-day who realise how infinitely easier conditions are with us in the India of to-day and against what difficulties our predecessors had to strive to maintain the credit of the Indian Government in the money-markets of the world. It was their conservatism and their sense of duty which armed us to come through the last four years as we have done, and Sir William Meyer carried out to the last the stern financial traditions to which we owe so much.

11-20 A.M.

[Sir James Meston.]

"I propose now, my Lord, to take the Council through the main features of interest in the year which is drawing to a close; then to explain briefly the forecast for the next year, and finally to review, equally briefly I hope, our general financial situation. The current year has been a period of crisis and dramatic change. The first half of it was marked by great manufacturing energy, high prices and a great deal of diffused prosperity. When the year opened the long-threatened German offensive was developing in France, and India was called upon to redouble her efforts to provide men and munitions of war. Her response, as is known to this Council, was immediate. Recruiting made great strides, and under the guidance of our colleague, Sir Thomas Holland, the Munitions Board set to work in grim earnest in supplying the Allies with material, military and otherwise, of which they stood in urgent need. This tale has been told elsewhere and I am not concerned to-day with anything except the purely financial aspects of it. Its financial consequences were derived from the great manufacturing activity of the period, the heavy exports of foodstuffs and every kind of article of national importance for which England and the Allies were indenting. The first consequence of these factors was a tremendous run on our currency resources to provide the money to pay for all this vigour of production. The second was a sharp upward movement in our revenues; the harvest of our railway returns had never been so rich; and the heavy sale of bills against our exports by the Secretary of State brought us lavish gains in exchange, for Sir William Meyer had cautiously refused to budget for anything better than a 1s. 4d. rupee, and large sums were being paid into our Home treasury at 1s. 5d. and 1s. 6d. It was not unnatural, therefore, that in September last, there were expectations of a record surplus. Then came the cessation of hostilities and the scene completely changed. Military activities could not of course be curtailed all at once, but private trade was very suddenly checked. Astute merchants who had been gambling on protracted fighting and a continuing rise in prices found all their calculations upset and Nemesis descended upon much unhealthy speculation, especially in the cloth and share markets of Bombay. By this time also it had unfortunately become evident that considerable areas in Bombay, the United Provinces and other parts of India would be unable to share in the general rejoicings about peace; for the monsoon had failed badly, scarcity was imminent, and at the most critical time a fierce epidemic of influenza attacked the whole country, took a very heavy toll of the rural masses, and seriously weakened the agricultural labour power. The withdrawal of military orders and the impending shortage of supplies combined to check exports. The Secretary of State issued no more Council drafts after October, and the whole financial position began to undergo the painful transition back to a healthier and saner state of affairs. There was at first a little, not wholly unnatural, depression at the suddenness of the change; but we know that it is very largely disappearing now, and it may be hoped that we shall succeed in getting back to a healthier plane of business and finance without serious dislocation. The immediate result, my Lord, is that we have not got a bumper surplus. Nevertheless we have done uncommonly well. If it had not been for the large donation towards the expenses of the war which was undertaken by this Council last September, we should probably have closed the current year with a revenue surplus of over £8 millions in place of the £2½ millions which Sir William Meyer had budgetted for. As the donation in question, that is, the payment for an extra 200,000 Indian troops and the acceptance of a corresponding pension charge, has cost us £12½ millions this year, we shall really close with a deficit of about £4½ millions instead of a surplus of £8 millions;—revenue £85½ millions and expenditure about £90 millions. I am sure that if Sir William Meyer had foreseen this—it was quite impossible that he should do so—if he had foreseen it, he would probably have asked last year for the extra taxation which we are now seeking to impose. As it is, we must be content to take the deficit out of our cash balances, which only means that we shall have to borrow it directly or indirectly sooner or later.

“ Well, my Lord, that is the story of the year which is now coming to an end. I need not weary the patience of the Council by discussing the figures in any detail, but pass on to the year which is before us. The year in front of us cannot possibly be a period more varied or full of surprises than that which is closing. Our trouble is that we cannot prophesy. We have no experience of the immediate sequels of a great war, either on the military or civil side of the administration. We cannot foretell the movement of prices in the next twelve months; and we have nothing to show what shipping will be available for our external trade. It follows, therefore, that the yields from our customs revenue, from railways, exchange and many other heads are all far more uncertain than they usually are. The Army in particular has a financial future which it is very difficult to forecast. All that we know is, that the scale of expenditure must be very much higher than in the pre-war peaceful days. The requirements of modern armament, of much more rapid and efficient transport, of the entirely new military art of fighting in the air, all these mean money. The huge aeroplane which we have seen hovering over Delhi in the last few days is a much costlier instrument of war than its predecessors, just as the motor lorry means a good deal more than the old bullock or camel transport. We cannot resist taking our share in these developments; and I am all the more deeply indebted to His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief for the great consideration he has shown for our financial difficulties in stating his requirements for the next year. They have been placed at the very moderate figure of £30 millions; and I am sure it is only his unflinching determination to insist on economy that insures the adequacy of that figure. To it we have added £2½ millions as a special war bonus to British troops, which has just been sanctioned; the duration of this in our present exceptional circumstances it is quite impossible to foresee. We also have to add the next year's instalment of our official contribution to the expenses of the war which, as I mentioned the other day, comes to £5·7 millions; and thus we arrive at the total anticipated military expenditure of about £41½ millions net. Military expenditure thus represents just a half of our total budget of outlay for next year. Seeing that we have practically no naval charges, this proportion certainly is nothing wonderful at a time like the present. It will, we hope, decline as the world returns to the paths of peace; but none of us can hope that our military charges will ever again drop to the old pre-war standard. Turning to the rest of our expenditure the Council will find a considerable reduction in our political charges, through the curtailment of expenditure which had to be incurred on and beyond our frontiers as a direct consequence of hostilities. In many other directions savings have been possible on a smaller scale. At the same time, we have had to face the inevitable rise in wages which materially affects Departments like the Posts and Telegraphs; and we have a considerable bill, though fortunately not nearly so heavy as it would have been without the recent winter rains, for famine relief. The chief rise in expenditure however is under our provision for renewing the permanent-way and the rolling stock of our railways. For that purpose we have allowed the very large figure of £6½ millions; and I am sure that my friend Sir Arthur Anderson would gladly have taken a good deal more if he could have it. There will be, on the part of no one in this Council, any disposition to contest a provision which the tension of recent years has now made absolutely necessary. To many of us it is a standing marvel that the railways have been able to do what they have done, with a wholly starvation allowance for even their barest necessities. The exigencies of war left the Railway Board with no option, and we ought cheerfully to assist them to the best of our power in recovering the ground that has been lost.

[Sir James Meston.]

" There are of course many other items of interest in these elaborate statements, but the total result is to show that we require £85½ millions for the services of the year ; or, if we exclude the second instalment of our special war contribution, £76½ millions. We have been able to make good the smaller sum ; but without extra taxation, the higher figure was beyond us. For revenue we have taken liberal estimates, very liberal estimates ; for example, we are estimating our gross receipts from railways at 80 crores, the highest figure of its kind which has ever yet been attempted. Under Customs, in spite of the possibility of falling prices, we have taken an increase even over this year's figures, and are putting up the total to 20 crores. This includes, I ought to note, the continuation of the special duty of 6 annas a gallon on motor spirit. As the Council are aware, this duty was imposed two years ago as a war measure, and has brought a very useful addition to our revenues. I have not heard that it has done any one any harm, and consequently I shall shortly ask the Council to accept legislation for its retention for the present at least. Under Mint and Exchange we cannot expect the same windfall as we enjoyed this year. Our recoveries from the War Office will be fewer and Our Council Bills an uncertain quantity. There is also a heavy loss on our coinage to be still adjusted, for it must be remembered that we are turning out vast quantities of rupees at something less than what they cost us to manufacture. Under the head of income-tax there appears the only concession in this hard-hearted budget. It is the raising of the taxable minimum from Rs. 1,000 to Rs. 2,000 a year. With the hardship that we see all round us owing to the pressure of high prices on humble people with minute incomes, we feel that it is no longer possible to levy income-tax from assesseees who draw less than £100 a year ; and if we are going to establish a new minimum, there are great advantages in going up at once to Rs. 2,000. I will explain these in greater detail in asking for leave to introduce the necessary legislation.

" Omitting all the less interesting heads we arrive at a total estimate of revenue of £80 millions. It will be remembered that we set out to find £76½ millions, without the special contribution. This we have succeeded in doing with a considerable margin in hand. If we put aside somewhat under £1 million of this as a surplus, we are left with about £2½ millions towards the payment of our special war contribution of £8·7 millions. In other words we are still £6 millions short, and hence the necessity for our excess profits duty. As I explained the other day in Council, we hope that it will provide us with that sum net, after allowing for remissions of super-tax and income-tax, and after adequate deduction for depreciation and the other subsidiary allowances that may have to be made. I trust that this brief statement of our position, read with the figures which are being communicated to Hon'ble Members, will justify to the hilt the sheer necessity which has driven us to undertake a levy upon war profits.

" Our formal estimate thus stands at £86·2 millions for revenue, including the excess profits duty ; £85·4 millions for expenditure, and a surplus of £868,000. Those who lament the tightness of our revenue estimates will, I am sure, rejoice when they turn to the Capital Account and find the imposing figure which we propose to allot for railway developments. The biggest railway programme ever yet undertaken has been £12 millions ; the ideal figure, never yet attained, which Lord Inchoape's Committee pressed upon the Government of India seven or eight years ago, is £12½ millions. In recent years we have been down, I think, to four and five millions. For next year we propose no less a figure than £17½ millions. I sincerely hope that this is the first augury of the coming expansion of India's commercial and industrial power. It is at any rate the first step that we can take to prepare the way for that advance. In order, however, to realise our hopes in this direction, I must warn the Council that we shall be dependant once more on a substantial loan. The conditions of the loan will be announced later, when we see how the money market is likely to receive it in the slack season. We shall be glad of all the money that we can get ; but, so far as can be estimated now, we shall require at least 15 crores, and that is the figure for which we are budgetting to balance our ways and means account. There have been suggestions that concerns affected by the excess profits duty will find great difficulty in subscribing for any part of our loan. I trust that this pessimism is unjustified; and in any case I trust that our Victory Loan, as it may be described, will find friends enough in the country to prevent us from curtailing the generous programme of railway development which it is intended to finance.

"I now come to the third and last part of my story, a brief review of our general financial situation. Before embarking upon it, I would invite attention to the tale of our silver crisis last year. Very few would suspect the forbidding portals of the Finance Department of harbouring a romance—and yet the whole story of how Sir William Meyer and his trusty henchmen held the gate against inconvertibility and its attendant woes, and of how our old friend Sir James Brunyate fought our battle simultaneously in Washington—the whole story is as good as any romance. Since the days of classical mythology there has been nothing to equal the manner in which the United States descended on India in a shower of silver. To those like myself who were anxiously watching the situation from London, it seemed from week to week an utter impossibility that the Government of India could possibly escape from suspending specie payment; and yet the feat was accomplished, and India owes no inconsiderable debt of gratitude to those whose skill and tenacity averted the misfortune. The crisis however has a lesson; and that lesson is that we are on permanently unsafe ground until India learns to abandon its secular habit of hoarding money in unsettled times. India's reputation as the 'sink' of the precious metals is an unhappy one; and we all trust that in time she will outlive it. Meanwhile, Government cannot possibly go on meeting this insane demand for silver rupees, which disappear from circulation almost as soon as they are minted, without serious effects on the world price of silver, already far too high for our comfort. There is absolutely no justification for the continuing panic which has drawn twelve hundred millions of rupees from our mints during the last four years, and unless it is checked, and the hoarded coins restored to circulation, we may be forced to reconsider the whole basis of our currency and exchange policy.

"The second uncomfortable feature in our financial position is the large quantity of floating obligations, directly due to the war, which we must redeem before we can go ahead with a generous programme of remunerative borrowing. We shall have to curtail our paper currency investment and to get rid of the troublesome discount upon our notes. We shall have to meet a considerable volume of short-term bonds, cash certificates and treasury bills which had issued since war began; and for the next few years we shall be hard put to it to pay off these liabilities and keep up the supply of revenue for our current requirements.

"However, my Lord, there is no possible reason for alarm. All that has happened in the past few years may well fill us with pride and hope. We know the splendid part that has been taken by all classes in meeting a great emergency. We are, in this Department, particularly indebted to the leaders of British commerce in the great centres and to the banks:—to the Presidency Banks for the lead that they have given in supporting our big loans, and to the great Exchange Banks for the cheerful and unselfish way in which they have accepted the inconvenient restraints that had to be laid upon trade and finance in the interests of Imperial defence. We look forward to a time of Industrial awakening; and we have enormous strength in our command of raw materials. Whatever inconveniences therefore there may be in store for us, owing to the temporary difficulties which I have mentioned, will be transient and can be largely mitigated by a determined policy of economy. With this I close these remarks and lay the Financial Statement before the Council. We have come through a really great emergency. Our position is strong and with care it should grow stronger still; but there is no margin for lavish expenditure. Among its many lessons, the war has taught us all, the State and the individual alike, that we can live less extravagantly than we used to do. I trust that the lesson has come to stay; for our old familiar watchword of Economy will be just as necessary in the future as it has ever been before."

Narrative of the Honourable Finance Member

INTRODUCING THE

FINANCIAL STATEMENT FOR 1919-20.

Introductory.

"The treatment of the Financial Statement in Council will follow the same lines as last year. It is presented to-day: a general debate upon it will take place on the 7th instant; the second and third stages of the discussion will open on the 8th instant; and it is hoped that the Budget in its final form will be presented on the 21st instant. The statement this year has been made as brief as possible, consistently with the number of important topics on which it is bound to touch.

SECTION I.—THE YEAR 1918-1919.

A.—General characteristics.

"2. It is doubtful whether, in the financial history of British India, there has been a year of more diversified character or varied difficulties than 1918-1919. To understand our transactions during the twelve months, and our commitments for the future, explanations are necessary which, however briefly put, must cover a wide area.

"3. The Armistice.—Dominating all other features of the year, financial or others, was the sudden cessation of hostilities in November. The last budget was presented at a time of grave crisis for the Allied arms, when Germany was making its final and greatest endeavour to break through our line in France. The peril had the effect in India of calling forth more strenuous effort, in men and materials; and the first seven months of the year were a period of great and widespread activity. Up to the end of October, the value of the external trade of India was bigger than in either of the two previous years; the exports of food-grains, tea and gunny bags being evidence of India's material help to the Allied countries, and the imports of sugar and textiles being indicative of the high prosperity which she reaped in return. The railway revenue corresponded: and at one time it looked as if trade remittances through the Secretary of State would be heavier than the record figure of the previous year. Prices remained high, and there was much speculation based on the expectancy that this hectic energy would endure. With the armistices came a sudden change. The wheat export had stopped in September for other reasons; but cotton now fell off immediately, and there was a great slackening in gunnies. Imports of all kinds declined sharply, chiefly sugar and piece-goods. Panic fell upon the cloth market: prices came tumbling down, forward orders were cancelled and peace brought catastrophe to those who had been gambling wildly on the continuation of war. The reaction on the Government exchequer was mainly caused by the complete cessation of trade remittances to India. The Secretary of State stopped selling bills near the end of October, and since then we have lost the large exchange profits which a one-and-six penny rupee had been yielding us, while we had to go on at express speed coining rupees, and losing on them, to meet the unassuaged thirst of the people for metallic currency. All these factors will be discussed in more detail later. The cardinal point is that peace has laid its hand upon the unhealthy prosperity which the war had brought us; and we have now to descend to a more normal plane of trade and business.

"4. Scarcity.—To this painful process the chief obstacle at present is the persistently high range of prices for all the necessities, as well as the comforts, of life. The world factors responsible for high prices have been supplemented, so far as cereals are concerned, by the unfortunate agricultural situation over a large area in India. The outlook when the last Budget was prepared was generally good, although the several meteorological disturbances of the cold weather type which had appeared in January and February 1918 were all feeble and gave little rain. The weather was accordingly exceptionally dry throughout northern and central India. In the Peninsula on the other hand conditions had been unusually disturbed during January and February, and very heavy rain for the time of the year occurred in the west coast districts. The Arabian Sea monsoon appeared nearly three weeks before its normal date and gave widespread and unusually heavy rain over nearly the whole of the Peninsula for about five weeks. Its activities then began to decline and, after an appreciable improvement during the latter half of August, it merged during September into a complete break which continued till the end of the regular monsoon season. The Bay monsoon also arrived upwards of two weeks earlier than usual, and was of normal intensity. But unfortunately its activities were confined during nearly the whole season to Burma and north-east India. The average rainfall over the plains was in defect by 6·5 inches, or 19 per cent., which is the highest deficiency on record since the year 1899. The prolonged break in the monsoon adversely affected the area and yield of the principal crops. The condition of the crops now standing is on the whole favourable, especially in the northern and central parts of the country, but there is a serious reduction in area. The shortage of rain has affected most provinces, although the Peninsula was favoured with abundant rain during November and December and more recent falls have much improved prospects in the Punjab, Central Provinces and the United Provinces. The agricultural record of the closing year is therefore an unhappy one, and has entailed the usual consequences. Famine has had to be declared in the Ahmednagar district and in certain other parts of Bombay. Scarcity has been declared in 2 districts of the United Provinces, 6 districts of the Central Provinces, 11 districts and the Kathiawar Agency of Bombay. Distress prevails in Bankura, and is impending in Angul, in 5 districts of the United Provinces, 2 districts of Madras, and considerable areas in Central India. The number of persons on test works, in receipt of gratuitous relief, and in poor houses during the week ending 15th February 1919 was 128,178. Cattle are suffering even more than men, for there is a serious scarcity of fodder in the United Provinces, the Punjab, Bombay, Rajputana and the Bogra district of Bengal. Concession rates for the carriage of fodder by rail to affected areas have been sanctioned, and Fodder Controllers have been appointed in the Punjab and Bombay. All the elaborate mechanism for famine relief, well tried and now thoroughly understood, is ready to combat distress in its various forms. The approved prophylactic of agricultural loans on a generous scale has been already applied, the large sum of two crores having been sanctioned for advances in the United Provinces alone. The good seasons of recent years and the full prices paid for agricultural produce must have accumulated unusual reserves of rural wealth, and it may be expected that widespread or acute distress will be averted; but it is a sad reflection that this calamity should have befallen the country at a time when it had hoped to join in the universal thanksgiving at the end of war.

“ 5. The Influenza.—More calamitous than famine, or than a great campaign, has been the epidemic of influenza which ravaged India in the autumn of 1918. A reference to this terrible scourge was made by His Excellency the Viceroy in his speech at the opening of this session; and all that need be added is to emphasize the effect of the epidemic in weakening the capacity of the rural population to cope with their ordinary work, and particularly with the drought which simultaneously fastened on them. It has had most depressing results on rural efficiency, and has complicated the task of famine relief.

“ 6. Commerce and Prices.—In judging of the year's trade, it has to be remembered that the steady rise in prices, which continued from 1917-18 into the current year, frequently obscures an actual fall in the volume of imports or exports. Subject to this reservation we have an increase of £8 millions in the total value of private merchandise imported into India during the first nine months of the current year, as compared with the same period in 1917. For exports of private merchandise, the increase is over £9 millions. The export figures incidentally demonstrate the extent to which India was able to increase her assistance in the way of supplies to the Allied nations and their armed forces. Exports of cereals rose by over 50 per cent. to a total in 1917-18 of 5,400,000 tons valued at £86,000,000. In the case of wheat the record figure of 1,500,000 tons was reached. In the earlier months of the current year, India's contribution of foodstuffs was maintained at an even higher level than in 1917. With the failure of the monsoon, however, the exportable surplus rapidly diminished and artificial checks on export have had to be imposed. Fortunately a marked improvement took place in the food situation in the Allied countries during the summer months.

[Sir James Meston.]

"7. Our command of raw materials apart from cereals placed us in a highly favourable position until the effects of scarcity began to make themselves felt. The trade in oilseeds suffered, it is true, from the shortage of freight, which was naturally most marked in the case of seeds not essential for war purposes. But a rapid expansion has taken place in the crushing of seed for the export of oil, and there is a marked rise in prices: oil cake tends more and more to be retained for local consumption. Last year raw jute continued to decline as an export, and prices were low. In the summer of 1918 a sharp recovery took place, when it was apparent that the crop was likely to be short; and with an improvement in shipping facilities exports during the first nine months of the current year showed an advance in value of 100 per cent. on the 1917 figures. In manufactured jute, high prices appear to have restricted to some extent the foreign demand for gunny bags, but none the less this great industry has beaten all records by exporting goods to the value of £28,000,000 during the nine months April to December 1918. Record quantities of tea were exported in 1917-18 though at a somewhat less remunerative price than in the previous two years. The current year promises to be equally prosperous for the tea industry. Coffee planters have been less fortunate during the war, but should be able to look forward to the future without apprehension. Valuable new markets have been exploited and the English market has now been re-opened to Indian coffee. Exports of rubber have grown steadily during the war, though prices ruled low during the current year. The price of raw cotton reached unprecedented heights early in the current year and there was consequently a striking fall in our shipments both of the raw material and of cotton yarn. Another consequence was that the rates for country cloth became so exorbitant as to cause much hardship and discontent. With better news from the theatres of war, the holding up of stocks for still higher prices came to an end, and the whole position became easier; but there are again signs of an upward tendency. In cotton piece-goods from Indian mills, the export naturally diminished, with the high prices ruling in the local markets; but it is noteworthy that, in the first nine months of this year, a decline of 14 per cent. in the volume of export has been concomitant with a rise of 36 per cent. in its value. The net result of this brief review is to show the enormous strength that India has acquired as a producer, under peaceful conditions, of the chief necessities of life.

"8. Restrictions on trade.—With the cessation of hostilities, it has already become possible to withdraw many of the restrictions on trade which have been inevitable during the war. No one is more anxious than the Government of India to complete this process of liberation, and a word may now be said as to how far it has been possible to go in this direction and what is the position of Government with respect to the restrictions that still remain. Interference during the war with the normal course of trade has, as a rule, been undertaken in pursuance of one of three aims:—to satisfy India's own needs; to satisfy the needs of Great Britain and the Allies; and to hamper the enemy. Restrictions of the third class remain in full force. They consist in a complete prohibition of trade with enemy countries and a very strict control of trade with neutral countries adjacent thereto. These restrictions apply to other countries equally with India and their relaxation depends entirely on the decisions of the Peace Conference. Of the second class of restrictions, namely, those designed to assist the Allied cause, some are of necessity still in force. Until the food situation has become normal in the Allied countries and until their depleted industries have been rehabilitated, it is only just that they should have some form of preference in the supply of certain raw products and other necessities of national existence. The scheme for the control of tea which gave to the producer a guaranteed market at a fair price for a large percentage of his output has been maintained in the interest of the consumer hitherto, but will shortly be terminated. Control is still being maintained over mica which is an essential to Allied industry, and a system of licensing is being retained for certain other products for which a survey of the Allied demand is not yet complete. On the other hand, the restrictions on the export of jute manufactures, saltpetre, tanning materials and petrol have been removed. The control of raw and tanned hides has been very greatly relaxed subject to certain safeguards in the interest of the future of the trade. The tanning of skins is no longer prohibited and restrictions on the transport of skins by rail have been withdrawn and export ~~has~~ been re-opened. Shellac exporters have been relieved of their obligation to give preferential supplies to the Ministry of Munitions and free export of oilseeds, vegetable oils and manganese is now permitted. The prohibition on the import of motor cars has been raised. The Ministry of Shipping has already, subject to certain safeguards, terminated the Liner Requisition scheme and freights have been reduced to a fraction of their recent rates.

" 9. In the case of interference with trade undertaken in India's own interest, much has also been done. Restrictions on the transport of wool by rail and coastwise by sea, which were imposed in order to ensure adequate supplies of wool for the manufacture of Army blankets, have been removed, and numerous textile and other industrial undertakings brought under control for the production of war supplies have been freed from that control. The difficulty of obtaining supplies of manufactured articles from the United Kingdom has during the war forced many of the British Colonies in the East to look to India for the replenishment of their stocks. India herself has had great difficulty in obtaining supplies and it was eventually found necessary to establish a system of priority for demands of this nature on India similar to that instituted in the United Kingdom, and to couple with it a comprehensive set of restrictions on the exports from India of manufactured articles. With the termination of the Home priority scheme and the re-opening of exports in the United Kingdom, the necessity for these restrictions has largely ceased. The Indian priority system has, therefore, been abandoned as regards both demands from India on the United Kingdom and demands on India from the Colonies, and the great majority of manufactured articles have been expunged from our export prohibition list. Similarly in the case of drugs, for which the war produced a universally enhanced demand, the prohibition on export has only been maintained in the case of a very limited number, such as quinine, which are of vital importance to the health of the country. The failure of the 1918 monsoon has necessitated certain further restrictions on the movement of foodstuffs. The machinery for the control of rice originally set up in the interest of the Allies is now being applied to the relief of distress in India and to the distribution of supplies so far as possible to countries with Indian population. It has also been found necessary to prohibit the export of certain other cereals which formerly were unrestricted.

" 10. I may refer to one other respect in which it has not been found possible to remove the interference with the normal course of trade which Government has been obliged to effect. As this Council is aware, Government took powers during the last session to provide for the manufacture of standard cloth. Soon after this legislation was passed, the piece-goods market slumped and for some time the Act was not applied. Now, however, it has been found necessary to commence the manufacture and distribution of standard cloth in the interests of the poorest classes and I am sure that, if he were here, Sir George Barnes would like me to take this opportunity of acknowledging the willingness of the local industry to co-operate in the working of the scheme.

" 11. War Effort.—The beginning of the year witnessed the great German offensive in the West,—an offensive which had been foreseen by the Allies and to meet which every possible preparation had been made. The initial successes of the enemy were, however, great, and the situation became so critical that the Prime Minister called on India to rally again to the assistance of the Empire. How successful that effort has been is well known to this Council. His Excellency the Viceroy summoned a Conference at Delhi towards the end of April, and as a result of the resolutions passed thereat the Government of India offered to raise and train an additional 500,000 men in the twelve months commencing from the 1st June. This offer was accepted and recruitment proceeded apace. The raising of a large additional body of Indian troops involved heavy expenditure in many directions. Temporary accommodation had to be hastily provided; the recruiting and training staff had to be largely increased; the men had to be clothed, fed, armed and equipped; large bodies of men had to be moved by rail; more officers had to be entertained; and instructional classes of various kinds had to be hastily organised. I will not weary this Council with detailed figures, but will merely mention that the immediate result of this great expansion of our military activity led to an increase in our recoverable war expenditure from a scale of £60 millions in 1917-18 to an estimated expenditure of £70½ millions in 1918-19. This latter figure would have been far higher, had it not been for the decision by this Council last September to relieve His Majesty's Government of the charges of 200,000 additional troops with effect from 1st April 1918, and a further 100,000 troops from 1st April 1919. Fortunately, with the collapse of our principal enemies in October and November last, the necessity for continuing recruitment on this scale ceased. Nevertheless, the offer made by India of further assistance to His Majesty's Government has resulted in an addition of £12·7 millions to our military expenditure during the current financial year, and there will be further large sums due to His Majesty's Government next year, after which the Government of India will only be responsible for meeting certain non-effective charges as they accrue.

[Sir James Meston.]

" 12. The raising of recruits was in some ways the simplest part of the task which India set before herself. Thanks to the loyalty and martial spirit of the peoples of India and to the magnificent efforts of the Provincial recruiting boards, men, both combatant and non-combatant, were obtained in large and increasing numbers. To stimulate recruitment, it was decided to offer still better terms to the Indian Army, which had already received a material concession in the grant of free rations to all ranks from the 1st January 1917. Consequently a gratuity was granted to each man on completing the recruit's course, and in addition, to every Indian officer and soldier, a war bonus payable every six months until the declaration of peace, or until general demobilization is declared. It was, however, the provision of the necessary munitions of war which presented the most urgent and difficult problem. To meet this, the activities of the Indian Munitions Board, which had been started early in 1917-18, were expanded in every direction. Additional staff was engaged; the Army Clothing Factories were expanded; the output of the Ordnance Factories was increased; and closer control was exercised over the stocks of imported articles still available in India. After three and a half years of war, India had been almost drained of such stocks, and it was essential to conserve for military purposes the little that was left. This, however, proved quite insufficient in most cases to meet our needs, and it became necessary to stimulate the local manufacture of many articles for which India had hitherto relied upon importation from abroad. A Controller of Contracts was appointed to supervise the purchase of all foodstuffs and various other articles for the use of troops. This measure led to considerable economies, as did also the assumption of control over a number of mills which were employed solely on producing flour and atta for the Army. In order to increase the world's food supply, and in particular to reduce the enormous demands made by Mesopotamia on India for feeding the troops in that country, a large and costly scheme of agricultural development was adopted in Mesopotamia. This, too, had to be financed by recoverable advances from India, and seed grains and most of the agricultural produce had to be furnished by this country. To meet the ever-increasing strain on our Railway system due to the larger movement of troops, passenger traffic had to be curtailed. Large quantities of locomotive and rolling stocks were sent from India to Mesopotamia and the whole output of rails from Tatas' works was utilized to meet overseas requirements, though the condition of our own lines was such that rails were urgently needed to replace those which were worn out. These we had to forgo. Simultaneously India had to be prepared to meet the contingency of a strategical situation arising which would enable the Powers in the West to threaten our Northern Frontier. This new danger entailed special measures to increase the mobility and radius of action of the troops which guard our country, and thus added to our already heavy financial burden.

B.—Currency and Exchange.

" 13. The foregoing narrative gives a necessarily brief account of some of the main currents in the difficult sea through which the bark of State finance has had to ride in the current year. It will have been seen that the year was one of great activity in the production of materials of war, of much inevitable dislocation in external trade, of high prices enhanced by speculation on the chance of protracted hostilities, of much internal prosperity for certain classes of the community, and of considerable hardship for others. Wealth was pouring into India in payment for its products and its services ; but the varying fortunes of the war and the incessant rumours which preyed upon the fears of the people stimulated the immemorial practice of hoarding. Half way through the year came the dramatic approach of unexpected peace. Speculation collapsed, and new alarms replaced the old. Labour trouble developed. Simultaneously there came scarcity, grievous epidemic, and much loss of agricultural efficiency and purchasing power. Still the energy of our manufactories continued, and labour which had been devoted to the prosecution of the war was diverted into the work of demobilisation. Running through all this complication was the priority that had to be given to the needs of the British and Allied Governments and the consequent interference with the ordinary channels and methods of trade. It was the whole of this kaleidoscopic movement which was reflected in the difficulties of our currency and exchange.

[1st MARCH, 1919.]

" 14. These difficulties were fully described by Sir William Meyer a year ago, and I need not attempt to do more than bring his narrative up to date. Put briefly, the problem with which he had to contend has two aspects. First, funds had to be provided on an unprecedented scale for war work in India and in countries where Indian troops were fighting. A large share of this outlay was on account of the British Government, who gave India a corresponding credit in London. To convert this credit into remittances was the difficulty; gold was unobtainable, and silver was exceedingly scarce. Thus the repayments of our war advances continued to bank up in London, and were of little help in meeting our expenditure here. Currency had to be created; and currency could take only three forms, notes, rupees or gold. To issue notes freely without a strong metallic backing was obviously unsound. To coin and issue our relatively small stock of gold would have been wasteful to a degree; the premium upon the metal would have driven, and did in fact drive, any coined gold out of circulation immediately; it was an emergency ration rather than a currency medium. We had no alternative but to provide silver rupees in immense quantity; and this was the second aspect of the problem. The silver produce of the world had become the subject of fierce competition among many nations; the price was rising in a manner which threatened the stability of our exchange; and the actual amount which could be procured in the open market was wholly inadequate to the demands upon us.

" 15. Silver crisis in 1918.—To appreciate the gravity of our silver position, it is necessary to go back to the beginning of 1918. The absorption of rupees at that period was monotonously high, rising to over $1\frac{1}{2}$ crores in each of the first three weeks of January. At the end of February the rupee balances had fallen to $12\frac{1}{2}$ crores, a point which in previous years would have been regarded, in the absence of large supplies of silver available for further coinage, as marking a position of grave danger. March saw no improvement, and on the closing day of the financial year the silver balances had been brought to under $10\frac{1}{2}$ crores. It was clear that a serious crisis was impending and to many who followed the figures of April and saw an absorption of $4\frac{1}{2}$ crores in the first fortnight of that month, catastrophe must have seemed imminent. Our thin line of rupees had been precariously supplemented by an issue of sovereigns in parts of India where gold is freely taken in payment for the crops; but the benefit of this expedient was transient and its continuance unjustifiable. In April the position at Bombay was most critical. Rupees were pouring out to finance the cotton crop at fanciful prices. Bad news from France brought a run upon our currency offices by timid holders of our notes. Our visible reserve of silver had dwindled to insignificance, and for several days the maintenance of specie payments hung in the balance. The Mints however responded nobly to the strain, the Controller of Currency scraped together every rupee that could be spared from other parts of India, and the run upon us abated. Similar difficulty had however arisen in Madras and a minor crisis a little later at Lahore made things no easier. Every ounce of silver that could be laid hands upon was poured into the Mints; the Mints worked night and day; and yet by the end of April our rupees had diminished to $7\frac{1}{2}$ crores and by the end of the first week in June to little more than 4 crores. It seemed incredible that business could have been carried on so far below the minimum of safety; and to those of us who were watching the position in England it appeared a certainty that our paper currency would have to be declared inconvertible. Skill and audacity however prevailed and from that time onwards, with the help which had now begun to arrive from America, the situation improved.

[Sir James Meston.]

" 16. The possibility of such a crisis as I have been describing had not been overlooked by those who were responsible for the solvency of India. Their thoughts had naturally turned to America, the great storehouse of silver. The Mexican mines had been working far below their full capacity, owing mainly to political disturbances. In the United States production had been hampered by labour difficulties and the high prices of machinery and chemicals ; but their Government was still buying and seemed most likely to be able to help us. In February 1918 therefore an appeal was addressed to them by Lord Reading, who represented the serious set-back which the war efforts of India would receive if we were unable to continue rupee payments. The Government of the United States were wholly sympathetic, and almost immediately arranged to sell us 6 million⁰⁰⁰ ounces. When the crisis became still more acute in April, they offered us another two million ounces. At this end, special measures were taken to accelerate the transit of the silver thus obtained. For example, with the co-operation of the Naval authorities, the Royal Indian Marine vessel " Northbrook " was diverted to Hong Kong to bring to India a large cargo of silver which was awaiting transshipment there from San Francisco. This consignment reached India on the 4th June, and marked the turn of the tide. By that time, more substantial relief was in prospect. Ever since the middle of 1917, the United States authorities had been anxious about the payment in silver for their heavy purchases in the East, particularly their orders for jute and gunnies. For this purpose they ultimately turned to the vast inert reserve of dollars which their Treasury held as security for their Silver Certificates. In April there was introduced in Congress a Bill, subsequently known as the Pittman Act, enabling the United States Government to withdraw Silver Certificates and to borrow from the Treasury the greater part of its dollar reserve of 375 million ounces of fine silver. This measure was commended to the Legislature by a personal message from the President as a war measure of national importance, and it became law at record speed. Early in June, an agreement was arrived at between Lord Reading and the United States Government, by which the latter consented to let India have 200 million ounces of the silver thus released, on terms which no one would hesitate to describe as generous to India. I need not go into details here ; I will only ask the Council to recognise the skill and patience with which these lengthy and delicate negotiations were conducted on our behalf by Lord Reading and by Sir James Brunyate, who was at his right hand throughout as technical adviser and advocate of India's needs.

" 17. The announcement about the middle of April that the United States were arranging to help us had a marked effect in relieving anxiety in this country. It is certain that in the critical weeks of May and June we could not possibly have carried on with the low balances at our command, had we not been able to reassure the public as to the adequacy of our future silver supplies. By the beginning of July shipments of silver under the Pittman Act began to arrive in large quantities, and during the succeeding months a position of relative safety was gradually reached. This would have been attained more rapidly but for the serious difficulties with which our mints had to contend owing to repeated attacks of influenza and to the concurrent demand for small coinage. Although the return of rupees which can normally be expected in the slack season was absent, the rupee balance steadily improved throughout July, August and September, and by the end of September our stocks had risen to nearly 12½ crores. With October and the commencement of the busy season the absorption once more overtook the coinage, and by the end of November balances had fallen to 8½ crores ; this rendered it necessary for the mints, which had been endeavouring to cope with an intense demand for small coinage, to concentrate once more on the coinage of whole rupees. Special measures were taken to improve the mints' output, and a system of double shifts was instituted. I should like here to pay a tribute to the staff of both the mints for the loyal way in which they have responded to the further call made upon them, in spite of the continuous strain under which they had worked throughout the year. As the result of these measures, combined with the gradual passing away of the sequelæ of influenza, the output of the mints during December attained the enormous figure of Rs. 834 lakhs of rupees, which is a world's record, apart from a concurrent outturn of small coinage,—in all, over a hundred million pieces—and by the 22nd February our rupee balance stood at 13 crores.

" 18. Expansion of the Paper Currency.—At this point we may now leave the silver difficulty, though there is still much to be said upon it as regards the future ; and turn to the other form of currency, paper to wit, which had to be created to meet the emergencies of the year. The expansion of our paper currency, in spite of the distrust with which the rumours of war had burdened it, has been striking. On the 31st of March 1915 the net circulation, excluding notes held in the reserve treasuries, was 55½ crores; on the same date in 1917 it had risen to 82 crores, and in 1918 to 98 crores. At the present time it is about 150 crores. This inflation, in many ways unwelcome, has not been allowed to go beyond the sheer necessities of the time. High prices and the disappearance of rupees from circulation rendered the use of notes imperative, particularly for the finance of our great staple crops. In Bengal, where silver rupees had previously been almost exclusively employed for the finance of jute, the bulk of the crop has been financed in the current year by notes; paper has also been used almost wholly for the finance of the cotton crop. It cannot be pretended that this has been entirely a voluntary process. With our silver stocks at the low level to which they fell last year, it was essential to concentrate them in the head currency offices, as it would have been otherwise impossible to meet our legal liability for the encashment of notes there. Free encashment at our district treasuries was therefore no longer feasible, and we had reluctantly to withdraw that facility in a very large degree. Similarly, in order to safeguard our position at the currency offices, we were obliged, during the course of the crisis, to prohibit booking of specie by rail and steamer, and also to place an embargo on its transmission by post. However undesirable these measures may be in themselves, we can only appeal to the emergencies of the year and to the supreme importance of carrying the country through the war, and maintaining its usefulness, without a breakdown in the machinery of its financial business. Our position was intrinsically sound, and it would have been unpardonable to allow our work as producers and manufacturers of war material to be paralysed by technical currency difficulties.

[1st MARCH, 1919.]

"19. The rapid expansion of our paper currency had certain unavoidable consequences. A minor sequel was the increased demand for subsidiary coinage. In coping with this, the Mints have been hampered by the incessant demand for rupees, as well as the difficulty at one time of obtaining nickel in sufficient quantities. The latter defect should before long be remedied; but the provision of small change is at present admittedly inadequate. A graver consequence of our large note issues—and one to which several questions have recently been directed in this Council—is the discount at which our notes have been changing hands in many places. The matter is one of great concern to Government; it has given opportunities for profiteering to unscrupulous people, trading on the ignorance and gullibility of the poorer classes, with the result that hardship has unquestionably been caused to many. It is not easy to see, things being as they are, how this particular defect could be removed unless we were in a position to renew the encashment of our currency notes at every treasury in India,—a consummation devoutly to be wished for, but at present somewhat distant. Happily however signs are not wanting that the people, as personal experience tells them that notes are accepted by Government at their face value, are acquiring greater confidence in resisting improper attempts to exact commission. It would be idle to pretend that paper can ever be viewed by the ordinary villager with the same assurance as metallic currency; the whole conditions of his life make that impossible; but it is legitimate to hope that, for the daily transactions of the market, our paper currency will steadily grow in popularity. Gratifying confirmation of this hope is found in the unexpected readiness with which our new low value notes have been accepted by the public. As the Council is aware, one rupee and two and a half rupee notes were put into circulation in December 1917 and January 1918 respectively. At the close of December 1918 the value of one rupee notes in circulation amounted to 9 crores and of two and a half rupee notes to over 2 crores. The latter note has not achieved the same popularity as the one rupee pieces, possibly owing to the risk of confusion with them. The whole question of designing new and at the same time more attractive forms for our currency notes is now under examination.

"20. Control of export finance.—In his last Financial Statement Sir William Meyer referred at some length to the effect upon exchange of the huge balance of trade in India's favour and the great difficulties which had had to be surmounted in order to ensure that exports from India, of urgent importance for the war, should not be handicapped by the inability of the Exchange Banks to provide the necessary finance. The necessity of safeguarding such exports obliged the Secretary of State and ourselves, not only to adopt certain measures of control, but also to make a widespread appeal for the co-operation of merchants and others, with the object of securing that the financing of these war exports should have the first call upon the funds set free by homeward remittances. I should like here to pay a tribute to the response which our appeal met with. Everyone who is conversant with practical exchange matters knows that the control instituted over the operations of the Exchange Banks could without much difficulty have been evaded by the trading public, if motives of patriotism had not constrained them to fall in with the measures which Government had initiated. Isolated instances of evasion were, indeed, reported to us from time to time, but I am happy to say that the great bulk of merchants having foreign business most loyally co-operated, with the result that the financing of the export of wheat and foodstuffs, sandbags, and other articles which were urgently needed in Europe, was carried through successfully, and Government's grateful thanks are due to all those who, by resisting the temptation to profiteer in exchange, rendered this result possible. During the current year the former difficulties in the way of arranging for the finance of exports of urgent national importance have been practically absent, owing to the very different situation which exchange has reached as compared with what we had got accustomed to in the last two years.

[Sir James Meston.]

" 21. Movements of Exchange.—From the beginning of 1916 silver began to break away from its old pre-war level of about 26*d.* per ounce; and as it rose, exchange left the 1*s.* 4*d.* rate and painfully climbed after it. - This time last year the rupee was quoted at 1*s.* 5*d.* and silver at about 42*d.* per ounce. In April 1918 however the position was stabilised by our purchase of American silver. The reserve from which we were subsequently to draw had been held at the rate of 1 dollar per ounce, and that rate determined the price at which silver was sold to us, while our agreement with the United States Government bound us not to buy any silver at a higher price while the Pittman Act remained in force. As Sir William Meyer pointed out last year, it would be impossible for us to face a position in which we should be turning out rupees at a loss and placing a permanent premium on the export of our silver currency. It thus became necessary to fix a sterling exchange value for the rupee which would ensure that our coinage would not be liable to be smuggled out of India in indefinite quantities. Accordingly, with effect from the 12th April, the rate for Council drafts was fixed on a basis of 1*s.* 6*d.* per rupee for immediate telegraphic transfers and this rate still remains. Early in July however the weakness of the monsoon and a falling off in the normal supply of export bills seemed to threaten a fall in exchange. Business men with funds in India which sooner or later would have to be remitted to England began to consider the desirability of settling their exchange against a possible drop. There is evidence of a considerable accumulation of such funds, seeking temporary investment in India in preference to remittance to England. The reasons were various: taxation was heavier in England than here: hopes had been entertained of a further rise in exchange; money was being kept handy for post-bellum developments: and there was always the uncertainty about being able to recall spare money from England with the same promptitude as in former years. There was thus a large amount of floating capital which any threat of a fall in exchange would bring out for remittance purposes. For some time, although weakness continued, there was no real apprehension, as a similar position had arisen in September and October 1917 and had rapidly passed away. By October, however, the wheat exports had closed down, the demand for remittance quickened and considerably exceeded the supply of bills, and a new problem was definitely established. The first step to meet the situation was naturally the cessation of the sale of Councils, but this could only be regarded as preliminary to further action. In pre-war times, when no one dreamt of the intrinsic value of the rupee soaring above 1*s.* 4*d.*, the problem would have been a simple one, as it would only have been necessary to sell reverse councils at or about the ordinary gold point. In the conditions set up by the war the problem was not quite so easy. We decided, however, that, without prejudice to our future exchange policy, it was essential to maintain the stability of exchange at or about the existing rate, until such time as it would be possible to estimate more clearly the new conditions of the financial world and their re-actions upon our permanent exchange policy. Accordingly, early in November we offered to sell telegraphic transfers on London at the rate of 1*s.* 5½*d.* for immediates and 1s. 6 $\frac{1}{2}$ d. for deferreds. This announcement was, I believe, generally welcome, and it certainly had a steadying effect on the markets. A total of £3,560,000 was sold up to the beginning of December. This satisfied the immediate demand for remittance, and seemed to restore confidence. For some time subsequently the balance of exchange remained fairly even, there being quite enough demand for sterling to cover the few bills offering. More recently, the demand for remittance has again somewhat exceeded the supply of bills, and during February we sold a further small amount of sterling.

[Sir James Meston.]

C.—Revised Estimates of Revenue and Expenditure.

" 22. The peculiar features of the year find their next reflection in the extent to which our current revenue and expenditure have departed from the estimates presented to this Council a year ago. In discussing these figures reference, except where otherwise mentioned, will be exclusively to the Government of India's own receipts and charges. The provincial transactions, save in so far as they affect our ways and means position, are more properly the subjects of scrutiny and debate in the provincial Legislative Councils, and in the case of the provinces I shall therefore merely give a brief resumé of their collective transactions. On the Imperial side, it will be remembered that Sir William Meyer budgeted for a total revenue of about £74 $\frac{1}{2}$ millions and expenditure of about £71 $\frac{1}{2}$ millions, giving an Imperial surplus of rather over £2 $\frac{1}{2}$ millions. Our latest figures suggest that the revenue will be better by £11 millions, but the expenditure heavier by £18 millions. The position is thus worse than our estimate by £7 millions, and we shall close the year with a deficit of £4 $\frac{1}{2}$ millions. For this transformation the chief cause may be taken as being the liability accepted last September for the cost of the additional Indian troops. Our instalment of that liability for the current year, including the extra pension charges incurred up to date, amounts to about £12 $\frac{1}{2}$ millions; and if we had not undertaken this contribution to war expenses, our transactions for the year would have ended, it may be assumed, in a revenue surplus of £8 $\frac{1}{2}$ millions, or an improvement of £5 $\frac{1}{2}$ millions on the Budget. To this result the chief contributors would have been exchange, railways, customs and the mints; with a substantial set-off from losses of land revenue, higher military outlay, and a general rise in the expenses of our civil departments due, in some cases, to increased allowances for the higher cost of living. The more important variations are briefly discussed below.

" 23. Exchange.—As the Council is aware, our accounts are prepared on the basis of 1s. 4d. to the rupee, and my predecessor did not feel himself justified in taking credit for what we should gain by a higher rate. The position at the time was unstable, and he prudently refused to gamble on a continuance of the rate which was then in force—approximately 1s. 5d. In April however the arrangement with the United States Government, to which allusion has been made above, made it necessary to fix the sterling exchange value of the rupee arbitrarily at 1s. 6d. We have thus been able to meet our sterling obligations at a great saving in rupees as compared with the Budget provision on the basis of 1s. 4d. Per contra, we deduct from this gain our loss on the coinage of rupees which are intrinsically worth more than their legal issue price of 1s. 4d. The net profit for the year is expected to be £4·3 millions. At one time it looked as if the figure was going to be much higher. Indeed the Council will recollect that in September last Sir William Meyer hoped that the first instalment of our new war liability might be met in full out of a surplus accruing largely from this windfall. That his hope was not realised is due to the change which came over the situation at a later stage. The stopping of the sale of Council Bills in October meant that no further gain from exchange has accrued on these transactions, while the sale of "reverse Councils" has made a hole in the gain already to our credit. Furthermore, our receipts of silver will be greatly in excess of the September estimate, and the loss on coinage will be correspondingly enhanced. Had war continued, it is quite probable that our first part of the contribution would have been liquidated in the manner which Sir William Meyer hoped for; but on the other hand subsequent payments on the same account would of course have been larger.

" 24. Railways.—These have again been a great stand-by. Though we were informed a year ago that the limit of the carrying capacities of the lines had been practically reached, and that a further advance in receipts would be handicapped by the difficulties in war conditions of effecting repairs and renewals, the earnings have continued to grow, and are now expected to reach over 76½ crores against 70½ crores taken in the Budget. After allowing for some increase in the working expenses the net improvement amounts to nearly £2½ millions.

[Sir James Meston.]

Customs.—Our revenue for the current year was estimated at 16½ crores. As a result partly of continued high prices it will probably rise to 19 crores, in spite of the heavy handicap of the freight position, among the more important tariff heads contributing to the improvement being sugar, tobacco, manufactured articles and the excise duty on cotton goods.

Mint.—An improvement of £1·3 million is expected. Over one-half of this represents the profits on the subsidiary nickel and bronze coinage for which there has been an extraordinary demand throughout the year. The balance is seigniorage on rupee coinage, the volume of which has been greatly in excess of figures which could safely be taken into account a year ago.

Army.—The increased outlay on the Army in India, about £2·2 millions exclusive of the special war contribution, will be explained in detail in a later section. Briefly it has been due in the main to the unforeseen and unbudgeted operations against the Marri tribe, and to the necessity for a large mobilization on the North-West Frontier as part of the general Imperial strategy against the far-flung German menace. Contributory items to the excess have been the higher railway charges and the increased cost of food.

Scarcity.—The direct effects of scarcity are seen in the remissions and suspensions of land revenue. The drop in land revenue receipts will be most marked in Bombay (64 lakhs), the United Provinces (53 lakhs), Madras (14 lakhs) and the Central Provinces (12 lakhs). The total Imperial share of the loss of land revenue is just over £1 million, to which must be added, although they appear under the Transfer head, payments which had to be made to Bombay and the United Provinces in order to prevent their land revenue receipts from falling below a guaranteed minimum; those payments aggregate about 43 lakhs. It is not expected that there will be any excess over the normal grant for Famine Relief and Insurance. The Imperial share of actual relief measures will cost about £400,000, and the portion of the grant available for avoidance or reduction of debt will now amount to £130,000 only.

" 25. Provincial Estimates.—Under this head all that need be said is that Sir William Meyer budgeted for a small surplus of £130,000 for the provinces collectively. The gross provincial expenditure will be slightly exceeded; and there ought to be a more than corresponding increase in provincial revenues in spite of a somewhat heavy loss (£800,000) of land revenue, with the result that these are now expected to show a surplus of over £1 million. Our obligations are due to the provinces for the loyal help that they have given in a very difficult year by keeping down their expenditure, and for the many devices by which they have pursued economy.

D.—Ways and Means.

" 26. The ways and means problem in India is always a double one. We have not only to consider whether our total resources, in London and India combined, are sufficient to meet the probable calls on them; we have also to see that the money is where it is wanted; in other words, we have to consider the distribution of those resources between London and this country. It frequently happens that one of these two aspects of the problem is much more important than the other. Thus, before the war, the difficulty was usually to provide for sufficient total resources to meet capital expenditure on our productive works; there was rarely any difficulty as regards their distribution, for in most years we could always rely on trade demands being more than large enough to absorb the Council drawings by which our funds were remitted home to pay for our railway and public works material. Within the last few years, however, as Sir William Meyer has brought out prominently in connection with his last two budgets, the main difficulty with which we have had to deal has been distribution. This difficulty arises from the fact that we have had to meet, apart entirely from the expenditure finally debited to Indian revenues, cash outgoings in

[1st MARCH, 1919.]

[Sir James Meston.]

India on an enormous scale exceeding our own expenditure. These very heavy disbursements, on behalf of the Imperial and other Governments, have been repaid to us in London; and there we have recently had such ample funds that the Secretary of State was able to set aside, apart from his ordinary cash balance, a special reserve of £20 millions in order to meet liabilities likely to come upon us in future. The trouble has been that, except in so far as the Secretary of State could purchase and remit silver to us, there has been no method by which we could bring to India the large resources which we possessed in London, and in consequence we have been obliged to incur a large amount of floating debt in this country, and to borrow large sums from our Currency Reserve, measures regarding which I shall have more to say later on.

" 27. As was anticipated, these difficulties continued in an acute form during a considerable portion of the current year. Sir William Meyer estimated that, without including any provision for Council drawings by the Secretary of State, our cash outgoings in India, apart from those debited to our own Indian revenues, would amount to about £78 million. This represented mainly war expenditure on behalf of His Majesty's Government, for which we are repaid in London, and included other remittance transactions somewhat similar in character and also certain other non-revenue transactions. In the event, the funds which we have to find are expected to amount to no less than £141 million made up roughly as follows :—

	£ million.
War outlay on behalf of His Majesty's Government recoverable in London	72·7
Funds supplied for East Africa	3·3
Postal and money order transactions	4·2
Excess of Treasury Bill payments over receipts — vide paragraph 36 below	16·7
Repayment of temporary loan taken from Bank of Bombay in 1917-18	2·7
Council Bills	20·6
Cost of military stores and equipment purchased in advance of allocation to definite objects	12·7
Rupce credits for Federal Reserve Board in part payment for American silver	11·0
Remittance of gold in part payment of same	2·0
Additional takavi loans	1·4
Total	141·3

These transactions have been financed in the following manner :—

	£ million.
Receipts from Indian War Loan (inclusive of cash certificates)	37·1
Receipt of purchased silver	56·3
Surplus of revenue over expenditure in India and miscellaneous transactions	18·0
Issue of currency notes against additional investments	24·7
Receipts in India from sales of reverse Councils (£5·4 million less loss on exchange)	4·8
Reduction of balance	5·4
Total	141·3

" 28. Of the disbursements which we have had to meet, no remarks are required upon our war outlay on behalf of His Majesty's Government or the remittance to East Africa, as the nature of these has already been explained in previous Financial Statements. The amount of our money locked up in advance purchases of military stores and equipment has considerably increased during the current year. Pending their allocation to specific requirements, the cost has been charged to a suspense head. As they are so allocated, the cost will be treated as expenditure debitable to Indian revenues or recoverable from the Home Government, and, since the accumulation of stocks took place with reference to war conditions, we expect that in the coming year the lock up of funds will be very substantially reduced in this way. Apart from this, we expect even during the current year on the other side of the account to obtain an advance of £5·9 millions from the War Office against purchases

[Sir James Meston.]

so far made. The large payments on account of postal money orders are due to the continuing demand for remittance to India in this form in the earlier portion of the year. The Treasury Bill transactions will be separately discussed; in brief we anticipate that, as against ₹43½ crores outstanding at the commencement of the year, our liability in respect of Bills issued to the public will have been reduced to ₹27½ crores at its close. The only other important item on the outlay side consists of the rupee credits granted to the Federal Reserve Board in connection with the agreement under which we have purchased silver from the United States Government. Briefly, the position is that one of the methods by which we are making payment for the silver delivered to us by the United States in the current year is by granting rupee credits to the Federal Reserve Board at a rate representing approximately the cost of laying the rupees down in India—1s. 6d. to the rupee—for the purposes and to the extent required by them for financing exports from India for work of urgent national importance in America. For the rest, we are making over to the United States Government the equivalent of £2 millions in gold, and the balance which is not covered by these and the rupee credits granted to the Federal Reserve Board will be settled with the United States Government by His Majesty's Treasury, to whom the Secretary of State will make the necessary payment in London.

"29. On the receipt side, I shall touch later upon the results of the war loan. Though the proceeds of this are payable to His Majesty's Government, that payment is made in London, and meanwhile we have the use of the money received by us in India. We anticipate that we shall be placed in funds to the extent of no less than £56 million in the form of silver received either from the American Government or as a result of the Secretary of State's own purchases. This silver is, after receipt, placed in the Paper Currency Reserve and notes are issued against it to our treasuries to the extent of its anticipated rupee outturn, though a good deal of the silver will not actually be coined up until next year. Next come the funds we have obtained by issuing notes against an increase in the investment of the Paper Currency Reserve. £16 millions, or ₹24 crores, were invested in British Treasury Bills under the powers obtained in March last. The balance has been invested mainly in British Treasury Bills but partly also in Indian Treasury Bills under the powers taken by an Ordinance in December 1918 of which the Council will later be asked to continue the operation by legislation. It is desirable that I should say a few words here regarding the last mentioned transaction. Under the last Ordinance our total investment powers stand at 100 crores. Up to 80 crores of this can be invested only in British Treasury Bills; while 10 crores may be invested only in Government of India securities, and the remaining 10 crores in either British or Indian Government securities. Our actual investments in Indian and British securities other than Treasury Bills amount at present only to about 11 crores, and the rest of our investments are entirely in the form of Treasury Bills, of which about 9 crores may at our option be either British or Indian. It must be observed, however, that investment in British Treasury Bills does not increase the total funds at our disposal; the Secretary of State merely transfers the Bills from his own treasury to the currency reserve in London, while we release their value from our currency reserve in India. If however our Paper Currency Reserve here buys our own Treasury Bills, payment is made to our Treasury in notes, and our total resources are thereby temporarily increased. Of this more will be said later.

"30. I now turn to the Secretary of State's position. He has to meet in the current year the following disbursements:—

	£ Million.
Ordinary home charges, including capital outlay	22·9
Payments for silver	44
Payment to the Treasury of the proceeds of the Second Indian War Loan .	88·4
Investment in British Treasury Bills on behalf of the Paper Currency Reserve	20·7
Sterling transfers on London	5·4
Discharge of India Bonds and Railway debentures	1·8
Miscellaneous transactions	3·1
Total	181·3

[1ST MARCH, 1919.]

[Sir James Meston.]

Against this we estimate that his resources will be as follows:—

	£ million.
Receipts from Council Bills	20.9
Recoveries from His Majesty's Government for disbursements in India on their behalf at the rate of exchange of 1s. 5d. and 1s. 6d. per rupee inclusive of a recovery of £5.9 million in respect of stores charged to Suspense	86.3
Recovery from the East African Protectorate at the same rates of exchange	3.6
Withdrawals from special reserve	18.1
Postal and money order transactions	4.8
Reduction of cash balances	3.1
Total	131.3

We do not estimate that the Secretary of State will pay over to the Home Government during the current year the complete proceeds of our second War Loan, it having been found convenient to throw forward the payment of a portion to next year's budget. The net effect of these transactions will be to leave the Secretary of State with a closing balance of £7.5 million against an opening balance of £10.6 million.

"31. England and India combined.—When we consider the combined India and England position, the matter is greatly simplified by the fact that the various transactions which represent cash outgoings in India and recoveries in London, and vice versa, can be cancelled, and we have only to look at the net result of our non-revenue operations. This is shown briefly in the following statement:—

Outgoings.	£ million.	Receipts.	£ million.
Discharge of treasury bills in excess of issues	10.7	Excess of proceeds of war loan over payments to His Majesty's Government	4.2
Cost of military stores and equipment purchased in advance of allocation to definite objects	12.7	Issue of Indian Treasury bills to the Paper Currency Reserve	4.0
Imperial deficit	4.8	Withdrawal from Special Reserve	13.1
Capital outlay on:—		Recovery from War Office in respect of stores charged to the Suspense head	5.0
Railways	4.4
Irrigation	0.8
Delhi	0.8
	5.0
Discharge of debt (inclusive of railway debentures and temporary loan from Bank of Bombay)	4.6	Provincial surplus	1.1
Net issues of Imperial and Provincial loans	1.3	Net deposits into Savings Banks and miscellaneous transactions	1.8
	38.6		30.1

The difference will be met by a reduction in our total cash balances from £25.9 millions at the commencement to £17.4 millions at the close of the year.

E.—Borrowing and the Money Market.

"32. The War Loan.—It will have been seen from the figures just mentioned how greatly our position was helped by the success of the Second Indian War Loan. The receipts from the main section of the loan amounted to ₹51½ crores and those from the Post Office section to over ₹5½ crores, making a total of ₹57 crores, or £38 millions. Though we did not, as on the previous occasion, offer any conversion rights in respect of past loans, the terms of the 1918 loan were undoubtedly more attractive than those given in 1917 since, in addition to 3 and 5-year War Bonds, we also offered 7 and 10-year Bonds bearing the same rate of 5½ per cent. free of income-tax and repayable at the rate of Rs 103 and 105 respectively. That the 10-year Bonds proved a great attraction to investors is clear from the fact that over 40 per cent. of the loan was taken in the form of these Bonds, which are already changing hands at Rs 101 or thereabouts. While the attractiveness of the loan as an investment has no doubt had much to do with its success, nothing like the same amount would have been obtained but for the patriotic and most valuable assistance rendered by a host of willing co-operators throughout the country, from captains of industry like our honourable friend Mr. Ironside down to the humblest workers in the villages.

[Sir James Meston.]

“ 33. The success of the loan suggests certain natural reflections. Apart from the actual amount realized, the most encouraging feature of these operations has been the enormous increase in the number of people throughout the country who have become holders of Government securities. In the 1917 loan the number of investors, excluding purchasers of Cash Certificates, was 155,103; in the 1918 loan the subscribers number no less than 227,706. It is clearly of the highest importance that we should do all we can to retain, and if possible increase, our new clientèle and so foster the seed which we hope we have sown. In the first place, India, if she is to exploit to the full her vast natural resources, will require a large outlay of capital both by the Government and by private enterprise, and for this purpose a steady stream of investment within India is essential. Secondly, the gradual spread throughout the country of a habit of investment will help to divert to fruitful purposes India's sterile hoard of precious metals, to the mutual advantage of the individual and the State. Thirdly, the effect of the substitution of investment for hoarding will minimise India's demands for future additions to her metallic currency and thus help to solve one of the most pressing problems in front of us. Progress in this direction must, I need hardly say, go hand in hand with the very necessary development and extension of banking facilities.

“ 34. I should like in connection with the loan to mention that the Government has been doing what it can to adapt the previous procedure for the issue of its loans to the circumstances of the small investor. Previous to the issue of the 1917 war loan, subscriptions to our annual loans were for the most part confined to a few Banks and financial houses, the loans being allotted on tender. The former procedure, involving as it did the submission of application forms and the issue of allotment letters and so forth, was found to be quite unsuited to a loan of the magnitude of that floated in 1917. There was accordingly devised, with the co-operation of the Presidency Banks, a new and greatly simplified procedure whereby at most important centres scrip could be issued over the counter, and at other places after a very short delay by the Accountant General, instead of its issue being concentrated at the Public Debt Office in Calcutta. I need not go into any great detail with regard to these arrangements, as they are fully described in a very interesting report on the 1918 loan by our Controller of Currency. I may however add that we are also considering the possibility of further adapting the law and procedure relating to our securities, by the elimination of irksome formalities, so as to meet the new situation which has arisen from the enormous addition to the number of our creditors.

“ 35. Cash Certificates.—The figures given above do not include Cash Certificates. The results of these may at first sight be regarded as disappointing. We had a net receipt in 1917-18 of about £6 millions. During the current year we expect that, as against fresh certificates issued to the value of £2.1 millions, those presented for payment will amount to £2.5 millions, or, in other words, that there will be a net payment of about £½ million. It would seem that in the operations of the first war loan the zeal of the canvassers occasionally outran their discretion, with the result that in some areas those who took up certificates presented them not long afterwards for encashment in considerable quantities. Apart, however, from this, it is not unnatural that in a year of scarcity some proportion of those having their funds invested in this way should have found it convenient to realize them. The present indications are that the weaker holders are in the process of being eliminated; while, therefore, we estimate that in the coming year the receipts and payments will balance each other, we can hope that gradually the merits of the Cash Certificate as a form of investment for the small man will be more and more generally appreciated.

[Sir James Meston.]

" 36. Treasury Bills and Bank advances.—Another important item in our financial operations was the further issue of Indian Treasury Bills. At the commencement of the year the bills outstanding amounted to Rs 43½ crores, against which we anticipate that the outstandings at the close of the year will be about Rs 34 crores, inclusive of Rs 6½ crores issued to our Paper Currency Reserve. When the year opened we were faced with heavy maturities in April amounting to Rs 12½ crores, three-fourths of which, however, were replaced by fresh sales during that month, while the remainder together with maturities of Rs 8½ crores in May were more than replaced by fresh sales before the 3rd of June. On this date the sale of treasury bills was shut down in view of the opening of the war loan campaign. While the war loan was in progress, Rs 35 crores of treasury bills were discharged and Rs 4 crores received under discount by way of subscription to the loan as the equivalent of a cash subscription. Our heavy military and other continuing disbursements in July and more particularly in August forced us not only to use up our war loan receipts as these came in, but also to look for some method of supplementing them. We were very reluctant to re-open treasury bills while war loan operations were in progress, and the extent to which Government disbursements were at that time returning to the Presidency Banks fortunately made it possible for them to assist us with ways and means advances to the extent of no less than Rs 17 crores. These were for the most part liquidated in time for the Banks to make use of the money when the trade demand of the busy season began. When the main section of the loan closed, issues of the longer-dated treasury bills were re-commenced, the issue of three months' bills being added in November, and the rates subsequently raised in January. With the tightness of money during December and January, the receipts were small, but during the last few weeks, as the general money market has eased, funds have again flowed in more freely from this source, the position at the end of the year being that, excluding Treasury Bills issued to the Paper Currency Reserve, our outstandings under this head are estimated to stand at Rs 16 crores less than at the commencement of the year.

" 37. The Money Market and Presidency Banks.—This brief account of our treasury bill operations leads naturally to a consideration of the general money market conditions during the year. At the commencement of the year the markets generally were inclined to be nervous, not merely on account of the military situation, but also particularly because of the approach of the April cotton settlement at Bombay, where the speculative transactions involved had been unusually large. Prices of cotton had risen; a squeeze for money was threatened in Bombay; and those heavy speculators whose anticipations had been falsified by events appealed to Government to intervene by fixing a maximum price to protect them from loss, declaring that unless this step was taken a general financial debacle was inevitable. Government decided that the circumstances did not justify their intervention, and in point of fact the settlement was attended by no serious crisis, and as usually happens in Bombay the period of tight money rapidly passed away. Incidentally as the result of the financial disturbance attaching to the April settlement, which recurs almost every year though not always in so aggravated a form, a more civilized system of monthly settlements has been evolved. These are understood to be working without friction and if, as may be hoped, they have come to stay, they promise to make the operations of local speculators less a matter of anxiety to the general commercial public.

" 38. The receipt of the war loan proceeds and the absence of any substantial trade demand caused the percentages of cash to liabilities in all three Presidency Banks to improve throughout July. Before the end of August, however, the Bank of Bengal began to feel the demand for the finance of jute. In the previous year, owing to the low price of the crop and the fact that the jute concerns were possessed of large resources of their own, the Bank of Bengal had been called upon to provide finance to a very much smaller extent than usual. In the current year, owing to higher prices and possibly also to the fact that many firms had invested heavily in the loan, the Bank's jute advances were fairly large and from the end of July their cash percentage steadily fell. The Bank of Bombay's cash continued to increase during August, but after that month the effect of the disbursements by Government of the large ways and means advances taken from the Bank made itself felt, and the cash dropped from Rs 14 crores at the end of August to Rs 9½ crores at the end of October. Simultaneously the Bank of Bengal's cash had steadily decreased from Rs15 crores at the end of August to Rs9 crores by the first week in November, and both Banks accordingly then raised their rate from 5 per cent., at which it stood since May, to 6 per cent. The Bank of Madras, which had temporarily reduced its rate to 6 per cent. on the 6th August, followed suit by raising its rate to 7 per cent. on the 11th November.

[Sir James Meston.]

The low level at which the cash of the Bank of Bengal and Bombay stood during last autumn as compared with 1917, and the growing tightness of money during the later months with its inevitable reaction on the ability of Government to finance themselves by temporary borrowing, have been the most noteworthy feature of the money market conditions during the year. These were in marked contrast to the conditions of the preceding year. In both years Government were making continuous heavy disbursements. At the time of issue of the 1917 War Loan there was some apprehension lest the money which Government were taking off the market should land the Banks and trade in serious difficulties. In point of fact, however, the reverse happened and perhaps for the first time in India there were clear and encouraging signs that a substantial portion of the money disbursed by Government was returning very rapidly to the Banks, from which it could again be caught up in the wheel of Government's borrowings. It is difficult to give any completely satisfactory explanation of the less favourable position in 1918. It was all the less to be expected, as prima facie the natural result of the advent and attainment of victory would be to restore confidence and to make for greater easiness in money conditions. More recently there has been some relaxation in the earlier stringency, but it is as yet too soon to predict whether a continuance of this can be counted on for the rest of the busy season.

SECTION II.—THE YEAR 1919-1920.

F.—Budget Estimates of Revenue and Expenditure.

" 39. The task of forecasting our resources and requirements for next year is unusually perplexing. On the military side there is no experience to guide us in calculating the legacies of a great war. The pace and cost of demobilization, the future strength of the army and its reserves, the new equipment which the lessons of the war will force upon us—all these are uncertain. On the civil side our external trade is largely governed by shipping, which may or may not be available, and there is thus no estimating with any confidence for our customs revenue, our gains or loss by exchange, etc. Our internal trade will be affected by scarcity and may be seriously hit by a slump in prices: hence uncertainty about our railway earnings and other important heads of revenue. After the strain and artificial conditions of recent years it is not easy to speculate how far the rebound will go or what directions it will take, and the only thing that is certain is that we must incur a large expenditure to recover the ground which has been lost in a period of severe economy. There is, however, no cause to be pessimistic for 1919-20. A depression may come in time, but we need not anticipate that it will come so soon as next year, and there is much diffused prosperity in the country which even high prices and local scarcity cannot seriously impair. We have therefore felt justified on the revenue side in taking an optimistic view of our general prospects and we have allowed for a substantial improvement in receipts under the majority of the more important revenue heads. Before discussing these it will be convenient to examine first the needs of our spending departments and to arrive at the total revenue which will be necessary to provide for them.

" 40. The Army.—For next year we trust to do without the special war provision of £1·8 millions for expenditure on our own frontiers which appears in the current year's estimates; and there is a reduction of nearly £1 million in our expected outlay on Military Works, in view of the cessation of many of the special works, including accommodation, which were called for by our greatly expanded army. But these and other economies have been outpaced by the imperative demands of military efficiency in the light of the lessons taught by the war; and we have had to accept an extra charge of over £2 millions for the war bonus to British troops. Another heavy liability which we have to face is the clearing of the war stores suspense account, which has been steadily growing up in the last few years. A large part of this will be taken off our hands by the War Office; but still a substantial quantity of the stores will have to be taken over by the military authorities in India as a nucleus for the mobilization stores which experience has shown to be absolutely necessary. As a beginning of this process we have decided to provide £1 million in next year's budget. For all the many unforeseen contingencies of a year of reconstruction, we have inserted a lump provision of only £871,000. No one can assert that this is extravagant in view of the large new up-to-date equipment which will be forced upon every modern army now-a-days,—its improved armament, its requirements of more rapid transport, and in particular its air fleet. With the most cordial and helpful co-operation of His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, however, we have decided to fix the net figure in the Budget for our ordinary charges at £82½ millions as against £81½ millions in the current year. To both of those figures have to be added the instalments of the war contribution which we offered last September. These amount to £12·7 millions in the current year and £8·7 millions in the coming year; further details being given subsequently in paragraph 52. The upshot is that for next year we have had to put our military estimates at £41·2 millions net. Although this is £2½ millions less than in the current year, it represents of course a figure considerably in excess of what we hope will be our normal military requirements in future.

" 41. Without entering into wearisome details, I may mention a few of the heads under which substantial savings are expected next year. The first of these is Political, where we estimate for a reduction of £2 millions as compared with the current year. This is due mainly to the curtailment of our expenditure in South Persia and to the omission of special political expenditure which the cessation of hostilities has happily brought to an end. Another head is Refunds, where we are budgeting for over £½ million less than in 1918-19. The bulk of this is due to the omission of a large provision made this year for the refund of advances which salt traders in Northern India had paid in during the period of high speculation in that commodity. We have also been able to reduce our customs drawbacks very materially. These were specially high in the current year, as owing to shipping difficulties large consignments intended for Mesopotamia have been sent in the first instance to India and reshipped to Mesopotamia, the customs duty upon them having had to be refunded on their re-export. Another head under which we expect a saving of £½ million is Miscellaneous; the reduction here is an echo of the war, being due to the absence of the provision which had to be made this year for losses of stores at sea on the voyage between England and India.

" 42. A few of the heads may now be mentioned under which we expect the chief increases of expenditure next year. Of these the most prominent is Famine Relief, where the Imperial share of our extra liability will be about £450,000. It is expected that the total requirements under this head will be nearly 90 lakhs in the United Provinces and 45 lakhs in Bombay, while Bihar and Orissa will require 16 lakhs and the Central Provinces over 14 lakhs. Against this, however, we have much lower figures for remission and suspension of revenue, and our betterment under that head is very substantial, close on £1 million. Another expenditure head which is growing is Posts and Telegraphs. Here we have had*to replenish stores which were depleted by military requirements, as well as to contemplate substantial improvement in pay and in postal efficiency generally. Increases in pay and wages will run through most of our spending departments, and may indeed upset estimates which we have had to frame before the full effects of high prices have been made evident.

" 43. Apart from these, and the Railway figures which will be discussed below, there is no startling variation from the position in the current year. Full details are as usual given in the Finance Secretary's Memorandum. The aggregate result is that we find ourselves obliged to make provision for Imperial expenditure amounting to £85,357,300. Our task is to provide that amount from our current revenues; and, as will be shown below, we are unable to do so without extra taxation. A few of the main heads of revenue may briefly be examined.

" 44. Railways.—The gross receipts taken in the current year's budget were, as I have previously mentioned, ₹70½ crores, against which we now expect to receive ₹76½ crores. All our experience shows a rapid and unfaltering growth of traffic, and as military requirements fall off, private demands for railway facilities will more than take their place. For next year, therefore, we propose to go up to ₹80 crores,—a figure which is regarded in the Railway Department as daringly optimistic. There will be a corresponding rise in working expenses : but the heaviest deduction will be for special renewals after the forced neglect of the past few years. Apart from the large capital programme to which I shall shortly refer, we propose to earmark no less than £6½ millions or ₹9½ crores for renewals from current revenue. It is a large sum, but the railway authorities are confident of being able to spend it profitably and it is impossible to deny either the need or the urgency for drastic renewals. We take our net railway revenue at about ₹33½ crores against about ₹40 crores in the current year.

[Sir James Meston.]

Customs.—It may reasonably be assumed that tonnage will gradually get easier next year and that the return of peace will bring down prices. The latter movement will tend to reduce the proceeds of customs dues which are levied on an ad valorem basis ; but we count upon an inrush of commodities to replenish exhausted stocks. We are consequently budgeting for ₹20 crores against about ₹19 crores expected in the current year. This assumes that we shall adhere to the special duty on petrol which is a very reasonable addition to our revenues even in peace time. I shall subsequently introduce a small bill continuing our present Motor Spirit Duties Act, which covers only the period of the war and six months thereafter and which probably would otherwise lapse before the close of the coming year. Under the majority of the other tariff heads we have allowed for substantial increases, but we anticipate a considerable decrease in (a) the export duty on rice, owing to the large diversion of Burma rice for Indian requirements, and (b) the import duty on cotton manufactures, as a result of agricultural conditions and the present disparity between European and Indian prices.

Mint and Exchange.—The gain on exchange is taken at a little over £1 million. Though high, this figure is a serious drop from what we expect in the current year—nearly £4½ millions. There are three reasons for the decline. First, there will be a large falling off in our gross receipts from exchange in consequence of the great reduction in our anticipated recoveries from the War Office against expenditure undertaken on their behalf in India. Second, we are estimating for much smaller sales of Council Bills, while there will at the same time be a diminution of the gain on exchange which we shall realise from them. This is due, not to any expectation of departing from the present rate, but to an arrangement into which we entered with the Exchange Banks during our period of financial strain. I think it is an open secret that, in consideration of their insuring the finance of exports of national importance, the Secretary of State guaranteed the six British Exchange Banks that they would be allowed to bring back to India, at the rate at which the transactions took place, funds to the extent to which they were compelled to overbuy in that connection. Third, though we do not anticipate that our actual silver coinage will be as great as in the current year, we expect that the loss on coinage to be set off against the gain on exchange will be no less ; since a considerable portion of our silver coined in the current year was paid for by rupee credits granted to the United States Government, the rate of which is so adjusted that no formal loss arises out of these transactions.

We have also again allowed for high receipts under Mint, though here too there is some reduction owing to the fact that a somewhat smaller amount of new silver will come under coinage. The estimates as they stand include provision for seigniorage on the coinage of the balance of the American silver as well as for new purchases by the Secretary of State, also for a large amount of subsidiary coinage which we expect to undertake in view of the present extraordinary demand for small coin.

Other Heads.—We provide for increases, as the result of normal growth, under Stamps, Excise and Posts and Telegraphs, after allowing in the case of excise revenue for the prevalence of famine conditions in several provinces. Under Posts and Telegraphs there will be a falling off in the volume of military traffic, but we shall realise a full year's yield from the enhanced rates introduced in the current year. We anticipate some decline under Salt as we expect further large issues against uncleared indents in respect of which duty has already been paid.

Income-tax.—The figures here will be explained in a moment. They cover however one concession—the only fiscal concession possible in this budget—which we have felt ourselves constrained to make. On none has the present range of prices fallen more heavily than the people on low salaries who are caught in the smallest mesh of our income-tax levy. There can be no question that the ₹1,000 minimum is now a serious hardship, and we have decided to raise the taxable limit of income to Rs. 2,000. We estimate that we shall thereby lose 75 lakhs or £500,000; but we shall relieve no fewer than 287,000 petty assesses, out of the total number (381,000) of people who pay the tax now. Incidentally I may explain here that as income-tax revenue is shared between Imperial and Provincial, a portion of the loss would in the absence of any adjustment fall on provincial revenues. It will, however, of course be necessary for us to make good to the provinces by assignments the amount so lost, just as we took assignments from them in respect of the additional receipts due to the enhancements of taxation effected in 1916 when these would otherwise under the ordinary classification have been credited to the provinces.

[1ST MARCH, 1919.]

45. Enough has been said to show that we are not free from difficulty with our revenue estimates, but that we have not allowed the uncertainty of the future to deter us from pitching our figures as high as prudence permits. The total result is that we get a revenue of £80,192,100 all told, or a shortage of £5,165,200 in comparison with our estimated expenditure. To fill this gap, and to give us a small surplus as a margin for the fluctuations of the year, we are asking the Council to impose a duty on Excess Profits earned in the current year. We estimate the gross yield of this duty at about £7½ millions. Against this, there will be a loss of super-tax (estimated at £1 million), since super-tax and excess profits duty will not be both assessed on the same business, and also of income-tax (to the extent of about £450,000) since a rebate will be given for the purposes of this tax in respect of the amounts paid as excess profits duty. Allowing for these losses, we place our net estimated receipts from the excess profits duty at about £6 millions, and our estimated surplus will be £868,100.

46. Revenue and Expenditure—Provincial.—The provincial revenues are taken in the Budget at close upon £37 millions, and the expenditure at a little over £38½ millions. With the conclusion of the war we felt that we could not reasonably ask Local Governments any longer to refrain from drawing to a moderate extent on the large accumulated balances which most of them have now at their credit. We therefore informed them that in our opinion additional expenditure may now be reasonably incurred upon:—

- (a) the extension of education in directions where it has been specially hampered by war economies;
- (b) the development of industries;
- (c) the repair of actual damage which the financial stringency of the last three years has caused to public institutions and services, and
- (d) purposes which, though not immediately remunerative, will secure an improved and not greatly deferred return to the State or the country at large, such as capital outlay on the development of forests, agricultural experiments and the like.

It was also added that of course expenditure in connection with the relief of distress and the like in consequence of the present agricultural situation in several provinces, whether in the form of famine relief outlay or of advances, should be duly provided for and incurred in accordance with real requirements. The provinces have taken full advantage of this advice, and it will be observed that the estimates provide for a draft on provincial balances of over £1½ millions. This does not, however, represent the full extent of the proposed expansion of provincial expenditure as compared with that undertaken in the current year, as the provinces collectively are now budgeting for an increase of £3½ millions on their revised estimates of £34·8 millions.

G.—Borrowing and Ways and Means.

47. In the remarks on the Revised Estimates it was explained how in the last few years our main difficulty lay in so arranging our funds that they would be in the place where they were required. In the coming year we hope that this problem will not recur in the acute form recently experienced, and in fact the salient feature in the ways and means programme which is now laid before the Council is the large capital outlay which we propose to undertake on our railways. Though in the past there may have been grounds for the complaints made that the importance of developing our railway estate was not sufficiently appreciated, the necessity for a more progressive policy than has hitherto been adopted had been brought home to us even before the war, and I know that Sir William Meyer had this particular matter very close at heart. The disturbance due to the war made it impossible to put that policy into action, if only because of the impossibility of obtaining material; but the Government of India had, before hostilities terminated, placed in the hands of the Secretary of State a very full statement of the requirements which they wished to be met at the earliest possible date, and the intention was that these railway requirements should have the first call on the reserve of £20 millions which was set aside at home for meeting our post-war liabilities. It is now a great pleasure to me to be able to announce that we are budgeting during the coming year for a railway capital programme of no less than £17½ millions, which is, as the Council is aware, far in excess of the largest programme (£12 millions) ever previously undertaken, and also of the maximum programme contemplated by the Mackay Committee, namely £12½ millions. This sum is of course additional to the large programme outlay on renewals from revenue, £6½ millions, included in our railway revenue budget, the inclusion of which brings our total programme expenditure up to £24·2 millions.

[Sir James Meston.]

" 48. The statement below shows the manner in which we expect to be able to finance this expenditure and the nature of our other more important non-revenue transactions, the figures being for England and India combined :—

Outgoings.		Receipts.
	(£ Millions)		(£ Millions.)
Discharge of treasury bills	8·0	Receipts of Indian loan	10·0
Repayment of assets of hostile firms held in deposit by Government	2·4	Withdrawal from special reserve	6·9
Capital outlay on—		Credits for issues of stores charged to suspense account	11·1
Railways	17·7	Reduction in cash balance of military disbursing officers, as the result of demobilization	2·1
Irrigation	0·4	Credits in respect of silver inclusive of American silver paid for in 1918-19 but expected to arrive in India in 1919-20	5·2
Delhi	0·3	Imperial surplus	0·9
	18·4	Net deposit into savings banks and miscellaneous transactions	4·8
Provincial deficits	1·6
Net issues of Imperial and Provincial loans	0·8
Payment to His Majesty's Government of balance of proceeds of second Indian war loan (at the higher exchange rate of 1s. 6d. per rupee)	8·9
	40·1		40·5

This programme contemplates the raising of a loan in India of R15 crores or £10 millions, apart from the using up of the balance of the Secretary of State's special reserve, while we expect that our resources will be further assisted by the release of funds at present locked up in the form of war stores as these pass into consumption. On the other side of the account we contemplate the liquidation of a certain amount of our temporary liabilities. We consider this most important since, apart from our treasury bills, we have a very large amount of short-term liabilities maturing in the early future, as the following statement shows :—

1920 3 year War Bonds	13 millions.
1921 Ditto	17 "
1922 5 year War Bonds	8 "
Cash Certificates, say	5 "
1923 5 year War Bonds	1½ "
Loan of 1915 can be repaid at our option in 1920	3½ "
1925 7 year War Bonds	2½ "
1928 10 year War Bonds	17 "

These figures show that, apart from Treasury Bills, we shall have War Bonds to the extent of £13 millions falling due in 1920, and arrangements will then have to be made to meet these in addition to finding further capital funds in that year.

[1st MARCH, 1919.]

[Sir James Meston.]

For the purposes of our estimates we have shown the reduction of our temporary liabilities in the form of a net payment of Treasury Bills. But it may in practice be found to be more convenient to devote a certain portion of the proceeds of our loan to strengthening our position in other ways; for example, if the trade demand for Councils exceeds the amount provided in our estimates, we shall require additional funds in India for meeting these. On the other hand, in that case the Secretary of State's balances will be pro tanto increased by his receipts from these additional drawings and he will thus have to draw to a less extent on the special reserve, the balance of which would then be available for capital expenditure in the following year.

"49. I may add that while we have entered in our estimates a sum of Rs15 crores for the loan, this must be regarded as an estimate only, as our intention is not to place any limit on the amount of subscriptions which we are prepared to accept; any sums received in excess of this amount will enable us still further to strengthen our position. Similarly the form which the loan should take, the date on which it should be floated, and its terms generally are matters which we shall have to consider further hereafter with reference to the circumstances of the time. The usual warning is necessary with regard to the amount of Councils, namely £10·3 millions, entered in our estimates. This figure is an estimate only, and the Secretary of State reserves the right to increase or diminish the amount offered at his discretion.

"50. I turn now to the position in India. As far as we can estimate it, this is likely to be somewhat as follows:—

Outgoings.		Assets.
	(£ millions.)		(£ millions.)
Military expenditure recoverable from His Majesty's Government	35·8	Proceeds of Indian loan	10·0
Remittances to East Africa recoverable from Protectorate	0·6	Credits for silver purchased in market and for balance of American silver	16·2
Council Bills	9·7	Credits for issues of stores charged to Suspense account	11·1
Net issues of Imperial and Provincial loans	6·8	Reduction in cash balances of military disbursing officers	2·1
Discharge of Treasury Bills	8·0	Excess of revenue over expenditure in India and miscellaneous items	18·0
	54·9		57·4

The figures provide for an increase in our closing balance in India, so as to work to our usual minimum working balance of about 18½ crores on March 31st, 1920.

"51. A brief statement is added to show the Secretary of State's position, including the more important disbursements which he will have to make and the resources which he will have available for meeting them. It will be seen from this statement as well as from that of our position in India that we expect a substantial reduction during the year of the expenditure which we are undertaking in India on behalf of His Majesty's Government and of the consequent recoveries to be made from them in England.

Outgoings.		Assets.
	(£ millions.)		(£ millions.)
Excess of expenditure over revenue	21·7	Council Bill drawings	10·3
Railway capital outlay	18·0
Payments for market purchases of silver and balance of payments for American silver	11·0	Recoveries from His Majesty's Government and the East African Protectorate of disbursements in India on their behalf (at 1s. 6d. per rupee)	40·7
Payment to His Majesty's Government of balance of proceeds of Second Indian War Loan (at the higher rate of exchange of 1s. 6d. per rupee)	8·9	Withdrawals from Special Reserve	6·9
Repayment of assets of hostile firms held in deposit by Government in India	2·3	Miscellaneous transactions	1·9
	61·9	Reduction of cash balances	2·1
			61·9

* Closed as a separate head from 1st April 1918—see paragraph 91 of Sir William Meyer's Budget speech of 1st March last.

The Legislative Council in its last September session decided that the Government of India should offer to His Majesty's Government, subject to the consent of both Houses of Parliament, an additional war contribution for the current year and each remaining year of the war. This contribution was estimated at £12,700,000 for 1918-19, at £14,700,000 for 1919-20, and at £7,700,000 for the year of demobilization, which was then assumed to be the year 1920-21. Hostilities have now ceased in all the important theatres of war, and the year 1919-20 will therefore be a year of demobilization. The additional contribution for next year is based therefore on the figure (£7,700,000) previously estimated for 1920-21. The contribution, however, included inter alia the assumption by India of the liability for certain war pensionary charges; for estimate purposes, this was taken at £500,000 annually. We now learn that His Majesty's Government have already disbursed a sum of £995,000 on account of the pensionary charges of Indian troops and their British officers alone; and as it is desirable that our liabilities in this respect should be adjusted as early as possible, we are increasing the contribution for the year 1919-20 so as to include the extra payment of £495,000 on this account. We have further increased the war pensionary contribution for 1919-20 by another £500,000, to provide for a provisional payment of this sum on account of war pensionary charges of British troops. Thus the total contribution in the current year will amount to £12,700,000 and for next year to £8,695,000. Deducting these special payments, the net expenditure in 1918-19 will, it is estimated, amount to £31,226,000, and for next year the provision will stand at £32½ million. The increase in 1918-19 over the Budget estimate of £29 million, apart from the special additional contribution, thus amounts to £2,226,000. The Budget, however, also included a reserve of £1,977,000 under the Army head to meet unforeseen expenditure. The excess over specific provision is therefore £4,203,000. Of this, about £1,000,000 has been or will be spent on military works necessitated by war conditions, including £150,000 for the establishment of an engineer base park at Lahore; £143,000 for improvement of frontier roads to make them fit for mechanical transport; £82,000 for work on the acetone factory at Nasik, and £83,000 on additional barrack supplies. The balance is made up of a number of relatively minor works, practically all of which are due to the war. As regards the excess expenditure of about £3,200,000 under the Army head, we have had to meet the cost of the Marri operations for which no Budget provision was made. Early in the financial year the strategical situation necessitated the complete mobilization of certain Divisions and Brigades on the frontier and the consequent maintenance of additional animal and mechanical transport. Higher expenditure was incurred also in connection with the provision of accommodation for additional troops allotted for the defence of the North-West Frontier. These undertakings are estimated to cost £700,000. The railway charges for military traffic have risen by £777,000. Following the scheme recently sanctioned at Home, we are granting increased pay in the form of bonus as from 1st February 1919 to British troops and British officers of the Indian Army forming the normal garrison in India and to certain Royal Indian Marine personnel. This is estimated to involve an extra outlay of £446,000 in 1918-19. Food charges, mainly on account of the rise in prices, account for an increase of £400,000; and a sum of £212,000 represents the additional outlay on travelling and contingent charges and hire of transport. The expansion of the operations of the Indian Munitions Board led to an expenditure of £85,000 above the Budget estimate; while the expenditure on medical stores in India and on Home stores for the Army have risen by £58,000 and £102,000 respectively, in addition to an outlay of £208,000 on aviation stores obtained direct from the War Office and adjusted in India.

[1ST MARCH, 1919.]

" 53. The receipts for 1918-19 have improved to the extent of £180,000, principally on account of sales of dairy farm produce and of stores and provisions through the agency of the Supply and Transport Corps.

" 54. The Budget provision for next year, apart from the additional war contribution to the Imperial Government, amounts to £32½ million, which is £1,274,000 more than the corresponding expenditure anticipated in the current year. The Budget for 1919-20 includes a higher provision of £2,054,000 on account of increased pay to troops in the form of bonus already referred to. It also includes £1 million as an instalment towards the building up of a reserve of mobilization war stores, which the Military authorities, in view of the experience gained in the war, consider it necessary to maintain. The Budget also includes a reserve to meet unforeseen charges of £871,000. But for these increases, the provision for next year would be £2,651,000 less than the expenditure of the current year. The largest item contributing to this decrease is a lower provision of £1,810,000 under the head "War—India," to which head all expenditure in connection with the North-West Frontier operations, port defences and coastal patrol services, Aden operations, etc., is debitable. India's liability in connection with the scheme for the expansion of Ordnance factories is limited to a single payment of £250,000, which has been made in 1918-19; and no provision on this account is therefore necessary in 1919-20. The allotment for the Military Works Services for next year is nearly £1 million lower than the expected outlay in 1918-19, in which year very heavy expenditure has had to be undertaken on special works necessitated by the war. On the other hand the provision at Home for Army stores is higher by £234,000. For Marine Home stores, including completion of the two Royal Indian Marine steamers under construction at Home, an extra provision of £215,000 is required. Lastly, as it is probable that the high prices for food supplies will continue for at least another 6 months, an additional £200,000 is required in 1919-20.

" 55. Indian Princes and others have contributed during this year £640,000 in the way of cash contributions towards the cost of the war. The total receipts, since the commencement of the war, amount to £2,100,000. Considerable sums have again been received by His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief for the provision of Ford vans and motor ambulances, the supply of comforts to the troops overseas, etc.

" 56. The payment against Indian revenues, on account of normal pay and maintenance charges of the military forces despatched out of India up to the end of 1918-19, amounts approximately to £39 millions. This sum must, however, be reduced by the cost of maintaining substituted British troops (Territorial and Garrison battalions) actually serving in India, which is a charge against His Majesty's Government. Deducting this figure, the total net contribution in the way of ordinary charges towards the cost of the war in respect of Expeditionary Forces is estimated at £22½ millions to the end of 1918-19, to which a sum of £4½ million needs to be added in respect of the coming year. In addition, as pointed out in paragraph 52 above, we are making an additional contribution of £12,700,000 in 1918-19 and £8,695,000 in 1919-20. Outside the adjustments in respect of substituted

[Sir James Meston.]

British troops, the additional outlay, due almost entirely to the war, which we have had to meet in excess of the normal net military expenditure of about £20 millions prior to the war, amounts to £40·7 millions to the end of the current year, and to £61·9 millions taking into account the estimated expenditure for 1919-20.

B.—Railways (Capital outlay).

“ 57. The following statement gives the figures of Railway Capital expenditure on State-owned lines included within the Railway Programme for the coming year and the four years preceding :—

	£	£	£	£	£

Total .	4,491,300	1,978,700	2,529,300	4,403,100	17,700,000

In the Budget for the current year provision was made for £4·2 million ; this had subsequently to be increased to £4·4 millions in order to meet the cost of certain urgent works which were chiefly required for military purposes.

“ 58. Next year it is proposed to provide £17·7 millions ; this is the largest amount that has ever been allotted to railways in any one year. During the war the amount that could be found for the steady improvement of transportation facilities which is usually carried on from year to year has been necessarily restricted, not only for financial reasons but also by the difficulty of obtaining materials. It is unfortunate that this annual improvement in our railway facilities has had to be deferred at a time when the traffic has been so heavy. Moreover, the amount of rolling stock (engines and wagons especially) which it has been possible to obtain recently has been very limited. The large arrears that have consequently accumulated have now to be made good and it is necessary to bring our railway system to the required standard as soon as possible.

“ 59. Although hostilities have ceased, the position as regards Branch Line Company projects remains much the same as it was a year ago. The difficulties attendant on the raising of Capital continue, and new construction under Branch Line terms is still in abeyance.

“ 60. The following figures show the capital outlay on all State lines up to the end of each year from 1915-16, and the net return obtained after deducting working expenses and interest charges :—

[Sir James Meston.]

The return on railway capital (excluding interest charges) was estimated in the current year's Budget at 6·19 per cent. We now estimate it at 6·84 per cent. in consequence of the increase in net railway earnings which I have already dealt with in my review of the Revised Estimate. For next year we put it at 5·51 per cent. in view of the smaller estimate of net earnings arrived at in the Budget.

" 61. The charges for interest in the current and ensuing years work out to 3·81 and 3·72 per cent. respectively on the capital outlay, so that the final net profit on railways is 3·03 and 1·79 per cent. respectively. These interest charges include certain annuity and sinking fund payments which really go to the discharge of debt.

C.—Irrigation (Capital outlay).

" 62. The financial position of our great irrigation undertakings may be gathered from the following table which brings up to date the information given in connection with previous Financial Statements. The figures are in thousands of pounds :—

" 63. The total length of main and branch canals and distributaries from which irrigation was done during the year 1917-18 aggregated nearly 65,500 miles, a length which will have been increased by some 700 miles before the current financial year closes. These channels irrigated last year an area of 25½ million acres out of a total culturable commanded area of about double that extent. The area irrigated during the current year is expected to fall short of that realized in 1917-18 by about a million and a quarter acres as a result of the serious deficiency in the rainfall. The operations of the recently completed triple canal system in the Punjab continue to expand. About 1,200,000 acres of crops were brought to maturity in 1917-18, and a further increase of 100,000 acres is anticipated during the present financial year.

[Sir James Meston.]

[1ST MARCH, 1919.]

These results are extremely satisfactory, as the system was only declared complete on the 31st March 1917.

" 64. Besides the canals actually in operation, the results of which are briefly alluded to above, there are 34 major works—new systems or adjuncts of existing ones—which are either under construction, awaiting sanction or being examined by the professional advisers of the Government of India and of Local Governments. It is probable that the great majority of these works will eventually be carried out; their construction will, of course, occupy a considerable period of time, and it has been roughly computed that if they are all undertaken they will extend the benefits of irrigation to an additional area of about 11 million acres a year. They are estimated to cost £32 million sterling and to produce a net revenue of nearly £2½ millions.

" 65. Owing partly to the continuance of financial stringency and partly to the depleted condition of our engineer cadre as a result of the transfer of a large number of the officers of the Department to military duty, no new irrigation works of any importance were sanctioned or investigated during the present year.

" 66. The investigation of three schemes of the first magnitude was continued and it is hoped that the projects will soon take shape. Of these, the Sukkur Barrage project in Sind provides for a weir across the Indus with two large canals taking off on the right and left banks of the river to supply water for the perennial irrigation of areas now served by various inundation canals. The estimated capital outlay amounts to ₹1,100 lakhs. The project for the Sind-Sagar Doab canal in the Punjab comprises a barrage on the Indus at Kalabagh and an extensive canal system. This scheme will provide for the irrigation of some 200,000 acres and will cost about ₹7 crores. The Bhakra Dam scheme on the Sutlej, also in the Punjab, is being designed to store water to a depth of 360 feet above the river bed and will provide a storage of 110,000 millions of cubic feet of water during the monsoon without affecting the interests either of the existing Sirhind Canal or of the proposed Sutlej Valley scheme. The cost of the project is estimated at approximately ₹10 crores. About 1·4 million acres will be irrigated and the dam, if built as now designed, will be higher than any in existence.

" 67. The Cauvery (Metur) Reservoir project in Madras remained under the consideration of the Government of India. The project consists of a dam at Metur on the Cauvery to store 80,000 million cubic feet of water, and of a canal 78 miles long with a connected distributary system. The works are estimated to cost 4 crores of rupees, and to yield a return of over 5 per cent. on the capital cost: they provide for the complete control of the present fluctuating supplies to the Cauvery delta system and an area of 371,000 acres of new irrigation is also anticipated.

" 68. The proposed Sarda Canal for Oudh, which is also under the consideration of the Government of India, will, if constructed, rank among the largest irrigation works in the world. The gross area commanded is over 8 million acres, of which nearly 2 million acres will be irrigated annually. The net revenue anticipated will be nearly ₹59½ lakhs, which represents a return of 9·05 per cent. on the capital outlay of about ₹6½ crores. The Sarda Kichha feeder, for which a separate estimate has been prepared, forms part of this irrigation scheme. The combined project is designed to irrigate nearly 2½ million acres and is expected to yield a return of 8½ per cent. on a total capital outlay of ₹857 lakhs.

" 69. The Sutlej Valley project was referred to a conference at which representatives of the Bahawalpur and the Bikanir Durbars met those of the Governments of India and the Punjab, with the result that an agreement was reached on the main outstanding points of principle connected with the apportionment of the available supplies of the Sutlej river between the two States mentioned; it is hoped that an arrangement acceptable to all the parties concerned will now be arrived at. This project is the largest at present under consideration, being designed to irrigate more than three million acres at a capital cost of about £6½ million sterling.

" 70. Satisfactory progress is being made with irrigation on the Upper Swat river canal which was completed last year and still more favourable results will, it is hoped, be realized now that more settled conditions have set in on the north-west frontier. The Tendula project in the Central Provinces, the Ghaggar Canal in the United Provinces and the Pravara Right Bank Canal in the Bombay-Deccan have also been opened for irrigation.

[1st MARCH, 1919.]

[Sir James Meston.]D.—New Delhi.

" 71. The expenditure during the current year under this head is expected to amount to R43 lakhs as compared with a budget provision of R40 lakhs. In accordance with the communiqué issued in June 1918 work was strictly confined to the erection of such buildings as were estimated to be required for occupation by troops and the Government of India, together with a portion of the work required to bring the central buildings to the level of the top of the basements, i.e., the level at which work could be stopped with the least ultimate loss, and the provision of the engineering services and works connoted by that programme. When the armistice was signed conditions were materially changed, and in order to prevent an untimely dispersal of labour which would have been particularly unfortunate when serious drought had caused a dearth of employment in the fields, a further sum of R3 lakhs was asked for and granted.

" 72. The grant for the coming year has been fixed at R45 lakhs, and it is hoped that work will now proceed as expeditiously as funds and the obtaining of materials will permit. The recurring expenses of the present makeshifts are adding appreciably to the cost of the new official capital of India, and furnish a powerful reason for pushing on the permanent works with all reasonable speed.

SECTION IV.—THE OUTLOOK.

" 73. The brief review of two very exceptional years which I have now attempted suggests matter for serious thought regarding our financial future. All the lessons of history teach us that, after the feverish activity of war time in a country which has been assisting in, though not the scene of, hostilities, reaction inevitably ensues. The prosperity which is built up on the production of the perishable munitions of war stands on foundations of sand and must soon collapse. The vast destruction of material wealth in the world, however its effects may be disguised during the busy period of reconstruction, must ultimately bring depression in its train, and the recovery back to normal conditions is slow and arduous. Large issues of war loans mean increased national expenditure of an unproductive type, and thus entail unprofitable taxation. The creation of money and credit, especially credit which takes the form of paper money, is a pleasant process while it lasts, but carries an inevitable sting; for every excess of paper currency has to be liquidated, and the value of money has to be reduced into accord with the needs of normal business. High prices, fostered by the curtailment of productive output, and not uninfluenced by the expanded currency, force up wages; and when prices fall again, as fall they must, capital suffers, wages have to be reduced and labour complications arise. The whole cycle of economical evils which follow upon war is a commonplace with students and needs no further emphasis. Let us see how India is prepared for the troublesome period through which the whole world will have to pass sooner or later.

" 74. The first obvious consideration is that we must get our currency habits back on to a sounder basis. It is a startling fact that between April 1915 and the present time nearly 120 crores of rupees have been added to the circulation. To provide India with this amount it has been necessary, besides using up the world's current production of silver, to deplete its accumulated stocks. Without the assistance of the Government of the United States, we should not have been able to satisfy the appetite of India for metallic currency. To anyone, who gives the subject a moment's thought, two conclusions are irresistible. In the first place, the huge sums which it has been necessary for India to pay for the purchases of silver bring home to us the wasteful and extravagant nature of what we have been doing. In the second place, a continuance of demand for metallic currency on this scale must react violently on our whole currency and exchange policy. On the question of extravagance, I need only quote here the remarks which Your Excellency made in this connection at the session of this Council in September last :

' But let me again emphasise how unprofitable to India is this lavish outpouring of metallic currency. The purchase of the silver alone means that India's money is being spent abroad to unfruitful purpose. Should the present rates of absorption continue to the end of the year, more than 100 crores of India's money will have been squandered within three short years. Had it been invested, the interest would have strengthened our revenues, and could have been spent to India's material advantage. Everybody therefore who insists on payments in metal instead of in notes is directly hampering India's interests. We all know the parable of the servant who, entrusted by his master with a talent of silver, buried it in the ground instead of putting it to profitable use. He was rightly treated as an unprofitable servant. The moral of the old parable holds good to-day. From time immemorial India has been held up to reproach as the grave of the precious metals. If she is to take her proper place among the progressive nations of the world, she must in her own interests do as Japan and other civilized nations do—put her hitherto immobile wealth to profitable uses.

[Sir James Meston.]

As regards the second point, namely, the effect on our general arrangements, it is probable that the world will be unable to continue to supply India for an indefinite period with silver on the present scale, coupled with the much more moderate demands of other countries. It must be remembered in this connection that the Pittman Act contemplates the restoration in the moderately early future to the United States reserve of the silver taken therefrom; this alone, apart from other demands, will absorb the production of the American mines for several years. With the re-establishment of normal conditions the Indian demand may conceivably subside of itself to more reasonable proportions; but if this does not prove to be the case, I would ask Hon'ble Members to recognise the problem that will face us. If the absorption of rupees were to continue at the rate of the past three years, the time must ultimately come when it would be physically impossible to purchase sufficient silver to replace them, and in that event our internal currency policy would have to be fundamentally recast. Or, if by superhuman efforts, and by outbidding all other purchasers, we were lucky enough to secure the requisite amount of silver, it is more than likely that our operations would force up the price to some giddy height, and would throw the whole of our exchange policy into the melting pot. This particular side of the problem is now being carefully examined with a view to defining our exchange and silver policy; and I need say no more upon it at present than that it brings out one of the uncomfortable consequences of war for which we are already suffering. War and its rumours revived in a highly exaggerated form the ancient Indian custom of hoarding metallic currency which we had hoped we were slowly overcoming; and until recovery in this respect sets in, our difficulties must continue acute.

"75. The second task before us is some contraction of the paper currency. Four years ago the effective circulation of our notes was under 60 crores; to-day it is close on 150 crores. It would hardly seem consistent to deplore these figures after extolling the superiority of paper over metal currency. It is also true that we have long laboured to popularize our notes. Moreover, it is comforting to know that the metallic backing of our paper circulation is very much stronger to-day than it was in the critical months of last year. Nevertheless, as we all know, many friendly critics have been disturbed by the series of Ordinances which provided for the rapid increase of our currency investment; and none of us can pretend to any affection for that form of investment into which our necessities have recently forced us; I mean, the purchase of our own Treasury Bills. This particular method of obtaining funds is easy enough, but obviously cannot be used except in emergency and with the greatest caution. Although practically every belligerent country has had to finance itself in some measure by an abnormal recourse to the printing press, warnings are now being heard on all sides about its serious consequences. Here in India, if our responsibilities for meeting war expenditure forced us to err in this direction, we certainly have sinned against the light to a very much smaller extent than other countries. The time however is now coming when we shall no longer be able to plead, as an excuse for borrowing from our Currency Reserve, the exigencies of war; and we ought to try to retire at least that portion of our paper which is represented by our own Treasury Bills. Some of us would probably like to go further and reduce the outstanding note circulation until we hear no more of forced discounts in the countryside and their hardships on the people; but it is not easy to see how this adjustment can be effected until silver comes out of hoards and resumes its duty as a circulating medium.

"76. The third and most imminent phase of the problem is the redemption of our temporary war obligations. An earlier passage in this Statement has shown the amount of short-term war bonds that are hanging over our heads. Cash Certificates and Treasury Bills must be added to these floating liabilities. The clearance of our war stores suspense account is a minor nightmare of a somewhat similar character; it probably means a liability of £6 millions at the end of next year, which we must meet by transfer at the earliest possible occasion to our revenue account. If we cannot fund these short obligations on reasonable terms—and for the purposes of government in India a 6 per cent. rate of interest cannot be regarded as reasonable—we shall have to redeem them as they mature. Simultaneously however with finding the necessary sums for this operation we shall, during the years over which it is spread, have irresistible claims upon us to raise capital for internal development, railways, industries, forests and the like. And again, during the same period we shall have to launch into very heavy expenditure for the education and well-being of the people, without which our political progress would be largely nugatory. The coming burden therefore upon our revenue resources cannot be envisaged without considerable anxiety.

“77. In saying all this I have no desire to pose as a pessimist or alarmist. Far from being a pessimist, I believe that India's control over raw materials for which the whole outside world will be contending, places her in a position of exceptional strength and will exempt her from many of the discomforts and sufferings that the period of reaction will entail upon other countries. It is wise however to face the facts. We have heavy liabilities hanging over us in several directions; debt of an unproductive character which we ought to dispose of in order to facilitate a remunerative borrowing programme in the near future; a currency position which requires careful handling and at least some withdrawal of our recent emergency issues of paper; and a general consolidation of our position with a view to the development of our national intelligence and earning power. If this teaches us anything, it is that our watchword must be rigid economy, both in the Government and in the lives of individual citizens. We shall want a relatively high scale of taxation to get rid of our superfluous obligations. If the taxes are to be paid, the people must save; unless the taxes are to be oppressive, the Government must economize. You may think that economy is a threadbare motto in our Financial Statements; but I am convinced that, coupled with courageous outlay on the essentials of progress, a strict economy in all non-essentials will in the near future be more necessary than it has ever been.

“78. In conclusion I am sure that the Council will concur with me in expressing our obligations to the staff of the Finance Department for their unceasing labour during a particularly trying year. The toil has been shared by all grades of employes in the provincial account offices, currency offices and Mints. Both our Mint Masters have shown great resource and endurance. Messrs. Gubbay and Cook have directed currency operations with skill and vigilance. Among our Accountants-General and officers of similar status it is invidious to discriminate; but thanks are specially due to Messrs. Alder, Carson and Philippe. At headquarters Mr. Howard assisted by Mr. A. V. V. Aiyar on the civil side, and Sir Godfrey Fell and Mr. B. N. Mitra on the military side, have had an extraordinarily heavy task, admirably performed. I am specially indebted to Messrs. Howard and Cook for the large share they have taken in preparing this Statement.”

CRIMINAL LAW (EMERGENCY POWERS) BILL.

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent:—“My Lord, I beg to present the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to make provision in special circumstances to supplement the ordinary criminal law and for the exercise of emergency powers by Government.” 11-54 A.M.

INDIAN PAPER CURRENCY (AMENDMENT) BILL.

The Hon'ble Sir James Meston:—“My Lord, I move for leave to introduce a Bill further to amend the Indian Paper Currency (Amendment) Act, 1917. By the law of the land (the existing Paper Currency Act of 1910), for every currency note that Government issues, it must hold bullion or coin or securities as a guarantee for the encasement of the note. The amount of securities which we could hold was restricted before the war to fourteen crores. In order to allow the rapid expansion of the note issue, which has been required by the heavy demands for increased currency during the last four years, we have had to increase the reserve of securities from time 11-55 A.M.

[Sir James Meston ; Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma.] [1ST MARCH, 1919.]

to time, as well as of cash and bullion. This process of increasing the security reserve began in 1915 and continued steadily up to a year ago, when this Council passed the latest Act VI of 1918. That Act authorised us to invest up to 86 crores. We had all hoped that this was the last enlargement of our powers which we should require to apply for, but towards the very end of 1918, the currency position began to cause us considerable anxiety owing to persistent hoarding of rupees, the disappearance of gold from circulation, and the continuous heavy military payments, as well as large advances to cultivators in the tracts afflicted by scarcity. We, therefore, had to ask your Excellency for an Emergency Ordinance giving us powers to invest another fourteen crores, thus bringing up the total of our investment power to one hundred crores. It is this Ordinance which the present Bill seeks to incorporate in our substantive law. The figure given in the Bill is eight hundred million which, it will be observed, is not the same as the hundred crores I have mentioned. That is due to the fact that 20 crores are already secured by the standing law, to which these later additions are being made. The extra fourteen crores has not been fully invested up to date, and we hope that the tide has turned and that our reserve investments will now be gradually diminished instead of further increased. My Lord, I ask for leave to introduce the Bill."

12 P.M.

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma:—"My Lord, we are much obliged to the Hon'ble the Finance Member for the hope that he has expressed that there will be no need whatsoever for any further additions to the currency, especially the note currency, that is not backed up either by gold or silver.

"We all hoped, my Lord, that, with the signing of the Armistice, the vicious circle into which we had entered with the war would be broken, and that there would be no further need for the exercise of your Excellency's powers of Ordinance-making in adding to the currency of the country which it has been feared, and rightly feared, is one of the main causes of the immense rise of prices in the country which is causing great havoc amongst the population of India. But we find that, notwithstanding the signing of the Armistice, the Government still find that they are not able to meet their current demands from taxation or from loans from the savings of the people, but that they are obliged to coin money, to coin credit, backed up by the credit of the country, without any corresponding increase in the gold and silver currency, in order to be able to meet the every-day demands of the country. We were told just now that the reason for the addition of this 14 crores of rupees was the necessity to pay heavy military charges and sundry other items of that description. Now, my Lord, I would respectfully submit that the time has come for the Government to put a stop to this policy of adding to the currency of the country, especially to the currency unsupported by gold or silver. There is no exaggeration in my statement that the currency policy of the Government, however it may have been necessitated by the war, has brought us to a serious position of material deviation from the previous standards and established maxims of the Bank Act of 1844, that every rupee-note, that is coined must have bullion or silver, except to a very small extent in the shape of securities, in the currency chest. We had in 1913, 88 crores of notes, 56 in active circulation, and we had 54 crores of rupees either in gold or silver, 38 in gold and 16 in silver roughly. The total currency at that time, my Lord, was 225 crores. We have doubled it since then. Since 1912, we have nearly doubled the currency. We have added between eighty and ninety crores of rupees to the note issue, and we have added more than 125 crores in silver and something in gold. That is, instead of the currency being 225 crores, as it was in 1912, we have now somewhere about 420 or 430 crores, and the quantity of the goods that have to be handled by this currency has not substantially risen during this period. The net result therefore is, that we have put into the hands of the people a nominal purchasing power nearly twice as great as they had prior to the war, and there has been an enormous increase in prices, partly due to the world rise in prices, but partly due to the abnormal expansion in the currency of the country. And we know, my Lord, that this irregular distribution of the currency among the people of the country has led especially the poorer classes to suffer enormously under the increase in prices which has been partly the effect of this enormous increase in the currency of the country. It has been said that India has been swallowing up silver greedily and something must be done to prevent it. I quite appreciate the truth of the remark that India has to learn to get on with a cheap currency, and that a metallic currency is extremely expensive and ruinous to the country. I know that, and we shall all have to learn the lesson and preach that lesson to the people. But at the same time, my Lord, I submit that there is no use in trying to interfere rashly with the natural habits of the people, in trying to thwart the natural laws of supply and demand, and trying to meet a problem of that kind by means of currency laws. We find that the quinquennial average of the imports of gold and silver into India prior to the war was about 36 crores of rupees, in value 28.86 crores worth of gold and 7.2 crores worth of silver. The net exports of merchandise during this period, at any rate in point of value, has not been smaller than the net exports during the previous period. One would naturally expect, therefore—the normal laws of supply and demand being met—that there would be an importation of private treasure to approximately the same extent as prior to the war, that is about 180 crores of rupees worth of gold and silver, but we had, for the sake of England and the Allies, to stop all private imports of gold and silver, and the total we have, both on Government account as well as private account, allowed to be imported into India after 1918-19 is 97 crores. Is there any wonder then that the people knew how to circumvent the laws of the country and have utilised the currency partly to meet the needs which were formerly met by the supplies of gold and silver? I have not the slightest doubt that part of this at least went to meet the demands which were met previously by imports. Hence, it is you have the spectacle of 120 crores of rupees coined during the last few years suddenly disappearing from the currency, except to the extent of 12 crores now in the currency chest. Therefore, my Lord, the lesson we have to learn, I think, is that our past methods have only ended in depredating the currency because we know full well that there is a heavy rate of discount on rupee paper, and there is a vast margin between bullion in gold and the sovereign itself. A sovereign in the market will fetch 19 rupees and a rupee note will not fetch more than 14 annas. The net result is the gold standard has been knocked on the head, the silver parity has been to the same extent displaced, and we have a currency which has depreciated considerably on account of this unfortunate war.

“Therefore, my Lord, I submit the Government should have, if possible, tried to prevent the addition to the currency of another 14 crores. This additional note issue is not backed up by gold and silver, but is for the purpose of meeting the treasury bills in England to the extent of $6\frac{1}{2}$ crores of rupees and 6 crores of rupees treasury bills in India. That is they have gone to create new credits and swell artificially the credit in the banks which the Government holds in India. What the consequences have been in England of the Government's borrowing have been lucidly set out in the recent report on currency which was published last year. The Currency Commissioners have recommended to His Majesty's Government the rejection of the theories which seem to obtain favour in India at the present moment, namely, that it is possible to reduce to 30 or 35 per cent. the metal backing of the currency notes of the country. They have asked the Government in England to go back to the principle of the Bank Charter Act of 1844 and to rule that no note issue should be allowed which has not one pound of gold to back up one pound of note in circulation.

“I hope, my Lord, that that lesson will be learnt in India, and it is because I feel that that particular principle has been violated by the Government in asking for power to coin 14 crores of rupee notes without any backing of gold and silver, that I think it is necessary to raise a protest against that policy.

“In England, the Commissioners have recommended that all the extra notes which are not backed up by gold in England should be gradually withdrawn. We should have started with that experiment here soon after the

[Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma ; Sir James Meston.]

[1ST MARCH, 1919.]

Armistice was signed. The Government of India are not undertaking any additional purchases on behalf of England or the Allies for the purposes of the war in India. I know the Government had no money to meet these purchases, and consequently they were obliged to manufacture money artificially for the purpose of meeting this expenditure. That contingency has happily passed away, and I hope, therefore, that the precedent set will not be utilised any further for meeting current demands of another description, however emergent those demands may for the time being appear. I had hoped to have heard from the Hon'ble the Finance Member in greater detail as to why this 14 crores were necessary to be utilised in the purchase of Treasury Bills in India and in England without any backing either in gold or silver. I hope to be able to hear a further statement before long so as to enable us to see whether there was any justification for this further coinage. We find that the issue of notes has been going on merrily, and that although 149.73 crores was the coinage of notes in circulation on the 31st of January, we have increased it within twenty days to the extent of 95 lakhs ; it is at present 150.68 crores. It is because I felt that there was a necessity to draw the attention of the Government to the feeling in the country that the currency policy has been largely responsible for the enormous rise in prices, and that something should be done both in that as well as in other directions to reduce prices and enable the people to meet their necessities with a smaller currency, that I have ventured to take up the time of the Council."

12-13 P.M.

The Hon'ble Sir James Meston :—" My Lord, I have listened with considerable respect to the essay which the Hon'ble Member has just read to us on the subject of our financial heresies. He says in effect that he is going to allow us to have this Bill if we do not do it again. I cordially agree with him in the hope that we shall not require to do it again. I would only draw the Hon'ble Member's attention to the fact that, although currency undoubtedly is a factor in the question of prices, we in India are very largely dependent on the currency of the whole world, on the prices of the whole world, and the rise in prices in India has very largely been effected by considerations to which we are altogether strangers. I would also point out that currency after all is only the vehicle or the handmaid of business and commerce, and although I fully realise that our currency has of recent years been drifting on to a very artificial basis, still I would point out that we have not sinned in this respect nearly so greatly as most of the other countries of the world.

" The Hon'ble Member has asked for justification of this 14 crores ; I think he will find it very fully given in the Financial Statement."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble Sir James Meston :—" My Lord, I beg to introduce the Bill, and move that the Bill, together with the Statement of Objects and Reasons relating thereto, be published in the Gazette of India in English."

The motion was put and agreed to.

MOTOR SPIRIT (DUTIES) AMENDMENT BILL.

12-14 P.M.

The Hon'ble Sir James Meston :—" My Lord, in February 1917 this Council agreed to an excise and a customs duty of six annas a gallon on motor spirit. The proposal was defended at the time as being purely a war measure, and so it was then. But it has brought in a very soothing addition to our revenues. It brought in 25 lakhs last year, and we hope it will bring in 35 lakhs this year. In these hard-up days we cannot afford to sacrifice large sums like that, especially as I have not heard that this duty has done harm to any one, either manufacturer or private individual. We propose, therefore, to continue these duties for the present.

[1st MARCH, 1919.] [*Sir James Meston ; Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma ;
Sir William Vincent.*]

The existing Act keeps them in force only for the period of the war and for six months thereafter ; and what this Bill does is to remove that limitation and to allow the law to run on until we reach a financial position, which would justify us in abrogating it. I beg to move, my Lord, for leave to introduce the Bill to extend the operation of the Motor Spirit (Duties) Act, 1917."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble Sir James Meston :—" My Lord, I beg to introduce the Bill, and move that the Bill, together with the Statement of Objects and Reasons relating thereto, be published in the Gazette of India in English."

The motion was put and agreed to.

INDIAN INCOME-TAX (AMENDMENT) BILL.

The Hon'ble Sir James Meston :—" My Lord, this is the third 12-15 P.M. and the last of the small fiscal measures which have to be presented to-day to the Council in order to give effect to the Budget proposals. This measure proposes to raise the minimum taxable income from Rs. 1,000 to Rs. 2,000. I do not think it requires very much defending, as it seems to most of us a simple act of humanity. There is no class that has been so badly hit by the enormous rise in the cost of living as people on small fixed incomes. The rich people can look after themselves, and the very poor have a good labour market and rising wages. But the small employé, the small trader, the small shop-keeper, is very hard hit indeed by the increase in prices that has been taking place in this country and everywhere else. Our grant to this class, if this measure is passed, will amount to probably close on 70 lakhs, or nearly half a million sterling. But for that expenditure there are two great counterbalancing advantages. One is that it relieves from payment 237,000 assesses out of the total number of our assesses which is only 380,000. It seems incredible but there it is, nearly two-thirds of our number of assesses fall into the lowest grade. The second advantage is, that we get rid of the summary procedure of assessment under Chapter III of the Act, which is exclusively for assesses of this class. I trust that this measure of relief to the petty tax-payer will meet with the sympathy of the Council.

" My Lord, I beg to move for leave to introduce a Bill to amend the Indian Income-tax Act, 1918."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble Sir James Meston :—" My Lord, I beg to introduce the Bill, and move that the Bill, together with the Statement of Objects and Reasons relating thereto, be published in the Gazette of India in English."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma :—" It is proper, my Lord, that, on behalf of the middle class of this country, the Government should be thanked for its generous act of justice and mercy."

The motion was put and agreed to.

INDIAN CRIMINAL LAW (AMENDMENT) BILL.

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent :—" My Lord, I move that 12-18 P.M.
the date for the presentation of the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to provide for the amendment of the Indian Penal Code and the Code of Criminal Procedure 1898, be extended from the 6th March, 1919, to the 10th March, 1919. "

[Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda ; Sir William Vincent.] [1ST MARCH, 1919.]

12-19 P.M.

The Hon'ble Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda :—" My Lord, may I move an amendment to the Hon'ble the Home Member's motion? I could not give notice of this before because we only received notice of the motion last night. I would therefore request your Excellency to suspend rule 29 of the Rules for Legislative Business, which requires three days' notice to be given of any amendment.

" My amendment is that in place of ' the 10th March, ' the ' 6th of September ' be substituted, or six months from now. My Lord, I do not wish to detain the Council with a speech. This matter was threshed out on the last occasion. There is no urgency about it. This Bill, as the Statement of Objects and Reasons shows, is the result of the Rowlatt Committee's Report. The Committee say :

' In the first place we think that a permanent enactment on the lines of Rule 25A under the Defence of India Act is required ; ' and this substantive enactment is sought to be made by the Bill.

" Now, my Lord, those Rules under the Defence of India Act are in force and will continue to be in force for some time yet. Nobody can tell when peace is going to be signed, and for six months after peace has been signed the Defence of India Act will remain in operation. That being so, there is no urgency and the matter can very well be adjourned to the September Session. One result of that would be to allay the strong feeling, which has unfortunately been created in the country by the introduction of this measure. I submit that the matter ought to be postponed, and I hope the Council will agree to this."

12-20 P.M.

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent.—" My Lord, this is really the same motion that was discussed in this Council on the first debate on this Bill, and I am afraid that I cannot accept the proposal now made by the Hon'ble Member. What I have suggested then and what I think is really more suitable, is that any question of re-publication should be considered when the Report of the Select Committee is received."

The amendment was put and negatived.

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Council adjourned to Friday, the 7th March 1919, at 11 A.M.

Delhi, the 19th December 1918.

PRESS COMMUNIQUE.

In order to bring the rates of postage for Inland letters of heavier weight into harmony with the recently revised parcel rates, the Government of India have decided that it is necessary to increase the charge on letters carried by post in excess of $2\frac{1}{2}$ tolas in weight. The rates of postage for Inland letters exceeding one tola will, with effect from the 1st January 1919, be as follows :—

PRESENT RATES.

Exceeding 1 tola but not exceeding 10 tolas	.	.	.	One anna.
Every additional 10 tolas	.	.	.	One anna.

REVISED RATES.

Exceeding 1 tola but not exceeding $2\frac{1}{2}$ tolas	.	.	.	One anna

PRESS COMMUNIQUE.

The increasing pressure of the telegraph service due to expansion in traffic and the inability of the Department to meet this expansion owing to shortage in material and staff have led the Government of India to decide that, as a further means of relieving the pressure on the Department, the tariff for ordinary inland private telegrams should be increased from 8 annas for a telegram of 12 words or less, with half an anna for every additional word, to a uniform rate of one anna a word with a minimum of 12 annas, and that the rate for express telegrams should be raised from Re. 1 for 12 words or less, with two annas for every additional word to a uniform rate of 2 annas a word with a minimum of Rs. 1-8-0.

It has also been decided to follow the example of the United Kingdom and the British Dependencies and increase the Indian letter postage rate to these destinations from one anna per ounce to $1\frac{1}{2}$ annas for the first ounce and one anna for each additional ounce or fraction of an ounce. This is in accordance with the policy that there should be reciprocal postage rates between countries belonging to the International Postal Union which are in direct communication with one another.

The alteration in the rates will take effect from 1st September 1918.

PRESS COMMUNIQUE.

The restrictions on the Railway service and other causes arising out of the war have thrown a continually increasing burden on the Postal Service, and it is more and more difficult to deal with the present number of parcels in the parcels offices or to find room for them in the mail vans. The necessary result has been delays and some loss of efficiency in the service, while the cost of transmission, especially to places off the line of rail, has increased. In order to relieve the pressure on the Parcels Service, the Government of India have found it necessary to raise the rates on parcels, with effect from November 1st, 1918, as under :—

PRESENT RATES.

| (1) Parcels not exceeding 440 tolas | 2 annas for every 40 tolas or fraction thereof. |

APPENDIX B.

[Referred to in Answer to Question No. 17.]

The available information regarding additions to the note circulation of countries having important trade relations with India is given below :—

- (i) England.—On 1st July 1914, the active circulation of Bank of England notes was £29,784,000. On 4th December 1918, it had increased to £67,047,775, and, in addition, the active circulation of notes issued under the Currency and Bank Notes Act, 1914, was £300,179,085. Thus the total increase in the note circulation in this period was £337,442,860. The "Committee on Currency and Foreign Exchanges after the War" estimated the decrease since the beginning of the War in the amount of gold coin held by Banks (excluding gold held in the Issue Department of the Bank of England), and in public circulation to be £83,000,000 in July 1918. The total increase of currency, therefore, up to the beginning of December was, in round figures, £250,000,000, exclusive of small token coins for which figures are not available.
- (ii) Japan.—In 1914, the note circulation of the Bank of Japan was about £40,000,000. On 19th October 1918, it had increased to £82,357,000.
- (iii) United States.—Federal Reserve Bank notes in circulation increased from £98,320,000 on 15th July 1917 to £518,736,000 on 1st December 1918. The figures for 1914 are not available.
- (iv) France.—The note circulation of the Bank of France increased from £240,000,000 on 2nd July 1914 to £1,149,308,000 on 5th December 1918. In addition, the French Departmental Chamber of Commerce have been issuing paper money of the value of 50 centimes and 1 franc, which are legal tender in the department which issues them, but no figures regarding the amount of such issues are available.
- (v) Italy.—On 31st July 1914, the note circulation of the three banks of issue was £90,600,000. On 30th September 1918, the note circulation of the Bank of Italy was £342,183,000, but the amount of the circulation of the other two banks of issue is not known. State notes have also been issued in considerable quantities in small denominations, but no information is available regarding the amount issued.
- (vi) Russia.—The note circulation increased from £163,000,000 on the 14th July 1914 to £1,836,200,000 on 29th October 1917. Later figures are not available.

2. No information is available regarding the increase of metallic currency. In all countries, however, coins except small token coins have been very largely withdrawn from circulation, and although the issues of small coin have been abnormal, the increase is negligible in comparison with the enormous increase in the note circulation.

[Referred to in Answer to Question No. 25.]

PRESS COMMUNIQUE.

Dated 14th December, 1918.

The Railway Board have seen recently some letters in the newspapers and have themselves received some communications on the subject of restoring various travelling concessions which had to be suspended in consequence of the abnormal conditions caused by the war. They think it desirable, therefore, to draw attention to the fact that the railway position is not immediately changed by the cessation of hostilities. No relief by the restoration of shipping has yet been given and it is doubtful when it will be obtained, so that railways must continue to carry the very heavy coal traffic which used to go by sea; large military requirements including those of demobilisation have still to be met, and the equipment of railways, far from improving immediately, will continue to deteriorate until new engines and rolling stock are received. The Board are most anxious to remove restrictions and difficulties of travel and they will take the earliest opportunity of doing so but at the moment they fear it is impossible to increase the passenger services to a more normal standard or restore concessions.

Everything possible is being done to accelerate the supply of fresh equipment. In May last the Secretary of State was placed in possession of the detailed demands of Indian Railways for the first 12 months after the war. It is satisfactory to know that he has succeeded in placing orders for all these demands, and there is every reason to believe that there will be no delay in the supply.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

DEPARTMENT OF REVENUE AND AGRICULTURE.

Rainfall summary for the seven days ending at 8 hrs. on Thursday, the 6th March 1919, based on the Indian Daily Weather Reports of the period.

1. A disturbance from the west entered northwest India on the 27th February and disappeared in Assam on the 3rd; during its advance across northern India widespread rain fell in Assam and Bengal, with nearly general rain or snow in Kashmir, the Kumaon hills, and the hills of the North-West Frontier Province and of the Punjab. During the rest of the week rainfall occurred mainly in Assam.

2. Burma.—Weather was dry except for light falls at Bhamo and Myitkyina.

North-east India, including Orissa.—Rainfall was nearly general in Assam on the 2nd, and there were local falls in Chota Nagpur on the 1st and in Bengal on the 2nd.

The United Provinces, Central India and the Central Provinces.—There was nearly general rain in the Kumaon hills with local falls in the adjacent plains on the 1st.

North-west India.—Nearly general snow or rain fell in Kashmir on the 28th and 1st, in the hills of the Punjab on the 1st, and in the hill districts of the North-West Frontier Province on the 27th and 28th.

The Peninsula.—Cochin is the only station that reported rain.

3. The chief amounts of rainfall reported were as follows:—

February 27th. Balasore 0·79", Parachinar 1·30" and Drosh 0·34".

" 28th. Murree 1·85", Rawalpindi 0·36", Sonamarg 2·12", Skardu 0·48", Parachinar 0·65" and Drosh 0·66".

March 1st. Mukteswar 0·40", Mussooree 0·74", Dehra Dun 0·41", Simla 0·72", Murree 1·20", Srinagar 0·64", Sonamarg 1·24" and Dras 1·65".

" 2nd. Dhubri 0·75", Calcutta 0·51", Mymensingh 0·87", Bogra 0·42" and Chaibasa 0·90".

" 3rd. Cherrapunji 0·61", Darjiling 0·69" and Narayanganj 0·46".

" 4th. Sibsagar 3·98".

4. The week's rainfall was 20 per cent or more in excess in Assam, Chota Nagpur and Kashmir; and was 20 per cent or more in defect in the Bay Islands, Burma, Bihar, the United Provinces, the Punjab, the North-West Frontier Province, Baluchistan, Sind, Rajputana East, Central India East, Berar, the Central Provinces, Hyderabad, Mysore and the Madras Coast North. It was normal in Bengal, Orissa and Malabar. No rain usually falls at this time of year in Rajputana West, Gujarat, Central India West, the Konkan, the Bombay Deccan, Madras Southeast and the Madras Deccan.

The rainfall from the 29th November to date is 20 per cent or more in defect in the Bay Islands, Upper Burma, Assam, Bengal and Sind; and is 20 per cent or more in excess in Lower Burma, Bihar and Orissa, the United Provinces, Gujarat, Central India, Berar, the Central Provinces, the Konkan, the Bombay Deccan, Hyderabad, Mysore, Malabar and the Madras Coast North. It is within 20 per cent in the remaining divisions.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

DEPARTMENT OF REVENUE AND AGRICULTURE.

Season and Crop Prospects for the week ending Saturday, 1st March 1919.

Burma.—Light showers fell in eleven districts and the Shan States. Plucking of tobacco is progressing in Lower Burma. In Upper Burma harvesting of wheat, beans, gram and miscellaneous crops is proceeding. Standing crops are good. Cattle are generally healthy. The price of unhusked rice in Rangoon has risen slightly to Rs. 125 per hundred baskets and is above normal. The market for white rice is steady at Rs. 307-8 per hundred baskets for specials.

Assam.—The weather was seasonable. Rain is badly wanted in five districts for agricultural operations and growth of crops. Harvesting of mustard is nearing completion. Pressing of sugarcane, pruning of tea, and ploughing for autumn rice and jute continue. Outturns and prospects of crops are generally indifferent. Cattle disease is reported from one district. The price of common rice is stationary. Fodder is insufficient in Surma Valley.

Bengal.—Light rain fell in some places. Ploughing of fields and harvesting of spring crops continue. Sowing of jute and autumn paddy has commenced in Eastern Bengal districts. Prospects of standing crops are generally reported unfavourable. The average price of common rice is rising by about 0.28 per cent. Distress prevails in Bankura and in Brahmanbaria sub-division of Tippera. In Bankura agricultural loans are being distributed and gratuitous relief is being given to 1,305 persons. Number of persons attending test works in Bankura and Tipperah amounts to 2,005 and 449 respectively.

Bihar and Orissa.—Light rain was general over Orissa and Chota Nagpur and scattered in Bihar. Harvesting of oilseeds and preparation of lands for the next season's crops continue. Standing crops are doing well. The daily average number of persons attending test works was 702 in Angul and 16 in Ranchi. Gratuitous relief was given to 3,663 persons in Angul. The price of common rice has risen in three districts, fallen in three and remained stationary in the remaining districts as compared with that of the preceding week. Cattle disease is reported from eleven districts.

United Provinces.—Rainfall was light and scattered. Slight damage by hail is reported from parts of Saharanpur, Rai Bareilly, Fyzabad and Fatehpur districts. Preparation of land for and sowing of extra crops and sugarcane continue. Harvesting of peas and mustard is in progress. Irrigation of spring crops and poppy continues. Sugarcane is being pressed. Standing crops are in good condition. Prospects are favourable. Condition of agricultural stock is fair but some cattle disease is prevalent in few districts. Fodder continues to be scarce in some districts. Government hay is being steadily supplied. Market supplies are on the whole sufficient. Prices are mostly stationary, but there is a downward tendency in some districts.

The weekly report on scarcity is as follows:—Light to moderate rain fell in all affected districts except Etawah. Some damage by hailstorm is reported from some villages of Hamirpur district. Preparation of land for sugarcane and extra crops continues. Harvesting of peas and arhar has begun in Benares while that of spring crops continues in Jalaun, Jhansi and Hamirpur. Standing crops are doing well. Condition of agricultural stock is satisfactory but some cattle disease prevails in Bundelkhand district and affected tracts of Etawah. Fodder continues to be scarce but Government hay is being steadily imported and sold. Water is generally sufficient. Market supplies are reported to be deficient in some villages of affected tracts of Etawah. Distress here is reported to be increasing. Advances for importation of grain and subsistence takavi continue to be made in Garhwal. Prices are high but stationary. Price basis in Garhwal is 4, Etawah and Benares 6½, elsewhere 8 seers per rupee. No wandering or emaciation is noticeable. Influenza is gradually disappearing from Garhwal. No epidemic is reported and public health is generally good. Decrease of numbers on relief in most districts is apparently due to harvesting operations. Physical condition of people on relief is fair. Private charity is being organised and clothing is being distributed in Banda which again reports some increase in petty crime against property. Number on works:—Etawah 3,275, Jalaun 115, Jhansi 118, Hamirpur 913, Banda 4,965, Fatehpur 688, Allahabad 137, Agra figures not available. Number on aided works:—Etawah 390. Number on private works or relieved by private charity:—Etawah 433, Jalaun 9. Number in poor houses:—Jalaun 16, Jhansi 9, Hamirpur 68, Banda 71. Number of persons gratuitously relieved :—Garhwal 828, Etawah 2,768, Benares 1,612, Jalaun 867, Jhansi 447, Hamirpur 3,697, Banda 6,981. A test work has been closed in Jhansi. Numbers relieved on works in Banda last week were 6,198 and not 218 as reported.

Punjab.—Except for light showers in parts of a few districts the weather remained dry. Rain is wanted for unirrigated crops. Condition and prospects of wheat and other standing crops are average to good on irrigated and below average to average on unirrigated areas. Sowings of extra spring crops continue and are below normal to normal. Germination is good. Sugarcane is being pressed in a few districts. The yield is generally below normal. Cattle are generally healthy but dry fodder is scarce in most districts. Green fodder is available and is generally sufficient. Prices are generally stationary but have fallen slightly in some districts. They are above scarcity rates. Prices of wheat :—Lahore $5\frac{1}{2}$, Ferozepore and Rawalpindi $5\frac{1}{2}$, Ambala $6\frac{1}{2}$ and Lyallpur $6\frac{1}{2}$ seers per rupee.

North-West Frontier Province.—Slight rain fell during the week in Peshawar and Bannu districts. Rain is badly wanted in Dera Ismail Khan. Condition of standing crops both on irrigated and unirrigated lands is average in Peshawar and Bannu and below normal in Dera Ismail Khan. Extra spring crops are being sown in parts of Peshawar district. Prices of wheat :—Peshawar $7\frac{3}{8}$ and Dera Ismail Khan $6\frac{1}{8}$ seers per rupee.

Jammu.—Rain was slight. Prices are stationary. Fodder is sufficient.

Kashmir.—The week was generally cloudy and cold. Prices are normal. Fodder is sufficient.

Rajputana.—The weather was clear and is getting hot in places. Condition of spring crops on irrigated land is fair. Water is sufficient. Fodder is scarce. Condition of cattle is poor in affected areas. Foot and mouth disease is reported in three States. Prices are stationary. Number gratuitously relieved :—Todgarh 102. Number on famine works, Karauli 926.

Central India.—Rainfall was partial in Baghelkhand and Bundelkhand and was followed by slight hail in Samthar, Bijawar, Sailana and Gaurihar. Spring crops are being irrigated and harvested. Sugarcane is being pressed in Gwalior and irrigated in Malwa. Threshing and winnowing of autumn crops in Malwa has been completed. Land is being prepared for autumn crops in Indore. Standing crops and probable outturn are fair except in parts of Gwalior, Malwa and the Southern States. Crops have been damaged in Jaora. Agricultural stock is bad in parts of Gwalior and fair elsewhere except for cattle disease in parts of Bhopal, Bundelkhand and the Southern States. Scarcity of fodder prevails in Gwalior, Indore, Bundelkhand and in parts of Malwa and the Southern States. Prices are high but stationary. Opium is fair in Indore and Malwa and in flower in Gwalior.

*Report on scarcity is as follows :—*Distress is increasing though it is not acute. Poorer classes and smaller cultivators are mostly affected. There is no wandering or emaciation. Relief measures are adequate. Suspensions of land revenue have been granted and takavi advanced for subsistence, deepening wells, buying fodder and improving land. Public health is good. There is no epidemic. Prices are stationary, ranging from $6\frac{1}{2}$ to 9 seers per rupee. Numbers on relief in thousands :—works 7.8, gratuitous 2.7, total 10.5.

Central Provinces.—The weather continues to be clear and occasionally cloudy. Nights and mornings are still cool but days are hot. Wardha, Jubbulpore and Bilaspur received light showers. In parts of Jubbulpore and a few places in Hatta tahsil of Damoh district rain was accompanied by light hail which caused some damage. Condition of spring crops is generally fair to good. Harvesting of spring crops is in full swing. Fodder is dear or scarce in parts of Hoshangabad and Berar. Agricultural stock is in good condition. Cattle disease prevails in a sporadic form in parts of five districts. Relief measures continue in parts of Damoh, Jubbulpore, Betul and Chanda. Wheat and rice in Akola rose by slightly over 1 to $2\frac{1}{2}$ seers per rupee. There is no variation in other markets but the tendency is for prices, except of rice which is scarce everywhere, to drop slightly in the north of the provinces while in the south they are steadily rising still.

The weekly report on scarcity has not been received.

Feudatory States.—Light rain fell in the States. Standing crops are generally in good condition and reaping continues.

Bombay.—Standing crops are fair to good. Cotton picking is nearing completion. Fodder supply is generally insufficient but supplies continue to be moved to worst affected areas under Government arrangements. Agricultural stock is generally sufficient but cattle are deteriorating except in Konkan. Irrigation is generally deficient. Prices of food grains are high but generally steady.

*The weekly report on scarcity is as follows :—*Very slight rain fell during the week in parts of Sholapur and Belgaum. Relief works continue in Ahmednagar, Poona, Panch Mahals, and public works programme is being extended in most districts to meet demand for labour. Test works are in progress in Panch Mahals, Kaira, Broach, Poona and Palitana State in Kathiawar Agency. Numbers of persons on relief works including dependants on last day of week ending 1st March were :—works, Panch Mahals 8,302, Ahmednagar 15,800, Poona 11,639, total 35,741. Numbers on gratuitous relief including village servants :—Panch Mahals 5,158, Kaira 7,075, Broach 2,471, Kathiawar 1,743, West Khandesh 585, Ahmednagar 9,350, Poona 4,923, Satara 2,951, Bijapur 3,531, Belgaum 1,970, total 39,757; Native States in Kathiawar Agency :—Palitana 244, Limbdi 150, total 394. Numbers on test works were :—Panch Mahals 118, Kaira 521, Broach 732, Poona 949, total 2,320. Number in Palitana State 12. People on relief works are in good condition. No increase in mortality is reported. Medical arrangements are sufficient. Crime is normal. Numbers on works are increasing. There is little wandering or emaciation except in Panch Mahals where few cases of emaciation are reported. Emigration continues from parts of Panch Mahals, Sholapur and Satara. Public health is good. Liberal suspensions of land revenue have been granted and takavi is being freely advanced for fodder and agricultural improvements. Cheap grain shops continue working in Panch Mahals, Kaira, Broach, West Khandesh and Kathiawar. Poor house in Thana for destitute immigrants into Bombay City continues working; the number of inmates is 442. Cattle camps have been organised in some districts. Private charitable relief is being distributed in several districts. Fodder and water are scarce. Fodder is being supplied to affected areas under Government arrangements. Prickly pear fodder is being utilised in some districts. Presidency famine relief fund is affording assistance in supply of fodder and other forms of relief.

Hyderabad.—Slight and isolated showers fell during the week, the average being two cents. Spring harvest continues. The crop is fair to good except in Aurangabad, Bir and Warangal districts. Late rice crop is fair and is being weeded. Fodder is scarce in some districts. Prices of grains continue to be abnormally high. Juar is selling at three seers per rupee in the Gulbarga district.

Mysore.—The week was rainless. Standing crops are in fair condition. Harvested ragi, rice and sugarcane outturn is poor to fair. Cattle are generally healthy except in parts. Water and fodder are available. Prices are high and rising. Prospects of season are fair.

Coorg.—The week was rainless. Picking of coffee and threshing of rice continue. Water and fodder for cattle are sufficient. Cattle disease prevails in parts. Prices of food grains are high. Public health is fair.

Madras.—Rainfall was light in Ganjam, Godavari and Tinnevely and nil elsewhere. Standing crops are fair generally but have been damaged or are withering in limited areas in Ganjam, Anantapur and parts of Carnatic central and south. Cholam has been affected by disease in small areas in Kurnool. Harvests of paddy, sugarcane and dry crops are limited with outturn sometimes fair but poor in parts of fifteen districts. Late sowings of paddy and dry crops are proceeding under wells and tanks to a small extent. Condition of cattle is good generally. Water is insufficient except in Ganjam, Kistna, Nellore, Chingleput, West Coast and the hills. Pasture is sufficient except in parts of thirteen districts. Fodder is insufficient in parts of six districts. Prices are generally stationary but some dry grains are rising. Prospects are fair generally but bad in parts of Ganjam, Bellary, Chittoor, North Arcot and Salem. In Gumsur and the Udayagiri Agency, Ganjam, average attendance on test and relief works is under contemplation.

NOTICE.

The 11th November 1918.

On and after 23rd November and until further notice, Parts I, IV, V and VI of the Gazette of India and the Weather and Crop Report will be published in Delhi. Parts II and III will continue to be published in Calcutta. All notifications and other matter intended for publication in those Parts should be addressed to the Publisher at Delhi and Calcutta, respectively.

Attention is invited to the following Circular Memorandum of the Government of India, Home Department, of August 1901:—

"It has been brought to the notice of this Department that matter for the Gazette of India is sometimes sent to the Press late on Friday evenings for publication in the next day's Gazette and that this involves considerable inconvenience to the Press and expense to Government. In the Circular Memorandum of this Department, No. 777-79, dated 9th February 1870, the Government of India directed that all notifications or other matter intended for insertion in the Gazette of India should be delivered at the Press not later than 2 p.m. on Friday, and that any papers sent thereafter must be certified to be extremely urgent in order to ensure their appearance in the next day's Gazette. The undersigned is directed to request that these orders may be more strictly observed in future, and that Departments will refrain from sending to the Press as extremely urgent any papers which can without harm or inconvenience be held over for the next Gazette."

J. P. HEWETT,

Secretary to the Government of India."

NOTICES.

THE PATENT OFFICE, 1, COUNCIL HOUSE STREET, CALCUTTA.

Public room, open 11 a.m. to 4 p.m.; Saturdays, 11 a.m. to 1 p.m.

1. All communications relating to applications for patents and for registration of designs under the Indian Patents and Designs Act (II of 1911), or in continuation of applications under the Inventions and Designs Act (V of 1888) must be made in English and addressed to the Controller of Patents and Designs, 1, Council House Street, Calcutta. Documents sent by post should be carefully packed and a full address given in all communications.

2. Directions for the guidance of inventors and others are given in the Patent Office Handbook (price one rupee) which contains the Indian Patents and Designs Act, 1911, the Indian Patents and Designs Rules, 1912, the Indian Patents and Designs (Temporary Rules) Act, 1915, the Indian Patents and Designs (Temporary) Rules, 1915, together with current regulations and instructions. These should be consulted before an application is made to the Controller.

3. Advice. The Patent Office cannot undertake (1) to give opinions on the interpretation of Patent Law, or on the advisability of protecting inventions and designs or on their infringement; (2) to make searches in respect of information available in the public room; (3) to recommend any particular agent; or (4) to assist in the disposal of inventions. Models are not required unless specially asked for. Drawings must be on tracing cloth and the Rules and Instructions for the preparation of drawings as given in the Handbook should be strictly followed. A provisional patent cannot be secured under the Indian Patents and Designs Act, 1911.

4. Applicants are warned that the Indian Patents and Designs Act, 1911, is in force in British India only, and patents granted under it do not extend to the United Kingdom or any of the British possessions. The International Convention for the Protection of Industrial Property does not include India. For information regarding patents in countries other than India application should be made to the patent offices in the countries concerned.

5. Fees are payable in cash and must be received in the Patent Office within the time allowed by the Acts. When cheques are offered in payment of fees, it must be clearly understood that the office cannot hold itself responsible for any delay that may occur in the collection of cash on the cheques; any cheque not payable in Calcutta is subject to commission for which due allowance should be made. In cases where it is not possible to have the fees handed in at the Patent Office, it is preferable to send them by money-order or postal order payable at Calcutta to the Controller of Patents and Designs, and to advise him that they have been so sent. Stamps will not be received in payment of fees.

6. Trade and property marks and names are not registered and medicines are not patented under the Indian Patents and Designs Act. There is no provision of Law in British India for their registration. Neither does this Act deal with pictures, photographs, etc., for which copyright is obtainable under the Indian Copyright Act, 1914.

7. Printed Specifications of applications, which have been accepted, are published within about three weeks after acceptance has been notified in the Gazette of India. These specifications can be purchased at the Patent Office at a uniform price of 8 annas per copy; and may be seen free of charge, together with other publications of the Patent Office, at the following places:—

PREFATORY NOTE.

Prices of Country Produce and Salt in India at the middle of February 1919.

The wholesale prices of food grains and pulses in India at the middle of February, 1919, increased by 63 per cent (unweighted average), as compared with this time last year. The weighted average showed a rise of 69 per cent. The average price of rice advanced by 61 per cent. In the great rice-producing provinces, the increase was 67 per cent in Bengal, 88 per cent in Bihar and Orissa, 40 per cent in the Madras Presidency, and 43 per cent in Burma. Among the minor provinces, the rise of 86 per cent in the North-West Frontier Province, 81 per cent in the Central Provinces and Berar, 72 per cent in Assam, 69 per cent in the Punjab, and 63 per cent in the United Provinces is noticeable. The price of wheat increased by 38 per cent, the Punjab showing a rise of 41 per cent, the United Provinces 34 per cent, the Central Provinces and Berar 48 per cent, and the Bombay Presidency 55 per cent. Barley prices rose 44 per cent (unweighted average) in India. The increase by using the weighted average was 63 per cent. The chief increases were: 75 per cent in the United Provinces, 61 per cent in Delhi, and 60 per cent each in Bihar and Orissa and the Bombay Presidency. The price of jawar advanced by 73 per cent. The increase of 165 per cent in Bihar and Orissa, 104 per cent in the Central Provinces and Berar, and 85 per cent in the United Provinces is striking. Bajra showed a rise of 94 per cent in India; the increase being 120 per cent in the North-West Frontier Province, 110 per cent in the Bombay Presidency, 106 per cent in the United Provinces, and 100 per cent in Delhi. The price of maize increased by 58 per cent (unweighted average). The weighted average showed a rise of 93 per cent. There was an increase of 137 per cent in Bihar and Orissa and of 108 per cent in the United Provinces. Gram showed a rise of 57 per cent in India, the percentage increases being in Bihar and Orissa 95, in the United Provinces 92, in Bengal 85, and in the Madras Presidency 75. The average price of arhar dāl advanced by 81 per cent, the noteworthy rise being 152 per cent in the Central Provinces and Berar, 145 per cent in Delhi, 116 per cent in the United Provinces, 104 per cent in the Bombay Presidency, and 100 per cent each in Bengal and Bihar and Orissa. The prices of ghi and raw sugar (gur) rose by 29 per cent and 42 per cent respectively. There was an increase of 59 per cent in ghi in the Bombay Presidency and of 87 per cent and 80 per cent in gur in Delhi and the North-West Frontier Province respectively. The average price of salt in India declined by 11 per cent, although in the Punjab and in the North-West Frontier Province it rose by 38 per cent and 23 per cent respectively. There was, on the other hand, a decrease in all other provinces, mainly of 47 per cent in Delhi, 34 per cent in the United Provinces, 29 per cent in Assam and 22 per cent each in Bengal and Bihar and Orissa.

2. Compared with the fortnight ago, the prices of cereals and pulses in India at the middle of February, 1919, increased by 3 per cent. The prices of rice and wheat showed no fluctuation, but arhar dāl advanced by 6 per cent, bajra by 5 per cent, barley and maize by 4 per cent each, gram by 3 per cent, and jawar by 2 per cent. Price of ghi increased by 1 per cent but that of gur by 10 per cent. The price of salt recorded no change.

* The figures under "Rice, husked" represent the prices of common rice.

NOTE.—These statistics are compiled from the fortnightly returns furnished by District Officers to the Local Governments and Administrations, etc. They relate to the wholesale prices in the principal markets (not necessarily district headquarters) in each Province on the last (or nearest next) day of each fortnight.

† Figures have not so far been reported.

(The figures state prices in rupees per ten maunds)

FOREIGN SEA-BORNE TRADE.

RETURN, with a prefatory note, showing the IMPORTS and EXPORTS OF MERCHANDISE (i.e., EXCLUSIVE of TREASURE and GOVERNMENT STORES) by SEA from and to the PRINCIPAL COUNTRIES in the NINE MONTHS APRIL to DECEMBER, 1918, AS COMPARED with the CORRESPONDING PERIOD of the PREVIOUS YEAR

PREFATORY NOTE.

The returns of Indian imports and exports, including re-exports of merchandise, (exclusive of treasure and Government stores), by sea during the nine months, April to December, 1918, show a trade balance (excluding treasure) in favour of India of nearly R59 crores or about 1 per cent above that of the corresponding period of the previous year. In the nine months, April to December, 1917, the balance in favour of India was nearly R57 crores.

India's Balance of Trade in the nine months, April to December, 1916, 1917, and 1918, was as follows :—

	Nine months, April to December.
	1916 R (Lakhs)	1917 R (Lakhs)	1918 R (Lakhs)
Exports of merchandise, including re-exports (private)	1,76,21	1,67,52 (a)	1,81,69 (a)
Imports „	1,12,38	1,10,96	1,22,96
Excess of Exports over Imports	63,86	56,56	58,73
Net Imports of Treasure (private)	—	—	—
Council Bills and Telegraphic transfers paid in India	32,83	12,16	30,91
Sterling Bills on London sold in India	4,84
Enfaced Rupee paper (net imports)	21.1	65.3	6.7
Interest on Enfaced Rupee paper	26.3	24.8	22.9
Balance of Trade	—	—	—

As the publication of the treasure figures has been temporarily discontinued, it is not possible to give here the net (private) exports from April to December, nor the net balance of trade in the same period. It may be of interest to note that the net (private) exports, including treasure, are higher than those of 1917, and also than those of 1916. The balance of trade, so far as shown by the statistics of merchandise, treasure, Council Bills, and Enfaced Rupee paper, in the nine months ended December, 1918, was in favour of India, while in the corresponding period of 1917 it was against India. In 1916, the balance was in favour of India.

The total exports of Indian merchandise in the nine months ended December, 1918, amounted to nearly R173 crores, of which over R96 crores went to ports within the British Empire and about R77 crores to ports outside the Empire. The United Kingdom took 28 per cent of the exports, followed by the United States 14 per cent, Japan 10 per cent, and Italy and France 3 per cent each. Egypt took nearly 9 per cent, but a considerable portion of the shipments to Egypt was transit trade, the exports being consigned to Port Said "for orders." During the same period there were imported into India goods of the value of R123 crores. Of this amount—R72 crores were sent from ports within the Empire, R57 crores alone coming from British ports. The principal exporter to India, apart from the United Kingdom (R57 crores or 47 per cent), was Japan, which exported goods to the value of over R25 crores (21 per cent). It is interesting to note that the balance of trade in merchandise with Japan showed, in the nine months ending December 1918, a net excess of imports over exports of R7 crores as against an excess of exports over imports of R11 crores in the corresponding period of 1917. The increase in the imports from Japan was chiefly in cotton yarn and piecegoods while there was a considerable decrease in the exports of raw cotton to that country. The United States were the third largest exporter (8 per cent), and Java the fourth (6 per cent).

The following figures showing India's trade with the British Empire and Allies, and Neutral countries during the nine months (April to December) of the years 1916, 1917, and 1918, are interesting :—

DEPARTMENT OF STATISTICS, INDIA ;

March 11, 1919.

G. FINDLAY SHIRAS,

Director of Statistics.

DEPARTMENT OF STATISTICS, INDIA

CALCUTTA, MARCH 11, 1919

Second Forecast of WINTER OILSEEDS (Rape, Mustard and Linseed), 1918-19.

THIS forecast is based upon reports received from provinces where rape, mustard, and linseed are grown to any considerable extent. These provinces contain 98·6 per cent of the total area under rape and mustard and 98·9 per cent of the total linseed area of British India. Of the Indian States, estimates are furnished only by Hyderabad and the States in the Bombay Presidency (including Baroda), no other State framing any estimate. The condition of the crops stated below generally relates to that prevailing in the latter half of February.

Scanty winter rains have affected the crops in almost all the provinces and their present condition and prospects are generally below average. The irrigated crops in the Punjab and the United Provinces, and the rape and mustard crops in the North-West Frontier Province, are reported to be generally good.

I

The total area under rape and mustard, so far as reported, amounts to 2,939,000 acres (excluding the "mixed" crop of the United Provinces, for which no estimate is at present available). This is 994,000 acres or 25 per cent below the revised figure at the corresponding date last year. The detailed figures for the provinces are :—

The provincial reports are summarised below :—

Rape and Mustard

United Provinces (39·7 per cent of the total area under rape and mustard in British India)—The total area sown with the unmixed crop was estimated in the first forecast, issued in December last, at 120,000 acres, which is 25 per cent below the area reported at the corresponding date of last year. This figure holds good in the present report. No estimate of the area under the mixed crop* is at present available. Some showers were received in the first week of December, but they were too light to benefit the crops. General and well distributed rainfall towards the end of January did much good to the crops. The eastern districts received sufficient rain in February. In irrigated tracts a normal outturn is anticipated, but the crops suffered from drought in unirrigated tracts in the earlier part of the season, and although the condition has since improved, the outturn is expected to be below normal.

Bengal (20·5 per cent of the total area under rape and mustard in British India)—The area sown is reported to be 1,125,000 acres, which is 2 per cent below the area reported at the corresponding date last year. There was a general deficiency of soil-moisture at sowing time. The continued absence of rain in the months of October to December was thus badly felt in most districts. The January rainfall, although beneficial, came too late to ensure a normal outturn. The average outturn is at present estimated at 67 per cent of the normal, as against 83 per cent estimated at this date last year.

Punjab (16 per cent of the total area under rape and mustard in British India)—The area sown is reported to be 595,000 acres (of which 343,000 acres are irrigated) as against 1,006,000 acres at this date last year, or a decrease of 41 per cent. Of the above area 287,000 acres (all irrigated except 13,000 acres) are reported to be under torii (an early variety of rapeseed). Very little rain fell in the first three weeks of January. Moderate to heavy rain received towards the end of January, except in parts of the south-east and west, where the fall was light, greatly improved the standing crops. The yield of torii, which has been nearly all harvested, is below normal to normal. The condition of other oilseeds is average to good on the irrigated, and generally below average on the unirrigated area.

(a) Revised figure

* The area under rape and mustard sown interspersed with other crops, such as gram, barley, etc., is given in the final forecast, published in June.

Bihar and Orissa (11.5 per cent of the total area under rape and mustard in British India).—The area sown is estimated at 675,000 acres, which is 18 per cent below the area reported at this date last year. The decrease is attributed to the failure of late rains. In December light and insufficient showers fell in the Orissa and Chota Nagpur divisions and in parts of Shahabad, Monghyr, and Bhagalpur. In January the rainfall was general and above normal all over the province, but it was too late to be of any good to the early rapeseed crop. The season was decidedly unfavourable for the spring oilseed crops, owing to drought in the early part of the season. According to district reports the yield is estimated at 63 per cent of the normal, as against 90 per cent last year, but the Provincial Director of Agriculture is of opinion that, allowing for some improvement of late crops owing to the January rainfall, the actual outturn will not probably fall short of 70 per cent of the normal.

Assam (4.8 per cent of the total area under rape and mustard in British India).—The total area is now estimated at 269,000 acres, which is 2 per cent above last year's area. The weather continued dry since the issue of the preliminary forecast, and the growth of the crop was much affected. The average outturn per acre is estimated at 76 per cent of the normal, the same as last year, on account of want of rain, and the total yield is accordingly estimated at 46,000 tons, or 2 per cent more than that of last year.

Bombay and Sind (4.2 per cent of the total area under rape and mustard in British India).—The total area reported is 103,000 acres (17,000 acres being in the Indian States), which is 72 per cent below the area reported at the corresponding date last year. The decrease is attributed to low inundation and the absence of rain. In Sind the crop is reported to be doing well in Nawabshah, Upper Sind Frontier, and the Khairpur State, but poor in Sukkur and Larkana, and fair elsewhere. In Baroda and some of the other Gujarat States the crop is in fair condition.

North-West Frontier Province (1.9 per cent of the total area under rape and mustard in British India).—The area sown is reported to be 47,000 acres, (10,400 acres only being irrigated) which is 70 per cent below the area reported at the corresponding date last year. The decrease is chiefly due to drought. The recent rains in January were late for further sowings, but they have benefited the crop to some extent, and the condition is now generally average in all the districts except Dera Ismail Khan, where it is reported to be below normal.

Hyderabad reports 5,000 acres under mustard, as against 8,000 acres at this date last year. The outturn is estimated at 285 tons.

Linseed

Central Provinces and Berar (37.1 per cent of the total area under linseed in British India).—The area placed under linseed is reported to be 599,000 acres, which is nearly 50 per cent below the area at this date last year. The large shrinkage in area is mainly due to the unfavourable conditions at sowing time. Continued drought, absence of winter showers, and hail in February have caused considerable damage to the crop. Prospects are poorest in Chanda, Wardha, and Nagpur, being 15, 8 and 5 per cent of the normal, respectively. Only Damoh, Jabulpore, and Mandla report a normal crop, but in the remaining districts the estimates range from 21 per cent in Nimar to 75 per cent in Seoni. For both the Central Provinces and Berar together, the outturn is estimated at 41 per cent of the normal.

United Provinces (28.9 per cent of the total area under linseed in British India).—The area under the unnixed crop was estimated in the first forecast to be 210,000 acres, which is 40 per cent below the area reported at the corresponding date of last year. The figure remains unchanged. No estimate of the area under linseed grown in combination with other crops is available at present.* The season and condition of the linseed crop are as described under "rape and mustard."

Bihar and Orissa (21.1 per cent of the total area under linseed in British India).—The total area sown is reported to be 580,000 acres, which is 21 per cent below the area reported at this date last year. Sowings were curtailed in most districts for want of sufficient moisture in the soil and the failure of the late rain. The season was decidedly unfavourable owing to drought in the early part of the season. According to the estimates of the District Officers the average outturn is estimated at 66 per cent of the normal, as against 98 per cent last year. The Provincial Director of Agriculture is inclined to raise this estimate to 70 per cent of the normal owing to some improvement of late crop due to the rain received in January.

Bengal (5.8 per cent of the total area under linseed in British India).—The total area sown is reported to be 140,000 acres, which is 3 per cent below the area at this date last year. The season is described above under "rape and mustard." The average outturn is estimated at 56 per cent of the normal, as against 69 per cent estimated at this date last year.

Bombay (4.8 per cent of the total area under linseed in British India).—The total area sown is reported to be 64,000 acres (7,000 acres being in the Indian States), which is 53 per cent below the area reported at this date last year. Owing to unfavourable season cultivation was largely restricted in the Deccan. The crop is fair in East Khandesh and Satara; elsewhere its condition is unsatisfactory, except in places where it was helped by irrigation. In the Karnatak the crop is doing fair in Dharwar and in parts of Bijapur, but elsewhere the condition is poor for want of moisture.

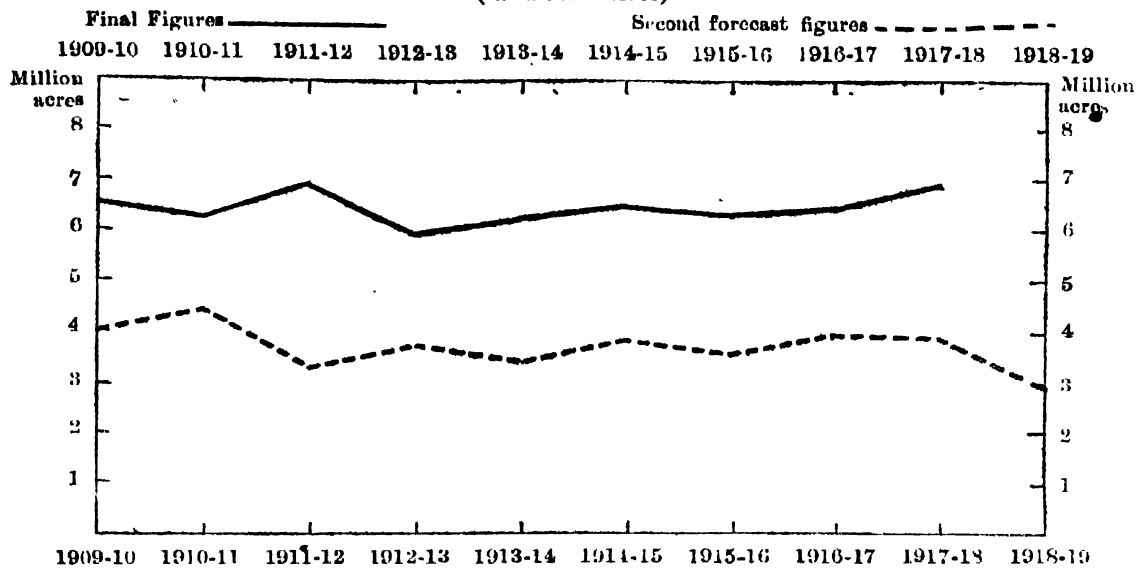

Punjab (1.2 per cent of the total area under linseed in British India).—The area sown is reported to be 32,000 acres, as against 34,000 acres estimated at this date last year; this is short of last year's actual area by 19 per cent. The condition of the crop is reported to be average to good on the irrigated, and generally below average on the unirrigated area.

Hyderabad reports 216,000 acres under linseed as compared with 341,000 acres last year, showing a decrease of 37 per cent. The outturn is estimated at 21,000 tons, as against 19,000 tons last year.

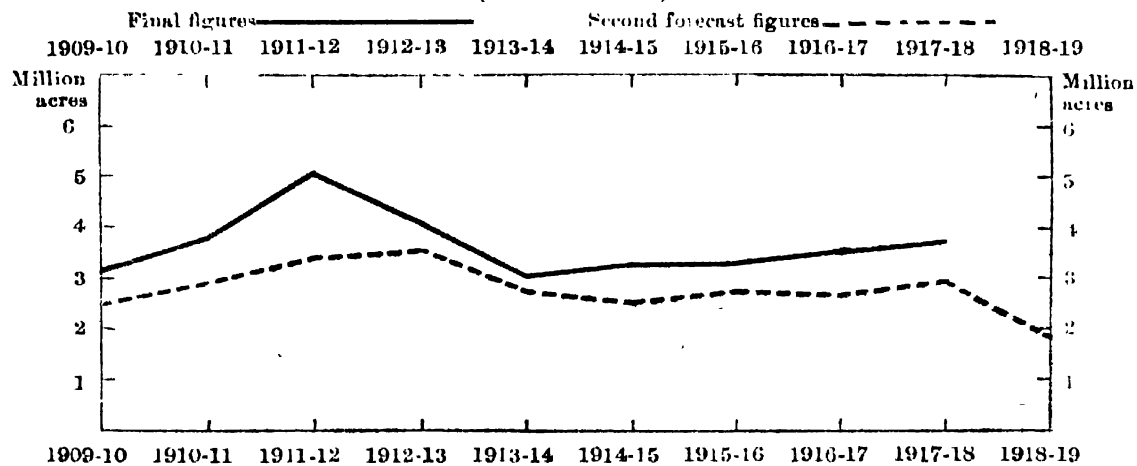

Charts.—The two charts below show (1) the second estimates of acreage, and (2) the final figures, for all the reporting provinces in respect of each crop.

* The area under linseed sown interspersed with other crops, such as gram, barley, etc., is given in the final forecast, published in June.

AREA OF RAPE AND MUSTARD (In million acres)

AREA OF LINSEED (In million acres)

Oilseeds Crops in Foreign Countries.—From the latest information published by the International Institute of Agriculture, Rome, it appears that the estimates of the linseed crop of 1918 in the United States of America are 1,937,000 acres and 366,000 tons, as compared with 1,808,000 acres and 211,000 tons in the preceding year. The estimates for the Canadian crop of linseed are 1,068,000 acres and 192,000 tons, as against 918,000 acres and 148,000 tons in the previous year. The estimate of the area under linseed in the Argentine in 1918-19 is 3,309,000 acres, as against 3,232,000 acres in 1917-18. From unofficial sources it appears that the present linseed crop in the Argentine will amount to about 705,000 tons.

LONDON GAZETTE.

No. 586.—The following extracts are published for general information :—

London Gazette, dated the 27th December 1918, page 15135.

CENTRAL CHANCERY OF THE ORDERS OF KNIGHTHOOD.

27th December, 1918.

The KING has been graciously pleased to institute a Military Division of the Most Excellent Order of the British Empire to date from the creation of the Order, i.e., the 4th June, 1917.

The following classes of persons will be eligible for appointment to the Military Division of the Order :—

All commissioned, warrant and subordinate Officers subject to the Naval Discipline Act or employed under the Orders of the Admiralty, and all commissioned and warrant officers recommended by any Commander-in-Chief in the field or elsewhere, or by the General Officer Commanding, Independent Force, Royal Air Force, or employed under the War Office or Air Ministry, or under the Administrative Headquarters of Dominions or Overseas Forces, or employed under the Ministry of Munitions or the Ministry of National Service on work which, but for the creation of those Departments, would have been performed by the War Office; and all members of the Naval, Army, Dominions, or Overseas Nursing Services, or officials of the Women's Royal Naval Service, Queen Mary's Army Auxiliary Corps, or the Women's Royal Air Force, and such commandants of the Women's Legion or similar organisations as are under contract with or employed by the Admiralty, War Office or Air Ministry.

Persons already appointed to the Order who are qualified for the Military Division will, on the recommendation of the First Lord of the Admiralty, the Secretary of State for War or the Secretary of State for the Royal Air Force, as the case may be, be transferred to the Military Division.

The Insignia for both Military and Civil Divisions will be the same, but the ribbon of the Military Division will be distinguished by a vertical red stripe in the centre of the existing ribbon.

Supplement, dated the 1st February 1919, to the London Gazette of the 31st January 1919, pages 1599, 1605, 1607, 1608, 1638, 1642, 1651, 1653, 1670, 1677, 1681, 1699 and 1703.

*War Office,
 1st February, 1919.*

His Majesty the KING has been graciously pleased to approve of the following awards to the undermentioned officers and warrant officers in recognition of their gallantry and devotion to duty in the field:—

* * * *

Awarded the Distinguished Service Order.

* * * *

Lt. Robert Lysle Warren Herrick, I.A.R.O., attd. 29th Lrs, I.A.

(EGYPT.)

For conspicuous gallantry, on 21st August, 1918, in the vicinity of Wadi Nimrin, east of Ghoraniyeh bridgehead defences, in charge of a patrol of six. Observing two enemy behind a bush, who opened fire, he went forward to reconnoitre and saw an enemy party of about twenty. Detaching the N.C.O. and one man to work round the flank, he charged with his remaining four men, in face of heavy fire, and captured the lot. He then took his prisoners safely back over two miles of open country, under heavy machine-gun and shell fire. He showed fine courage and leadership.

* * * *

Maj. (A./Lt.-Col.) George William Guy Lindesay, ret. I.A., attd. R. S. Fus.

(SALONIKA.)

For conspicuous gallantry and fearless leadership of his battalion on 19th September, 1918. Though badly wounded he established his headquarters in the Tongue, and continued to command his battalion which had consolidated itself in this position. By his cheerful bearing under intense machine-gun fire and bombardment he encouraged his battalion to hold on to the position for many hours, though both flanks were exposed to enfilade fire.

* * * * *

Capt. Guy Massy McCleverty, M.C., 1/2nd Gurkha Rif., I.A.

(MESOPOTAMIA.) •

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty at Resht, Persia, on 20th July, 1918. He was in command of a relief party sent to extricate a force besieged in a building. He displayed great courage and initiative, and it was mainly due to his resource and daring leadership that the relief was successfully accomplished. His work throughout the operations was of a very high order.

* * * * *

Awarded the Military Cross.

* * * * *

Lt. (A./Capt.) James Wilson Herbert Benson, I.A.R.O., attd. 1/101st Grenadiers, I.A.

(EGYPT.)

For conspicuous gallantry on night of the 12th-13th August, 1918, in an attack at the west end of Ghurabeh Ridge. Though the enemy wire was under cross fire from two machine guns, he led his men straight through and effected the capture of the machine guns by getting in between them. He then charged the remainder of the garrison, himself killing three; the remaining 18 were captured. He displayed fine courage and leadership.

* * * * *

Lt. George Weston Clements, I.A.R.O., attd. 1/101st Grenadiers, I.A.

(EGYPT.)

For conspicuous gallantry and dashing leadership on night of 12th-13th August, 1918, at the west end of Ghurabeh Ridge, when a company was held up by wire. He led a small party of men under heavy cross fire right on to the wire, which he cut and crossed. He then charged and captured the enemy machine gun which was firing down the wire, and killed two of the enemy with his revolver.

* * * * *

Lt. (A./Capt.) Knightley Holler Coxe, I.A.R.O., attd. 1/2nd Gurkha Rif.

(MESOPOTAMIA.)

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty near Stahmd Bridge, Persia, on 29th June, 1918. He organised and executed a brilliantly successful attack on an enemy position, inflicting heavy losses on the enemy at very slight cost to his own force. He displayed marked ability and initiative, coolly meeting every contingency that arose with marked courage and skill.

* * * * *

2nd Lt. William Court Johnston, I.A.R.O., attd. 72nd Punjabis, I.A.

(EGYPT.)

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in a raid on enemy sangars near El Kefr on 6th August, 1918. The assaulting party which he commanded came under heavy enemy barrage when within a hundred yards of their objective. Though hit in five places, he continued to command, but finding it impossible (more than half his men being casualties) to get through the barrage, he gave orders for withdrawal. He was again wounded and had his leg broken. He showed the greatest pluck and endurance.

* * * * *

Capt. Bertram Heylyn Matheson, 54th Sikhs, I.A.

(EGYPT.)

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during the attack on El Burj, 12th-13th August, 1918. He commanded the right company, and the capture of this objective was of great importance. At a critical moment, when half his leading platoon were casualties at the enemy wire, he with great courage and determination rallied the remainder and rushed the work, his party bayonetting the machine-gunners as they were firing down the wire.

* * * * *

Lt. John Bell Nelson, 125th Napier's Rifles, I.A.

(EGYPT.)

For conspicuous gallantry during a raid on enemy trenches north of Arsuf on 9th August, 1918. He by his initiative and good leadership was chiefly responsible for the success of the raid. His frequent reconnaissance of the trenches and ground at great personal risk contributed greatly to the success of the operation.

* * * * *

Capt. (A./Maj.) Edmund de Warrenne Waller, 72nd Punjabis, attd. 53rd Sikhs, I.A.
(EGYPT.)

For conspicuous gallantry and good leadership near Tabsor during a raid on enemy trenches 27th-28th July, 1918. He commanded the raiding party, and inspired his men throughout by his courage and example. He personally led the charge on the last strong point, in which all the prisoners were captured, killing one enemy with his revolver.

* * * * *

2nd Lt. Charles Winton, I.A.R.O., attd. 1st Q.V.O. Corps of Guides Infy., I.A.
(EGYPT.)

For conspicuous gallantry and good leadership north of Arsuf on 13th July, 1918. He was in command of a daylight raid on two enemy strong points, and it was mainly due to his coolness and leadership that the whole affair was carried out so successfully. He personally killed two enemy with the bayonet.

PART V.

Bills introduced in the Indian Legislative Council, Reports of Select Committees presented to the Council and Bills published under Rule 23.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

The following Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to provide for the amendment of the Indian Penal Code and the Code of Criminal Procedure was presented to the Indian Legislative Council on the 8th March, 1919 :—

We, the undersigned, Members of the Select Committee to which the Bill to provide for the amendment of the Indian Penal Code and the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, was referred, have considered the Bill and have now the honour to submit this our Report, with the Bill as amended by us annexed thereto.

2. At the outset of our deliberations the Hon'ble Mr. Patel announced his intention of not signing any Report which the Committee might make and withdrew from the proceedings. The Hon'ble Pandit M. M. Malaviya and the Hon'ble Mr. Khaparde, who attended the first meeting of the Committee, absented themselves on the second day.

3. The detailed amendments which we have made in the Bill are referred to in the following remarks.

4. Clause 2 of the Bill, as referred to us, purported to introduce a new section 124-B into the Indian Penal Code. It was based on rule 25-A of the Defence of India Consolidation Rules, 1915. Though this rule has been in force since the 25th September, 1916, we understand that it has rarely been put into operation; and, taking into consideration the apprehensions of non-official Members, we are of opinion that the clause might be omitted without seriously damaging the efficacy of the Bill. We have, therefore, deleted it and as consequential amendments have omitted clause 7 and the Schedule to the Bill, and have renumbered clauses 3 to 6.

5. We have not amended clause 3 of the Bill, which now becomes clause 2. It was suggested that the preliminary inquiry to be provided for by the new section 196-B of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, should be carried out by the Magistrate himself or by a Police-officer not below the rank of a Deputy Superintendent. We think that any such modification of the proposed section would unduly restrict the power which it confers, and we have therefore made no alteration.

6. Clause 4 (now clause 3).—We have substituted the words “properly and reasonably incidental” for the words “properly incidental” in the proposed addition to section 343 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898. We think this amendment explains itself. We think also that an incidental promise should not be excepted from the operation of section 343 of the Code, unless it has been disclosed to the presiding Judge or Magistrate before the accused person is put into the witness-box. At the same time, it would obviously in many cases destroy the value of the protection promised if the nature of the promise were made public, and we have therefore provided that the Court shall not disclose any of the terms of the promise to the defence unless, in its opinion, it is necessary to do so in the interests of justice.

7. Clause 5 (now clause 4).—We think it should be made clear that evidence of a previous conviction or of association with a person who has been convicted of an offence against the State should only be relevant for the purpose of proving criminal intention, and we have made a small amendment to this effect. We have also made an amendment in clause (b) which attempts to give effect to the recommendation of the Rowlatt Committee that evidence of association “of an incriminating kind” only should be admissible. The proviso to the new section 510-A of the Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, required seven days’ notice before the commencement of the trial. In this respect, the Bill did not conform to the recommendation of the Rowlatt Committee, and we have substituted the words “before such evidence is tendered” for the words “before the commencement of the trial.”

8. Clause 6 (now clause 5).—We have altered the drafting of the last few lines of the proposed section 565-A (1), and we have omitted words at the end of clause (c) of sub-section (4) which, we think, was unnecessarily widely drawn.

9. We do not consider that the amendments which we have made in the Bill materially alter its provisions. At the same time, in view of the fact that the Bill purports to make permanent additions to, and permanent amendments in, the criminal law, and that these amendments are not a matter of great urgency, we think that the Bill as amended should be republished.

Minute of Dissent.

We recognise that with the deletion of the original clause 2 which made the possession of seditious documents, under certain circumstances, an offence under the Indian Penal Code, the more objectionable feature of the Bill has been removed. We also agree that the amendments made in Committee in the remaining clauses constitute an improvement on the original Bill. The acceptance of our proposal to republish the Bill as modified makes it unnecessary for us, at this stage, to recapitulate our objections, which still remain, regarding the principles underlying the Bill. Reserving to ourselves the right of urging these at the proper stage, we record our considered opinion that the preliminary inquiry contemplated in the present clause 2 should be held either by the Magistrate himself or, under his direction, by a police-officer not below the rank of a Deputy Superintendent. We are, further, of opinion that the enactment of the proposed section 565-A is unnecessary and recommend its deletion. In any case, persons convicted under section 124-A, Indian Penal Code, should be excluded from its scope. The opinion of the High Courts should be obtained on the Bill as now amended.

BILL No. 1 of 1919.

[AS AMENDED BY THE SELECT COMMITTEE.]

[Words printed in italics indicate the amendments suggested by the Select Committee.]

A Bill to provide for the amendment of the Indian Penal Code and the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend the Indian Penal Code and the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, in order to deal more effectively with certain acts dangerous to the State; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

1. This Act may be called the Indian Criminal Law (Amendment) Act, 1919.

2. After section 196-A of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, (herein-section 196-B in Act V of 1898. after referred to as the said Code), the following section shall be inserted, namely:—

"196-B. In the case of any offence referred to in section 196 or 196-A, Preliminary inquiry in certain cases. the District Magistrate or the Chief Presidency Magistrate may, notwithstanding anything contained in those sections or in any other part of this Code, order a preliminary inquiry by a police-officer not below the rank of an Inspector, in which case such police-officer shall have the powers referred to in section 155 (3)."

3. To section 343 of the said Code, the following Amendment of section 343, Act V of 1898. Explanation shall be added, namely:—

"Explanation.—A promise of protection to an accused person against criminal force or any promise properly and reasonably incidental to a promise of such protection, shall not be deemed to be the use of influence within the meaning of this section:

Provided that the presiding Judge or Magistrate has been informed of the terms of any such promise before the accused person is examined as a witness.

Where the presiding Judge or Magistrate has been so informed, he shall not disclose to the defence the terms of any such promise except to such extent as he may consider it necessary so to do in the interests of justice."

4. After section 510 of the said Code, the following section shall be inserted, namely:—

510-A. On the trial of an offence under Chapter VI of the Indian Penal Code, the following facts shall be relevant for the purpose of proving criminal intention, namely:—

- (a) that the person accused has previously been convicted of an offence under that Chapter, and
- (b) that such person has associated in such circumstances as afford reasonable grounds for believing that the association was for the purpose of committing an offence under that Chapter with any person who has been convicted of an offence under that Chapter:

Provided that such facts shall nevertheless not be proved under the provisions of this section, unless written notice of the intention to call evidence thereof has been served on the accused at least seven days before such evidence is tendered, together with reasonable particulars of the conviction or association intended to be proved."

5. After section 565 of the said Code, the following section shall be inserted, namely:—

"565-A. (1) When any person is convicted of an offence punishable under Chapter VI of the Indian Penal Code, the Court may, if it thinks fit, at the time of passing sentence on such person, order him, on his release after the expiration of such sentence, to execute a bond with sureties undertaking, for such period not exceeding two years as may be specified in the order, that he will not commit, or attempt or conspire to commit, or abet the commission of, any offence under the said Chapter. XLV of 1860.

(2) An order under sub-section (1) may also be made by an Appellate Court, or by the High Court when exercising its powers of revision.

(3) If the Court makes an order under sub-section (1), it shall further direct that, until the person who is the subject of the order furnishes the required security, such person shall notify to the Local Government or to such officer as the Local Government may by general or special order appoint in this behalf, his residence and any change of residence after release for the period for which security is required.

(4) Where any person is under an obligation to notify, in accordance with the provisions of sub-section (3), his residence and any change of residence after release, the Local Government may by order in writing direct that such person—

- (a) shall not enter, reside or remain in any area specified in the order,
- (b) shall reside or remain in any area in British India so specified, and
- (c) shall abstain from addressing public meetings for the furtherance or discussion of any subject likely to cause disturbance of the public tranquillity.

(5) Any person refusing or neglecting to comply with any direction under sub-section (3) or any order under sub-section (4), shall be punishable as if he had committed an offence under section 176 of the Indian Penal Code. XLV of 1860.

(6) If the conviction is set aside on appeal or otherwise, all orders made under the provisions of this section shall become void.

Explanation.—In this section the expression "public meeting" has the same meaning as is assigned to it by section 3 of the Prevention of Seditious Meetings Act, 1911.

The following Bill was introduced in the Indian Legislative Council on the 12th March, 1919 :—

No. 12 OF 1919.

A Bill to extend the operation of the Indian Defence Force Act, 1917.

WHEREAS it is expedient to extend the operation of the Indian Defence Force Act, 1917 ; It is III of 1917. hereby enacted as follows :—

1. This Act may be called the Indian Defence Force (Amendment) Act, 1919.
Short title.
2. In sub-section (3) of section 1 of the Indian Defence Force Act, 1917, III of 1917. Amendment of section
Act III of 1917. for the words " six months " the words " one year " shall be substituted.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

SECTION 1(3) of the Indian Defence Force Act, 1917 (III of 1917), prescribes that the Act "shall remain in force during the continuance of the present war and for a period of six months thereafter." The question of the constitution, organisation and training of the force which will be required to replace the Indian Defence Force under post-bellum conditions is under consideration, but, in view of the complexity of the subject, and the necessity for consulting fully all interests concerned, it is improbable that the new scheme can be brought into force before the period of operation of the Indian Defence Force Act expires. Meanwhile, it is considered necessary, during the period of demobilisation, that there should be a force in India which can be called up in the event of emergency without interfering with the process of demobilisation of the regular army. It is, therefore, proposed to extend the period of operation of the Indian Defence Force Act, 1917, by a further period of six months, thus making the Act operative for a period of twelve months after the war.

2. We have found the subject with which we have been directed to deal one of great complexity; as the papers show the opinions received have been voluminous. We have had the advantage of hearing the evidence of several gentlemen who attended our proceedings on two occasions. These were Sir Robert Aitken and Mr. Gillum of Bombay, Mr. Thomas Smith of Cawnpore, Mr. Grant-Govan of Delhi and Mr. Ram Chandrier of Madras, and we desire to take this opportunity of expressing our obligations to these gentlemen for the valuable assistance they have given us. We have had to deal with a considerable volume of criticism, which to a large extent has been of a destructive character. In so far as the criticisms were directed against the main principles of the Bill, we considered that it was outside our province to deal with them. The main objects which we have kept in view will appear from the following paragraphs of our Report.

3. It has been urged with regard to almost every operative clause of the Bill that it would in practice work inequitably. On the other hand, we have realised that every extra refinement introduced into the Bill with the object of removing these inequalities must necessarily tend to complicate the duties of the assessing authorities, and we recognise that the Bill, as amended by us, adds considerably to the already very large responsibilities of these authorities. We think, however, that an equitable incidence is one of the first essentials of taxation. The main object of the numerous amendments, which we have made, has been to reduce the number of hard cases to a minimum.

4. The details of these amendments will be dealt with in connection with the clauses in which they have been embodied. Generally speaking, we have attempted to achieve our object by introducing a system of options with regard to the profits of the accounting period, the selection of the standard period and the computation of the profits of the standard period. It will be seen that, in regard to the standard period, the options which we have proposed are very wide, and we feel that we have gone as far as possible in this direction. It is inevitable that a certain number of hard cases should remain, but we think that the machinery set up in clauses 7 to 9 of the Bill should adequately provide for these.

5. Before we detail the amendments which we have made, we may here refer to two matters in respect of which we are told that there has been considerable misunderstanding as to the intentions of the Bill. The first is the absence of a duration clause making it clear that the operation of the Bill is confined to one year. With regard to this it should be hardly necessary to mention that the definition of "accounting period" read with clause 4 must make it clear to the intelligent reader that the profits of one year, and one year only, are being taxed. The second is in reference to the periods adopted for the ascertainment of standard profits. With regard to this it is enough to say that under the provisions of Act II of 1886, which was the law in force during the standard periods, the profits assessed in any year were the profits of the preceding year; that is to say the profits assessed in 1914, as defined in clause 6, were not the profits of the year in which war broke out, but the profits of the year ending on the 31st of March, 1914, or an earlier date. The amendments, which we have made in the Bill, save in so far as they are mere matters of drafting, are dealt with in the following remarks.

6. Clause 5.—It was urged upon us that inasmuch as hostilities ceased half-way through the financial year beginning on the 1st of April, 1918, certain companies who closed their accounts before the end of the calendar year 1918 might possibly be severely handicapped in comparison with those whose accounting year corresponds with the financial year. To meet this difficulty we have adopted a suggestion of our colleague Mr. Ironside that businesses which have closed their accounts on any date previous to the 31st of March 1919, should have the option of carrying their accounts forward to the 31st of March 1919, and of calculating the profits of the accounting period as a proportion of the profits of the total period; that is to say, a business which closed its accounts on the 30th of June, 1918, might carry its accounts forward to the 31st of March 1919, and take the profits of the accounting period to be 12-21ths of the total profits of the period from the 1st of July 1917 to the 31st of March 1919. For reasons of drafting we were unable to embody this suggestion in the definition of "accounting period." The option is provided for in clause 5 of the Bill as amended. A question has been raised in several quarters as to whether a composition for income-tax agreed upon in respect of the accounting period should be taken as the basis of assessment for that period. We think that this should not be done and the explanation which we have added to clause 5 requires that, notwithstanding the existence of a composition, the profits of the accounting period shall be actually ascertained.

7. Clause 6.—It was suggested to us, however, to provide that where a composition was in force in respect of the period for which standard profits are to be ascertained that composition should, at the option of the business liable to pay the duty, be taken as a basis for determining the standard profits. We have provided for this in sub-clause (2) and its proviso. We have, however, gone much further than this. In the first place, we have provided that every business shall have the option of adopting the standard percentage whether the profits of the business have been assessed or not, and we have provided a power to prescribe by rule a percentage higher than 10 per cent. in certain cases. Finally, we have given a very wide choice as to the selection of the standard period. In the first place, the profits assessed in the years 1913 and 1914, that is to say, the profits of two pre-war years may be selected as the standard profits. This, we think, will meet the case of those businesses which actually deteriorated after the outbreak of the war. Secondly, if the profits have been assessed in the years 1913 and 1914 and in any two only of the years 1915, 1916 and 1917 the standard profits may be taken to be the average of the assessed profits in the four years. Finally, if the profits have been assessed in all five years the standard profits may be taken as the average of the assessed profits of the two pre-war years and any two of the first three years of the war which the assessee may select.

Clause 6 as originally drafted ignored any income arising in the standard period from interest on securities held by a business. We think this was an oversight, which we have provided for in our redraft.

8. Clause 7.—The Bill as introduced provided that where the capital of a business had increased or decreased during the accounting period, the profits of that period should be reduced or increased by ten per cent of the difference. In the first place, we think this arbitrary rate might work inequitably. Secondly, we anticipate that there would be some difficulty in interpreting sub-clause (3) of this clause as it stood, since the Bill gave no indication as to how the average amount of capital employed during any period was to be ascertained. We have therefore made considerable modifications in this clause, which we have entirely remodelled and have inserted in its proper place as a proviso to clause 6 (1) (b). We have now provided for an increase or decrease in the standard profits proportionate to the increase or decrease of the capital at the end of the accounting period, as compared with the average of the amounts of capital employed on the last days of the years selected by the assessee as the years for which standard profits are to be ascertained. We think that any increase of capital after the 31st of December, 1918, should not be taken into account, and we have made provision accordingly in sub-clause (4) of clause 6. The original clause 7 has thus entirely disappeared as a separate clause.

9. Clause 8 (now clause 7).—We have made it clear that depreciation of assets includes the cost of replacement. The additions which we have made in sub-clauses (e) and (f) of the Bill as amended are designed to meet possible hard cases. The scope of the application of sub-clause (g) (originally sub-clause (e)) has been considerably widened.

10. Clause 9 (now clause 8).—The Bill gave the Chief Revenue Authority discretion to refuse a reference to a Board of Referees. We have now provided that, at the option of the appellant, his case shall be either disposed of by the Chief Revenue Authority or referred to the Board. It was pointed out to us that the provisions for the constitution of the Board, requiring that one member should be a person having acquaintance with businesses of the nature of that in question, were unsatisfactory, as in the case of some businesses it might be difficult, if not impossible, to obtain a member with the necessary qualification. We have therefore modified this provision. We were much pressed by our non-official colleagues to provide for two non-official members. We have done this, and we have also provided that in special cases the Local Government shall have power to add a fourth member, in which case it shall appoint one of the members to be chairman with a casting vote.

11. We have, in this portion of the Bill, added a new clause which is, in our opinion, of considerable importance. It now appears as clause 9. We have provided a power in the Governor General in Council to appoint a Board of Special Referees to inquire into the circumstances of classes of businesses in respect of which any person has made out a prima facie case that the provisions of the Act would operate unfairly. We may illustrate this by reference to the businesses whose output and sales have been controlled during the war. The Board will, in these cases, always consist of four members, of whom two will be non-officials, and it will act merely in an advisory capacity, the final orders in the case emanating from the Government of India.

12. Clauses 10 to 12.—In deference to the views of our non-official colleagues we have relieved persons chargeable to excess profits duty of the obligation to give notice of the fact to the Collector within one month of the commencement of the Act. We have allowed assessee two months instead of one month to comply with the Collector's notice calling for returns.

13. Clauses 14 and 15.—We have amended clause 14 so as to give power to prescribe by rule the method of assessment in the case of a change of ownership in the accounting period. We think in this way the instructions to Collectors can be made more explicit than when included in the law itself. A corresponding addition has been made in the rule-making clause of the Bill. We have removed section 29 from the list of the provisions of the Income-tax Act, 1918, embodied by reference in this Bill by clause 15.

14. We have introduced two new clauses at the end of the Bill. The first provides that excess profits duty and super-tax shall not both be levied in respect of the same business; the greater tax alone will be levied. The last clause of the Bill makes any sum paid as excess profits duty an allowance for income-tax purposes when the final adjustment of the profits of the business is made.

15. We have made an amendment in the proviso to the third item of Schedule I to make it clear that the business of a whole-time officer or servant of a firm or company is exempt. The slight alterations made in Schedule II merely adopt the phraseology of the English law.

16. The extensive modifications which we have made in the Bill are almost entirely, in our opinion, in favour of the subject, and we therefore think that the Bill does not require re-publication. We recommend that it be passed as now amended.

Minute of Dissent.

1. We are of opinion that the Bill should contain provision for a refund by Government of any amount of duty which it may yield in excess of the amount of £6 millions net, which is required. This proposal may be unusual, but we think it is fair and reasonable on the following grounds. Firstly, the levying of an excess profits duty for one year only after hostilities have ceased is in itself an unusual measure. Secondly, the justification for this measure has been definitely stated to be the need of Government to raise a sum of £6 millions sterling for exceptional war expenditure. Thirdly, any estimate of the yield of the Duty must necessarily be very hypothetical and uncertain, and the estimate made by Government is generally believed to be considerably too low. Fourthly, the Honourable Finance Member has stated that the only reason for maintaining the percentage of 50 per cent. is his estimate that 50 per cent. will only yield the sum required; and that if his estimate had been larger, he would gladly have reduced the percentage. We think, therefore, that it is reasonable to ask that, if the actual yield of the Duty should prove to be in excess of his estimate, the percentage should be reduced by a proportionate refund of the excess to those who have paid the Duty.

2. We regret that this opportunity has not been taken to abolish the Supertax in so far as it applies to the income of firms and companies. The Supertax in the United Kingdom is a tax on individual incomes only and its partial extension to the incomes of firms and companies has been very generally criticised. The reason given for this extension was that an Excess Profits Duty was then considered impracticable, and that the extension of the Supertax was a device to take its place. Now that an Excess Profits Duty is to be imposed, the excuse is gone, and the proper course is to limit the Supertax to individual incomes. We do not consider that the fact that this would result in certain cases in a remission of taxation is a sufficient reason for rejecting a measure which would be at once just and popular, and we regret that the Report of the Select Committee does not include a recommendation that the Supertax Act should be amended on these lines.

BILL No. 25 OF 1918.

[As AMENDED BY THE SELECT COMMITTEE.]

[Words printed in italics indicate the amendments suggested by the Select Committee.]

A Bill to impose a duty on excess profits arising out of certain businesses.

WHEREAS it is expedient to impose a duty on excess profits arising out of certain businesses; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

1. (1) This Act may be called the Excess Profits Duty Act, 1918.

(2) It shall come into force on the 1st April, 1919.

2. In this Act, unless there is anything repugnant in the subject or context,—

“accounting period” means the twelve months ending on the 31st March, 1919, or if the accounts of the business have been made up within the said twelve months for the purposes of the Indian Income-tax Act, 1918, in respect of a year ending on any date other than the said 31st March, then the year ending on that other date;

“business” includes any trade, commerce or manufacture, or any adventure or concern in the nature of trade, commerce or manufacture;

“prescribed” means prescribed by rules made under this Act.

All expressions used or embodied by reference in this Act which are not hereinbefore defined shall have the same meaning as is attributed to them by the Indian Income-tax Act, 1918.

3. This Act shall apply to every business (other than the businesses specified in Schedule I) which is, during any part of the accounting period, either carried on in British India by any person or owned or carried on in any place in India by a person ordinarily resident in British India.

4. Subject to the provisions of this Act, there shall, in respect of any business to which this Act applies, be charged, levied and paid on the amount by which the profits in the accounting period exceed the standard profits, a duty (in this Act referred to as “excess profits duty”) of an amount equal to fifty per cent of that excess:

Provided that the amount of the said duty shall not exceed such sum as would reduce the profits in the accounting period below thirty thousand rupees.

5. The profits of a business in the accounting period shall, at the option of the person by whom the excess profits duty in respect of that business is payable be or be deemed to be,—

(a) the taxable income as finally ascertained for the purposes of the Indian Income-tax Act, 1918, or

(b) when the accounting period in respect of the business ends on any date other than the 31st March, 1919, and the accounts of the business are made up for an additional period ending on the said 31st March, a sum which bears the same proportion to the taxable income of the total period (such taxable income being ascertained as nearly as may be in accordance with the provisions of the said Act) as a period of one year bears to the total period.

Explanation.—The profits in the accounting period shall, notwithstanding any composition in force for the purposes of the said Act, be actually ascertained in accordance with the provisions of that Act.

6. (1) The standard profits of a business shall be as follows:—

(a) an amount calculated at the rate of 10 per cent. or at such rate not being less than 10 per cent. as may be prescribed, on the capital of the business as existing at the end of the accounting period, in which case the capital of the business shall, for the purposes of this Act, be ascertained in accordance with the provisions of Schedule II; or

(b) at the option of the person by whom excess profits duty in respect of the business is payable—

(i) if the profits of the business have been assessed in the years 1913 and 1914 for the purposes of the income-tax law then in force—the aggregate of half of the profits so assessed and half of the interest, if any, received in those years on securities forming part of the assets of the business; or

(ii) if the profits of the business have been assessed for the said purposes in the years 1913 and 1914, and in two only of the three years 1915, 1916 and 1917—the aggregate of one-fourth of the profits so assessed and one-fourth of the interest, if any, received in the same four years on securities forming part of the assets of the business; or

(iii) if the profits of the business have been assessed for the said purposes in all the five years 1913, 1914, 1915, 1916 and 1917—the aggregate of one-fourth of the profits assessed in the years 1913 and 1914 and in such two of the years 1915, 1916 and 1917 as may be selected by the said person, and one-fourth of the interest, if any, received in the same four years on securities forming part of the assets of the business:

Provided that if the average capital employed in the business in the years adopted for the purpose of determining the standard profits is less or more than the capital so employed at the end of the accounting period there shall be made to or from the standard profits an addition or a deduction, as the case may be, which shall bear to the standard profits the same proportion as such increase or decrease of capital bears to the average capital so employed in the years so adopted.

Explanation.—For the purpose of ascertaining the average capital employed, the capital employed in the business in any year shall be deemed to be the capital so employed at the end of that year :

Provided further that if the assessment in any of the said years was made in respect of a period of less than twelve months, that assessment shall, for the purpose of determining the standard profits, be proportionately increased.

(2) If a composition for income-tax was in force in any of the years 1913, 1914, 1915, 1916 and 1917, such composition shall be deemed for the purposes of sub-section 1(b) to have been the assessment and the profits shall be determined in accordance therewith :

Provided that the person by whom excess profits duty in respect of the business is payable shall, notwithstanding any such composition, be entitled to have an assessment of the profits of the business made for the purpose of ascertaining the standard profits, in the same way as the assessment would have been made if no such composition had been agreed upon.

(3) Each of the years referred to in sub-sections (1) and (2) shall be deemed to be the twelve months commencing with the 1st of April in the year mentioned.

(4) Notwithstanding anything contained in this section no increase of capital made after the 31st December, 1918, shall be taken into account in any case, and no such increase before that date shall be taken into account when it appears or to the extent to which it appears that the increase was made with intent to evade or has the effect of evading the payment of the excess profits duty.

7. On the application of any person chargeable with excess profits duty Power to Collector to make allowances for special circumstances. alleging that, owing to any of the following circumstances, namely :—

- (a) any change in the constitution of a partnership of which he is or was a member,
- (b) any postponement or suspension, as a consequence of the present war, of renewals or repairs,
- (c) any exceptional depreciation or obsolescence (including the cost of replacement during the accounting period) due to the present war of assets employed in the business,
- (d) the provision in connection with the requirements of the present war of plant or machinery which will not be required for the purposes of the business after the termination of the war,

- (e) the fact that the assets of the business consist to any material extent of shares in a company the business of which is itself chargeable to excess profits duty,
- (f) any liability of the profits of the business to excess profits duty in the United Kingdom, or
- (g) any special circumstances connected with the nature of the business or the period for which any profits are ascertained or determined, the provisions of this Act for the calculation of excess profits duty operate unfairly in his case, the Collector may make such allowances in calculating the amount of the duty as seem to him to be necessary to meet the special circumstances, provided that any such allowance shall not reduce the amount of duty payable under the provisions of the Act by more than twenty-five per cent. without the previous sanction of the Commissioner.

8. (1) If any person who has applied under section 7 is dissatisfied with the decision of the Collector Revenue-authority. on his application, he may appeal to the Chief Revenue-authority which shall, at the option of such person, either itself decide such appeal or refer it to a Board of Referees to be appointed by the Local Government. The Board shall hear and consider any appeal so referred and shall communicate their decision to the Chief Revenue-authority.

(2) The Chief Revenue-authority and the Board shall be entitled to take into account any of the circumstances specified in section 7, and to modify the decision of the Collector with reference thereto in such way and to such extent as they may consider just and equitable.

(3) Every Board of Referees appointed under this section shall consist of three or, in cases which the Local Government considers to be of difficulty or importance, of four persons. When the Board consists of four persons the Local Government shall appoint one of the members to be Chairman. In any case at least two members of the Board shall be persons not in the service of Government and having in the opinion of the Local Government adequate business experience.

(4) In case of a difference of opinion between the members of the Board, the opinion of the majority shall prevail. When the Board consists of four members and the members are equally divided in opinion, the Chairman shall have a second or casting vote.

(5) The decision of the Chief Revenue-authority on any appeal under this section, or of the Board where an appeal is referred to them shall notwithstanding any other provision of this Act be final, and shall be deemed to be the basis of assessment in the particular case.

9. (1) The Governor General in Council Power of Governor General in Council may, on the application of any person alleging to deal with hardship that owing to special circumstances to be stated in the application the provisions of this Act for the calculation of excess profits would operate unfairly in the case of any class of business in which such person is engaged, refer such application for the report of a Board of special Referees to be appointed in this behalf by the Governor General in Council.

(2) Every Board appointed under this section shall consist of four persons, of whom at least two shall be persons not in the service of Government. The Governor General in Council shall appoint one member to be Chairman.

(3) On receipt of the report of the Board the Governor General in Council shall consider the same and pass thereon such orders as he thinks fit. Any such order may vary the basis or method of assessment in respect of the class of business so reported on and any variations so made shall be deemed to be modifications of this Act in respect of the matters to which they relate, and this Act shall apply accordingly.

10. Every liquidator of a company which is being wound up at the commencement of this Act, or is wound up after the commencement of this Act, and which is chargeable to excess profits duty, shall before the 31st May 1919, or within two months of the commencement of the winding up, as the case may be, give notice of the fact to the Collector.

11. The Collector may, for the purposes of this Act, require any person whom he believes to be engaged in any business to which this Act applies, or to have been so engaged during the accounting period or in the year ending on the 31st March, 1912, or on the 31st March in any year thereafter, to furnish him within two months after service upon him of a notice to that effect with such particulars in connection with the business as the Collector may require.

12. If a person fails, without reasonable cause or excuse, to give to the Collector in due time any notice required by section 10 or to furnish any particulars referred to in section 11, he shall on conviction by a Magistrate be punishable with fine which may extend to thirty rupees for every day during which the default continues.

13. The amount of excess profits duty to be paid in respect of any business shall be assessed by the Collector, who may in any case where he thinks fit allow the duty to be paid in instalments of such amounts payable at such time as he may direct.

14. The duty may be assessed on any person for the time being owning or carrying on the business whether as agent for the owner or otherwise or, where the business has ceased during the accounting period, on the person who owned or so carried on the business immediately before the time at which the business ceased, and where there has been a change of ownership of the business during the accounting period, the Collector shall make the assessment in the prescribed manner.

15. The provisions of sections 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 26, 27, and of Chapters IV and V and of sections 42, 45, 46, 47 and 49 to 52 of the Indian Income-tax Act, 1918, shall apply, with such modifications, if any, as may be prescribed, as if the said provisions referred to excess profits duty instead of income-tax, and every officer or authority exercising powers under the said provisions may exercise the like powers under this Act in regard to excess profits duty as he or it exercises in regard to income-tax under the said Act:

Provided that references in the said provisions to the assessee shall be construed as references to a person by whom excess profits duty is payable.

16. Notwithstanding anything contained in the Indian Income-tax Act, 1918, or in any Act repealed thereby, all information contained in any statement or return made or furnished under the provisions of any of the said Acts, or obtained or collected for the purposes of any such Act may be used for the purposes of this Act.

17. (1) A person shall not for the purposes of avoiding payment of excess profits duty enter into any fictitious or artificial transaction or carry out any fictitious or artificial operation, and if he has entered into any such transaction or carried out any such operation before the commencement of this Act, shall inform the Collector of the nature of the transaction or operation.

Explanation.—For the purposes of this section an artificial transaction or operation includes every device of whatever nature adopted for the purposes of presenting the accounts of a business in a misleading form or manner with intent to evade or having the effect of evading any obligation imposed by this Act.

(2) If any person acts in contravention of, or fails, without reasonable cause or excuse, to comply with, the provisions of sub-section (1), he shall, on conviction by a Magistrate, be punishable with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees.

18. (1) The Governor General in Council may, by notification in the Gazette of India, make rules for carrying into effect the provisions of this Act.

(2) In particular and without prejudice to the generality of the foregoing power, such rules may provide for—

(a) the rate to be allowed in respect of any business or class of business for the purpose of section 6 (1) (a);

(b) the procedure to be followed by Boards of Referees appointed under this Act;

(c) the basis and method of assessment when there has been a change of ownership; and

(d) the adaptation to excess profits duty of any of the provisions of the Indian Income-tax Act, 1918, which are made applicable to that duty by section 15.

(3) All rules made under this section shall have effect as if enacted in this Act.

19. Where the profits of any business in the accounting period are chargeable to excess profits duty under the provisions of this Act and to super-

Income-tax Act, 1918, shall apply, with such modifications, if any, as may be prescribed, as if the said provisions referred to excess profits

VIII of 1917 tax under the provisions of the Super-tax Act, 1917, then—

- (1) if the amount chargeable as excess profits duty exceeds that chargeable as super-tax, excess profits duty shall alone be charged, and
- (2) if the amount chargeable as super-tax exceeds that chargeable as excess profits duty, super-tax shall alone be charged,

VIII of 1917. and the provisions of this Act and the Super-tax Act, 1917, shall be construed accordingly.

20. The amount of excess profits duty paid in respect of any business shall be allowed as a deduction at the adjustment made in the year ending on the 31st March, 1920, in respect of the profits of that business for the purposes of section 19 of the Income-tax Act, 1918:

VII of 1918.

Provided that if the amount of excess profits duty payable has not been ascertained at the time when the said adjustment is made, the amount by which the income-tax would have been reduced if effect had been given to the deduction shall be deducted from the amount payable for excess profits duty.
